MRS. MARTIN J. HEALY FIRM IN DEFIANCE OF GRAND JURY

Tammany Leader's Wife Flatly Refuses to Answer Questions in the Ewald Case—When Ordered by Justice McCook to Do So, Mrs. Healy Informed the Justice That She Had Refused to Answer "Because My Husband is Involved"—Mrs. Healy Has Been Given Until Monday to Reconsider Her Refusal

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Three admonitions from a court failed to swerve Mrs. Martin J. Healy from her refusal to answer questions put to her today before a special grand jury which has charged her husband, a Tammany district leader, with selling his influence to obtain George F. Ewald's appointment to the magistracy.

Mrs. Healy appeared before Supreme Court Justice McCook four times during the day, the first time because she had refused to take the oath as a witness. Justice McCook ordered that she be sworn and she acquiesced "under protest."

A few minutes later Special Prosecutor Todd, directing the investigation of office-buying charges against Ewald, led Mrs. Healy back into the courtroom and told Justice McCook the witness had balked at the first question, which was: "Are you the wife of Martin J. Healy?"

Mrs. Healy's response had been, Todd said, "I refuse to answer any question on the ground that my husband has been indicted."

The court ordered her to answer, and the prosecutor and the recalcitrant witness marched back to the grand jury room.

The procession returned a third time. Todd said Mrs. Healy had admitted her relationship to the indicted Tammany leader and then refused to answer seven questions which the prosecutor considered pertinent. The questions concerned deposits of $7,500 in her bank account and $2,500 in the account of her husband on June 29, 1927.

Healy received $10,000 from Mrs Ewald through Thomas T. Tommaney in 1927 at about the time of Ewald's appointment to the bench. All four have been indicted, despite the principals' claim that the money was a loan.

The justice directed Mrs. Healy to answer all seven questions, but the witness was soon escorted back for a fourth time. She told the justice she had refused to answer "because my husband is involved."

Todd moved to have Mrs. Healy adjudged in contempt of court and Justice McCook declared if she were a man "this matter would have been disposed of long ago," but she was given until Monday to reconsider her refusal.

Two witnesses heard today by the grand jury were employes of the Emigrant Industrial Savings bank andthe Harlem Savings bank. Mr. and Mrs. Healy have accounts in the former institution.

ALCORN TOOK ACTIVE PART IN ARREST OF FIVE MEN

HARTFORD, Sept. 30—(AP)—State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn took an active part in the arrest of five men found operating a huge distillery in Wapping, Sunday, it was learned today, following the arraignment of the prisoners in superior court, where they were held in heavy bail by Judge Earnest C. Simpson.

Called to the scene of the raid by County Detective Edward J. Hickey, after county officers had taken four men into custody and seized the plant, Mr. Alcorn arrived in time to capture single handed Sam Russo, of Hartford, alleged to be one of the gang, who drove up to the old Wapping creamery, which housed the still and tried to make a getaway when he saw the group of officials. Russo drove off at high speed down the country road and Mr Alcorn, whose automobile was the only one available jumped into his machine and took after him.

FIVE CHILDREN HURT BY FALL OF LUNCH COUNTER

WESTPORT, Sept. 30— (AP) —Five school children were hurt, one seriously, today, by flying fragments of a marble counter which crashed to the floor in the lunchroom of the Bedford elementary school.

George Wagner, 5, the most seriously injured, suffered a possible concussion of the brain and was taken to Norwalk hospital. Richard Healy, 5, received a fractured nose and a severe gash on the chin, while Edmund S. Stephen 7, and Mary, 5, children of Rev. Edmund J. Gates, of Holy Trinity Episcopal church, received numerous cuts.

Mark R. Lefler, superintendent of schools, was unable to account for the accident which occurred during the afternoon recess.

STOCK TRADING ACCOUNT IN JUSTICE CRATER'S NAME

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Light on the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater and possible evidence of the missing judge's implication in municipal bench scandals were sought today by federal investigators in a newly discovered stock trading account in Justice Crater's name.

Assistant United States Attorney Sylvester said the stock account was still active when Justice Crater vanished on Aug. 6. A check of debits and credits showed a net balance of about $5,000 he said.

SEARCHING FOR AIRPLANE SEEN FALLING IN FLAMES

BETHESDA, Ohio, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Possemen and residents from here today searched the heavily wooded district nearby for an airplane, reported to have been seen falling in flames by two fox hunters about midnight last night.

They described hearing a whirring noise and then seeing the flaming carrier plunge earthward. They ran toward the place they thought it fell but discovered nothing.

OBITUARY

Rev. Michael J. O'Connor

DANBURY, Sept. 30— (AP) —Rev. Michael J. O'Connor, permanent rector of St. Peter's church since 1924 and before then pastor of Catholic churches in several Connecticut communities, died today after an illness of several weeks. He was 65 years old.

Father O'Connor came to St. Peter's church, where at one time he had served as curate, from St. James' church in Stratford, of which he was pastor for 17 years. He was ordained a priest 38 years ago in Boston at St. John's Cathedral by the Most Rev. John J. Williams

A native of Manchester, Father O'Connor prepared for the priesthood at St Charles seminary, Ellicott, Mo., Niagara university, and St. John's seminary, Brighton, Mass. Before going to Stratford, he served as pastor in churches at Lakeville, Bridgeport, New Haven, New Britain, West Thompson, and Pomfret. He was a lover of sports throughout his life time and excelled in baseball, swimming and boxing.

Two brothers, Timothy O'Connor, of Hartford, and Daniel O'Connor, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a sister, Miss Ellen O'Connor, of this city, survive. Funeral services will be held in St. Peter's church Friday morning.

SACRIFICING HIS BODY TO PROMOTION OF SCIENCE

BALTIMORE, Sept. 30.— (AP) —Known to his associates as "the last of the old guard," along with Dr Frederick H Caetjer, of Johns Hopkins Medical school, Dr. Christian Deetjen tomorrow is to give an arm to his devotion to the healing and revealing science of the Roentgen, or x-ray.

Already marked by a number of operations, one of which took a finger, Dr. Deetjen is one of a long line of martyrs who have undergone operation after operation as a result of dangerous exposure to the rays, and then have returned to their work with the courage of men who consider it more important than their own lives.

A dozen times previously Dr. Deetjen has been under the knife. He would have been even more seriously affected, according to Dr. Alexis McGlannan, who will perform the latest operation, had he failed to take preventive operations.

Dr. Caetjer, former president of the American Roentgen Ray society, has undergone more than 75 operations, the latest this spring. He has only one eye, and four fingers of his right hand are gone.

VAUSE TESTIFIES IN HIS INCOME TAX CASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—(AP)—Former Kings county Judge W. Bernard Vause became a voluable, eager witness today at his trial in Brooklyn federal court for falsification of income tax returns for 1926. His attitude contrasted with the shaken, reticent figure he presented several weeks ago when tried on mail fraud charges, which brought him a six year prison sentence.

Questioned by his attorney, Vause admitted he received fees from the United American lines. He asserted the sums paid him, alleged to total $250,000, were for services in obtaining pier leases and declared the work was done prior to 1923, at a time when he was a lawyer in private practice.

Several times Vause referred to a Frank Baxter, who, he said, shared some of his pier lease fees. His attorney declared he would subpoena Baxter as a witness, but federal authorities who conducted a vain search for the man last spring, persisted in regarding him as a myth.

WILLIAM FORSYTHE DIES OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS

HARTFORD, Sept. 30.—(AP)—William Forsythe, 27, assistant professor of dairy husbandry at Connecticut Agricultural college, died at the Isolation hospital, here this afternoon, of infantile paralysis. He was taken ill last Friday.

Dr. C. C. McCracken, president of the college, was in Hartford today and conferred with state health department officials. College activities will go on as usual, it was decided, but all possible precautions to guard against spread of the disease will be taken.

Professor Forsythe had been at Connecticut Agricultural college one year, after four years of agricultural teaching and research in Nebraska. He met his classes last Friday but went home at night feeling ill. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic Sunday night and was brought to Hartford Monday.

WINDSTORM DAMAGED CROPS AND BUILDINGS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Sept. 30—(AP)—A furious windstorm in Fonseca bay and the surrounding district today caused widespread damage to buildings, crops and communications.

Telegraph and telephone lines from here to Amapala were broken and the lack of communication prevented the securing of detailed information. It is believed, however, that there was no loss of human life.

MRS. HOOVER ATTENDING GIRL SCOUTS' CONVENTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 30—(AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wearing the official uniform of the organization, today attended the preliminary session of the 16th annual national convention of Girl Scouts of America.

Mrs. Hoover is honorary president of the Girl Scouts. Her visit marked the first time the wife of a president of the United States has attended the national assembly of the organization.

Attorney Suspended Another Reprimanded

T. P. McDonough Loses Practice For Six Months—Judge Allyn L. Brown Rebuked M. D. Cole of Hartford

HARTFORD, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Thomas F. McDonough, New Britain attorney, was suspended from practice for six months by Judge Earnest C. Simpson of superior court this morning as punishment for giving the court a false excuse for being tardy on Sept. 23, when he had two clients scheduled for trial on criminal charges.

At the same time, in an adjoining courtroom, Judge Allyn L. Brown exonerated Morton E. Cole, Hartford attorney, of making a false statement in court but reprimanded him for being reckless in stating what he believed to be a fact but which he really did not know to be true. Judge Brown delivered Mr. Cole a lecture on professional ethics and said he hoped the bar as a whole had learned a lesson from the incident.

Mr McDonough, who has been a practicing attorney since 1923, will not be able to resume his professional work until April 1, 1931, and Judge Simpson told him that the period of suspension may be extended if there are complaints about his conduct. The young New Britain lawyer was charged with the offense in open court last Friday by Judge Simpson and readily admitted his guilt. On the previous Tuesday, he had not appeared at the morning session of court and kept a jury and two clients waiting, as well as Judge Simpson and court attaches. When he did appear at 2 p. m., he told Judge Simpson in chambers he had been ill and had overslept at the Hotel Buritt, a statement which was found to be untrue.

Mr. Cole was called upon last Thursday by Judge Brown to explain why he had told the court that a case in which he was interested should go over for re-assignment because two of his important witnesses had been injured in an accident and were still in a hospital when, as a matter of fact, they had been released from the hospital three weeks before. His case also had been under consideration over the week-end and when it was called up by Judge Brown early in today's session Cornelius J. Danaher, of Meriden, appeared for Mr. Cole.

TROUBLES OF "PUBLIC ENEMIES" IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Danny Stanton, Jack Guzick, Terry Druggan, George "Red" Barker and William "Three-Fingered Jack" White—"public enemies" all—wrestled with the authorities today before the bars of justice.

Stanton walked out of a courtroom, where charges of vagrancy were continued until Oct 16, and into the arms of detectives who presented a warrant charging him with the murder of Jack Zuta at Delafield, Wis, last Aug. 1.

Guzick was arrested by federal agents. He is alleged to have evaded payment of tax on income amounting to $642,000 in 1928.

Druggan was sick abed with at least a dozen ailments and he sent attorneys to federal court to explain he could not be present to answer charges of income tax evasion. The government ordered its own physician to make an examination.

Barker and White, with Clarence Darrow as attorney for the former, appeared before Judge John H. Lyle, who set hearing on their petition for change of venue for tomorrow. They were picked up on Judge Lyle's vagrancy warrants directed against all 26 of the "public enemies" named by the crime commission.

While Wisconsin waited for Stanton, police waited for Guzick and Druggan and the government waited for Barker and White. At least summons were issued for the latter two, who face questioning about their incomes.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO EARL OF BIRKENHEAD

LONDON Sept. 30.—(AP)—The Earl of Birkenhead, great lawyer, brilliant politician and one of the most romantic and colorful figures in British public life, died from pneumonia today at the age of 58.

Death was in some measure unexpected despite the fact that Lord Birkenhead had been ill for some time, although grave alarm was felt yesterday when it was announced that he was suffering from a recurrence of the lung trouble which troubled him in the summer.

LOS ANGELES BROKERAGE HOUSE FAILED TO OPEN

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—(AP)—The brokerage house of J. J. Loftus & Co, member of the California Stock exchange and the Chicago board of trade, failed to open today. The action was followed with announcement of its suspension from the exchange membership and suspension of its brokerage license by the state corporation commissioner.

Sixth Day Of Slump In N. Y. Stock Market

[illegible]t in Recent Stock Exchange History Has the Market Closed Lower For So Many Consecutive Days

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Share prices on the New York Stock and Curb exchanges plunged downward for the sixth consecutive trading session today, as the decline gained fresh impetus from the first failure of a prominent Wall street investment house since the great bull market came to grief a year ago.

Not in recent stock exchange history has the market closed lower for so many consecutive days. During the terrific crash of last November, the market closed persistently lower on no more than four consecutive days, although compared to that crash the current decline has been a mere flop.

During the middle of the afternoon, President Whitney of the stock exchange mounted the rostrum and announced that J. A. Sisto & Co. had been suspended for insolvency. The firm was later suspended by the New York Curb and Philadelphia Stock exchanges. The New York Stock exchange has had but four financial casualties among its members since the crash of last autumn, and the first three were regarded as of minor importance. In the past five years, there have been only seven failures.

Earlier in the session, what appeared to be powerful support had been thrown into the market, and many traders felt that one of the sharp automatic upturns such as normally punctuate protracted declines, was in the making. For a time around mid-day, a few shares showed net gains of $1 to $3 a share. These were soon lost, however, and a hectic flurry of selling accompanied the Sisto announcement. The market made partial recovery, however, before the closing gong.

Throughout the day, many of the so-called pivotal shares strongly resisted selling pressure, and at the close, few of these stocks were down as much as $2. There were numerous net losses throughout the list of $2 to $5 or more, however, with some of the infrequently traded, or more erratic issues losing $10 a share or more. The day's sales were close to 4,500,000 shares, the largest since June 18, when the turnover exceeded 6,400,000 shares.

Wall street was little surprised over the Sisto announcement, for there had been vague rumors for some time that some important stock exchange firm was in financial difficulties. These rumors, while extremely nebulous, hung darkly over the financial community, and caused constantly increasing nervousness. It was a relief to Wall street generally to have the bad news out of the way.

The extent of the damage which may be revealed in the Sisto failure could not be learned. No comment was available from partners of the firm, and no statement of assets and liabilities was disclosed. Although J. A. Sisto & Co. was not one of the larger investment houses, it had wide connections, both domestic and foreign, and had participated in the distribution of the securities of many well-known, if moderate-sized corporations, in its eight years of existence.

Among more recent financing done by the Sisto house was that for Joshua S. Cosden, prominent oil operator, in conjunction with another investment house. Stock of the New Cosden Oil Co. sold as high as $135 a share last year, and sold at $74.75 early this year. Today it dropped on the curb exchange from $9.75 to a price of $8, and closed at $8.50 a share. The firm also sponsored the Sisto Financial Corp., an investment trust formed a year ago. Its stock was offered at $53 a share. Today it dropped on the curb from $18 to $10 a share, and for a time was quoted at $2 bid. Cuneo Press, of which Mr. Sisto is a director, tumbled from $32 to $16 and closed at $23.25. Checker Cab, on the stock exchange, dropped $5.75 a share to a price of $18.37, and closed at $19.67. Sisto & Co., however, had withdrawn as bankers for the firm as long ago as July.

SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICES FOR DANIEL GUGGENHEIM

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—(AP)—Simple funeral services were held today for Daniel Guggenheim, mining magnate and philanthropist, at Temple Emanu-el on Fifth avenue. A throng filled the temple and crowded the street in front of it.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, Adolph S. Ochs and Bernard M. Brauch were among the honorary pall bearers. The widow was escorted by her two sons, Lieut. Col. Robert Guggenheim, of Washington, and Harry Guggenheim, ambassador to Cuba. Four of Mr. Guggenheim's seven brothers, William, Saul, Simon and Murray, and Mayor Walker were among the mourners.

Interment was in Salem Field cemetery, Brooklyn. Mr. Guggenheim, donor of the 2,500,000 Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics, died Sunday in his home at Port Washington, Long Island.

TWO FASCIST MINISTERS IN AUSTRIA'S NEW CABINET

VIENNA, Sept. 30—(AP)—Fascism's astonishing political successes in Germany this month were reflected tonight in the announcement of Austria's new cabinet, which includes two fascist ministers and is dependent for stability upon fascist success in the next general election.

The new government was formed today by Dr. Karl Vaugoin, vice chancellor of the resigned Schober cabinet.

The cabinet was said to have been approved by President Wilhelm Miklas. Semi-official announcements stated that parliament would be dissolved tomorrow and notices issued for a general election.

GOVERNMENT OF GERMANY IS TO FORCE A SHOWDOWN

The Bruening Cabinet Has Completed a Program to Put the Reich's Finances in Order—The Program Includes Salary Reductions, a Halt in Mounting Taxes and Rigid Economy in Public Administration—Plan Has the Approval of President Hindenberg—Matter Will Be Placed Squarely Before Parliament—Government Comes Out Boldly in the Face of Threats of Adolf Hitler

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—(AP)—With the firm backing of President Von Hindenburg Chancellor Bruening today confronted German parliamentarism with a choice of either saving its own life by speedy action in the hour of the country's dire need or committing suicide and being sent home indefinitely.

Decision of the government to come out boldly with its financial reform program and force a show down was decided upon in the face of threats by Adolf Hitler, national socialist (fascist) leader that any attempt by the president and chancellor to eliminate reichstag interference with their program might lead to President Von Hindenburg's indictment or to a fascist putsch.

Ever since Sept. 13, when the election was held which placed 107 fascists in the new reichstag, the Bruening cabinet had been working on a program of essential reforms to put the reich's finances in order.

Final touches were put to this program late in the night. These consisted of slashing salary reductions, a bold halt to mounting taxes and a rigid economy in public administration.

No sooner had President Von Hindenburg returned today from a few days' outing at the presidential hunting lodge in Schohfheide than the chancellor laid the completed program before him. The veteran chief executive not only approved the measures but pledged himself to back his cabinet to the limit, emphasizing, however, that there must be no dillydallying.

It is up to the reichstag membership, conservatives, liberals and radicals, business interests and farmers, to take the Hindenburg-Bruening program or leave it. In other words the first in command and his able financial side are willing once more to follow the constitutional method of securing or attempting to secure the reichstag's approval of the program admittedly rigorous and drastic and demanding vast patriotic sacrifices.

Not the least of the reforms falls directly upon the heads of administrative officials from President Von Hindenburg down the line to the ranks of civil service. The president will take a salary cut of 20 per cent. He will share this with cabinet ministers and reichstag members. Civil service salaries will shrink 6 per cent, as will the incomes of reichsbank and other state employes.

A saving of 1,000,000,000 marks under the 1930 budget is estimated. One of the drastic provisions made known was the plan of a special law prohibiting for three years an increased reich or communal expenditures. With an eye to assisting in checking unemployment the government proposes to build 215,000 houses and flats. This act will relieve a shortage of dwellings and provide labor to make up in a measure certain decreases in government insurance. Federal payments to state treasuries will be cut sharply and poor relief limited.

Simplification of government bureaus will be effected and the personnel heavily reduced. A revaluation of lands will eliminate farms listed at less than $5,000 entirely from taxation.

Although nobody could be found today who seemed to know where the parliamentary majority for this program is to be found, Chancellor Bruening nevertheless hopes that all well-wishers of the German democratic republic may rally to the platform.

Should the reichstag, however, refuse its support, it is understood President Hindenburg will authorize his chancellor to declare the program law, by virtue of a section of article 48 of the republican constitution which provides: "If safety and order in the German commonwealth is materially disturbed or endangered the president may take measures necessary to restore public safety and order and if necessary, intervene by force of arms. To this end he may temporarily suspend in whole or in part the fundamental rights guaranteed by the constitution."

There is a possibility, however, that the reichstag might itself invoke another provision of the same article revoking these measures "at the demand of the parliament."

In other words, when article 48 was invoked last summer and the reichstag sent home, it was done to stave off a temporary disaster to the government, but at the same time to pave the way for new elections because it had become evident that the reichstag as then constituted could accomplish nothing.

Article 48 now would be invoked with quite opposite intent, first to ward off a permanent disaster and second to prevent new elections at this time, when it appears certain that radicalism would make still further gains.

Chancellor Bruening apparently counts with certainty on rallying a majority for such a measure which on the one hand, invests the cabinet with dictatorial powers but, on the other, relieves parties, such as the social democrats, of the embarrassment of specifically voting for his program. He feels that the social democrats if faced with the alternative of the chancellor's theoretically constitutional dictatorship or a possible illegal one of the extremist parties, will prefer to vote for adjournment.

As a further club over his political enemies, the chancellor is said to be able to confront the social democrats with the possibility that he might form a rightist government, including the Hitlerites and Hugenberg followers

In the event of an adjournment it is understood that the Bruening cabinet will see to it that the reichstag does not reconvene until next spring at the earliest. By that time Germany is expected to have weathered its economic crisis and this in turn should mean that radicalism would be on the decline.

ROOSEVELT HEADS NEW YORK STATE DEMOCRATIC TICKET

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 30—(AP)—Renominated unanimously for a second term by the New York state democratic convention today, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt in his speech to the delegates declared that the campaign must be fought out on state issues rather than on conditions in New York city.

Other nominees on the state ticket headed by Governor Roosevelt were:

For lieutenant governor, Herbert H. Lehman, of Westchester.

For comptroller, Morris S. Tremaine, of Buffalo.

For attorney general, John J. Bennett, of Kings.

For associate judge of the court of appeals, Cuthbert W. Pound, of Niagara.

All were renominations, with the exception of the attorney generalship, an office now held by a republican

In the case of Judge Pound, the convention followed a custom that has generally prevailed for several years of concurring with their republican opponents in nominations for the appeals court bench. Judge Pound is a republican.

COAST TO COAST BROADCAST OF WORLD SERIES GAMES

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Radio will concentrate upon Philadelphia tomorrow for the first of the 1930 world series broadcasts.

Coming on the air at 1 p. m. E. S. T., the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting system will give complete details of the opening contest between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Athletics.

FIVE PRISONERS ESCAPED FROM JAIL IN ARKANSAS

TEXARKANA, Ark., Sept. 30—(AP)—Five prisoners escaped from Miller county jail today in an automobile which two of them were charged with stealing.

Weaver Hudson and W. T. McCarty, both of Texarkana, were arrested in Eastland, Tex., and returned here for grand jury action on a charge of stealing the automobile of Eugene Mullin of Eastland. The car was returned with them.

Today Hudson and McCarty took quick leave of Texarkana in the Mullin automobile and took with them three other prisoners sentenced to three years for robbery

BODY WAS SEEN IN LAKE ERIE BY AIRPLANE PILOT

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30.—(AP)—C. B. McClellan, airplane pilot, who landed here late today from Buffalo, reported that he sighted a body believed to be that of William J. McNulty of Columbus, missing since a plane crashed into Lake Erie last Wednesday.

McClellan said he saw the body, with arms outstretched, floating about a half mile off shore, approximately a quarter mile east of the breakwater at Dunkirk, N. Y.

McNulty and his pilot, Willard Parker, Cleveland, lost their lives less than an hour after they took off from Cleveland airport at 1:30 a. m., last Wednesday. The wreckage of their plane was washed ashore three miles west of Conneaut, Ohio, and Parker's body was found Sunday morning four and a half miles east of the plane wreckage. It was believed that the heavy winds of the week had washed McNulty's body much farther east.

18 YEAR OLD GIRL AWARDED DIVORCE FROM MAN AGED 70

CHICAGO, Sept. 30—(AP)—An 18-year-old girl, seeking a divorce, testified today that her 70-year-old husband had purchased her for his bride three years ago when she was an inmate of an orphanage.

The girl, Mrs. Florence Gut, declared her aged husband had come to the orphanage hunting a wife, had taken a fancy to her and had then obtained permission to wed her by offering her mother $2,000. She said she married him without knowledge that she had been "bought." She asked divorce on the grounds that her husband preferred dog and cat pets to her.

Judge John J. Sullivan awarded her a divorce and an alimony settlement of $1,000.

HITLER DENIES FINANCIAL AID FROM SOVIET RUSSIA

MUNICH, Bavaria, Sept. 30—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, fascist leader of Germany, today issued a sweeping denial that his party's success in the reichstag elections had been due to financial support from Soviet Russia.

He declared that he had never met soviet emissaries and that he had never "spoken a single word to any soviet agent."

NEARLY 100 DELEGATES ATTEND BAPTIST CONVENTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 30—There were 97 registered delegates and a number of guests at the 106th annual meeting of the Ashford Baptist association held in the First Baptist church at Spring Hill, Mansfield, today. Rev. George F. Camp, moderator, convened the meeting, the motto of which was "Pentecost—Then and Now." The welcome address was by Rev. T. Hawthorne W. Jones, pastor of the Mansfield church. The main address was a most interesting one delivered by Rev. Samuel D. Bawden, superintendent of Erukala industrial settlement, Kavali, South India. Rev. Mr. Bawden has been working in India among criminal classes. The program was carried out as planned with the exception of the report of the committee on evangelism, which was briefly given by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of Danielson, in the absence of Raymond E. Allen, chairman of the committee.

Officers elected for the year were: Clarence E. Pierce, moderator, Rev. Robert Heuston of South Willington, vice-moderator and Rev. Henry E. Hodge, re-elected clerk and treasurer. It was voted to hold the 107th annual session in 1931 in East Thompson with Rev. Mr. Coolidge of Killingly as the main speaker.

Sessions were held in the forenoon and afternoon, dinner and a luncheon being served by the ladies of the entertaining church.

DRIVE DIRECTOR OUTLINES PLANS TO ROTARIANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 30—Charles D. Folsom of New York, director of the $500,000 new hospital drive to be inaugurated here soon, presented a concise word-picture of hospital conditions in the city at present with an outline of what they can be expected to be with the building of a new hospital, at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club held in the Nathan Hale hotel this noon. A delicious chicken repast was served.

Guests introduced by President Louis A. Kingsbury were: Rotarian Gregory Baldwin of Mansfield, Mass., John F. Carr, hospital trustee, William B. Sweeney, secretary of the campaign, L. A. Lubbock, affiliated with Mr. Folsom and Dr. Edward J. Ottenheimer.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke of the chamber of commerce spoke on the project to purchase Rocky Neck beach, East Lyme, for a state park and on motion of Louis H. Arnold the club voted its endorsement of the plan. About a score of members and their wives have registered to attend the annual fall conclave of the 30th district in Swampscott, Mass., next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Raymond E. Shepard led a group, including most of the guests, in song.

Mr. Folsom was introduced by J. E. Sullivan. The speaker exhibited an excellent drawing of the proposed new hospital. It is to be an imposing building, four stories high with spacious verandahs on the fourth floor. There will be 115 beds and will be planned on the "flexible" basis, giving the maximum service for a hospital of its size. There will be eight wards of four beds each, five private rooms, 38 single or double bed rooms and an infant ward. There was a demand of 24 patients for each bed at St. Joseph's hospital during the past year.

FUNERAL

Dr. Louis I. Mason

Dr. Louis I. Mason was accorded military honors at his funeral held this afternoon at 2 o'clock with services conducted at the home, 121 Fairview street, by Rev. Frederick C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church. There was a large attendance of physicians from various parts of the state, including a full representation of members of the local medical profession. Business men and members of the Masonic bodies were also largely represented.

Burial was in the Willimantic cemetery where a squad from Company C, 169th Infantry, Connecticut National Guard, commanded by First Sergeant William D. Nicol, fired three volleys over the grave. Joseph Roux of the Legion post sounded "Taps." The bearers were, Commander Abraham I. Sussman, Captain James B. Fullerton, Raymond A. Parker, Wilfred A. Gagnon, Dr. Charles A. Jenkins and Earle K. Haling; the color bearers, Charles Stewart Cook and George F. Robinson and the color guards, Lyndon E. Little and Louis J. Harvey, all members of James J. Shea post No. 19, American Legion. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Avery and VanZandt.

A warning against solicitations was issued today by the chamber of commerce which has recently investigated the status of several solicitors working in and about the city, only to find a number of them apparent frauds. Several housewives were victimized by a young woman purporting to be the representative of the Supreme Hosiery company of St. Louis. She offered for sale a $1.75 pair of stockings for 65 cents. The chamber urges all persons of the town to make inquiry at the chamber of commerce offices before accepting the offer of solicitors unless the solicitor shows an approval card issued by the chamber of commerce.

Taking sudden fright a young gray horse owned by Peter Zachowski of Windham Center bolted headlong into the cab of a Ford truck which was proceeding on Broad street about 9 o'clock this morning. A section of the wagon shaft was broken off and pierced the stomach of the animal, the horse also suffering a severe cut on the head in shattering the windshield of the truck. Henry Haddad of Chestnut Hill was driver of the machine, which was damaged. The horse is expected to recover. The accident was investigated by Officer William Hurley.

CRYSTAL LAKE M. E. CHURCH NEARS 140TH ANNIVERSARY

The Crystal Lake Methodist church will have special exercises next Sunday afternoon in observance of its 140th anniversary. Rev. Myron E. Genter, of Norwich, district superintendent, will be the preacher and other visiting clergymen will take part in the service. Rev. T. Arthur Mosley, pastor of Stafford Springs Methodist church, is also in charge of the Crystal Lake church. Services at Crystal Lake district were originally held in the homes of parishioners and it was in 1792 that the first church was erected. This church was destroyed by fire several years later and a new church was built. The opening of the new church resulted in a remarkable revival when over 150 were converted. The present church had become very much dilapidated and it was not until Mr. Mosley took charge that necessary repairs were made. The church has recently been reshingled with asbestos shingles, the tower repaired and the building painted, inside and out. The inside has been partially replastered and decorated, covering laid on the floor and rubber in the aisles. The oldest Methodist parsonage in New England is said to be at Crystal Lake. It is a one-story log house and is still in use as a residence.

There were many interesting exhibits in the town hall. In the tent where the vegetables and other things were shown were fine products of the soil and bough. Choice apples of several varieties, sprayed fruit from the Goodwin farm, Hampton, were among the finest. Several pens of rabbits were on exhibition. In the Grange hall were some fine oil paintings, the work of John Jones, of Bear Hill. Fine woodwork came from Hillhouse & Taylor, Willimantic. David Griggs had Grade A honey, both strained and in the comb, on display. A beautiful walnut cedar-lined hope chest completely filled was awarded Mrs. Roy Clemens, of Phoenixville. A large number of the exhibits were donated to the grange and sold at auction in the evening, and netted about $15 that goes toward the building fund. A big crowd was in attendance in the evening and dancing continued until near midnight. The fair was a success and a good sum will be added to the building fund.

The fine gladioli that have been displayed in church for several Sundays were from the large plot cultivated by Charles C. Locke in the village, that looks most attractive from the street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis are soon to leave town. Mr. Lewis, who has been with the Gulf Refining Co., Willimantic, has been transferred to Colebrook, N. H., and Mrs. Lewis and the children expect to move there soon. All are sorry to have them move from town.

The C. E. society held a supper and entertainment Saturday at the town hall. Over 100 were served a supper, of baked beans, salads, rolls, pickles, cake and coffee. During the evening Miss Lila Seeley showed views of her recent trip abroad, by means of a postcard projector, accompanying the pictures with a very fine account of what she had seen. Nearly $50 was cleared by the society.

JEWETT CITY

A REPUBLICAN TOWN COMMITTEE CONFERENCE

In the town hall, a meeting of the republican town committee was held Monday evening, a number of electors being present. The meeting was addressed by Louis M. Gingras, chairman of the town committee and by Judge John T. Barry, George J. Moeller and Lewis M. Carpenter. It is the plan of the committee to begin to campaign at once for success in the coming contest for representatives to the general assembly. Several men who have been suggested as candidates for representative, will be interviewed and a selection made at the caucus Oct. 8th.

Democratic party leaders said Tuesday evening that Maxcy Seymour, would be their probable choice. Mr. Seymour is one of the town's best men, a staunch reliable democrat of the old school. He was born in 1850. To him has been given many public offices, which he has filled with ability and with honor to Griswold. He has served several terms as first selectman. The nominal average vote of the town of Griswold, reckoning over a period of 10 years, is from 12, to as high as 86, democratic majority. The old guard of the G. O. P., it appears, has imbibed something of the Sir Thomas Lipton spirit. They are stayers, good losers, with plenty of the spirit necessary to put it over again.

As a notable break in the democratic victories, six years ago Dr. Jennings defeated R. J. Dudkowski and sat in the house of 1925. The count that fall, showed that the republican candidate had performed the seemingly impossible, for he ran 36 votes ahead of his ticket. The next election Mr. Dudkowski defeated the republican candidate by a large majority and was a member of the general assembly in 1927.

Martin Wolf of Goodyear has been a caller in the borough. He and some of his older friends recall that 43 years ago he played on the Jewett City ball team, and was a member of the outfield crack performers. This was at the time when Hugh Duffy, who later became manager of the Boston team, starred as the local first sacker, when the home town nine was managed by George A. Ross.

TRAFFIC OVER NEW ROAD IN ABOUT THREE WEEKS

Within three weeks, state road traffic will be routed over the new Quinebaug viaduct. The last two sections of the balustrade will be poured at once, and although the final burnishing will be going on, yet the roadway will be unobstructed. The state engineers at first expected to detour the traffic over Railroad avenue and Soule street, while the hill in front of the Polish corporation block was being rebuilt, but it now seems practicable to open the bridge while that work is being done. This arrangement means that soon the Main street railroad crossing will be closed to both foot and vehicular traffic. When the state road is open on the bridge and the crossing closed and posted, then passing across the rails will constitute a trespass, with accident liability ceasing for the railroad company. It is of interest to recall the various predictions that were made, relative to the date when regular traffic would pass over the new bridge. Work was begun on the contract in the middle of October 1929.

Methodist church notes include the meeting of the Junior Epworth league at 3:30 today (Wednesday). The Foreign Missionary society will meet at the parsonage, Thursday at 2 o'clock.

A Family of Dyers

John and Thomas Haney Jr., of New London, were callers in the borough Tuesday. The two men are the sons of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Haney, and are natives of Jewett City. The father, his brother John, and their father, John Haney, each at different periods, was boss dyer in the Slater mills; the father and John previous to the great flood of 1886, with Thomas holding that position when the new dye house was built, following the demolition of the original, which was carried out when the big Slater dam gave away. During the many years when Thomas G. Haney lived in Jewett City, he was much interested in amateur theatricals. His enthusiasm and ability as an actor, are recalled. He, and his local company, "put on," The Ticket of Leave Man, The Octoroon, and Ten Nights in a Bar Room, to crowded houses in the one-time Whiting's hall, close to 50 years ago.

During the early hours, Monday and Tuesday, the mercury dropped to within 8 degrees of the frost line. Monday morning after 4 o'clock a Quinebaug valley fog came to the rescue, while Tuesday morning before sunrise, just as Jack Frost was getting ready to enter the picture, a light air from the south sprung up, giving the beautiful flower displays all through this section, a little further lease of life.

At Dirt Road Meeting

George A. Ross was in Hartford Tuesday to be present at a meeting, held in the assembly room of the capitol, in the interest of dirt road maintenance and improvement. Among the many representatives and engineers from all over the state, the state secretary was present.

Mr. Ross, who was one of the speakers, addressed the assemblage in the interest of improving the outlying district roads, that are used every day by the rural free delivery men, the buses used for transportation of school children, and the army of milk trucks that daily collect the milk from the producers.

Tuesday evening's Norwich Record said editorially:

Street Lighting for Griswold's Highways

Griswold as a town acting with Jewett City has already voted $20,000 to be applied to a curb-to-curb street, and for lights to extend as far as the town's Quinebaug boundary—News report in Norwich Bulletin.

In so doing, Griswold is getting ahead of the rest of the country generally.

Missouri, for instance, is still only discussing the pros and cons of lighting the rural highways. Louis J. Brooks, president of the Missouri Hard Road association, is quoted in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat as stating that modern roads, however complete in details of roadbuilding art, will be incomplete in their service to the public until they are lighted at night, just as, for instance, the Montville highway is now.

We are inclined to believe with Mr. Brooks that, although the paved highways have proved a phenomenal investment and invigorating tonic in awakening and redeeming backward rural districts, there remains a vital coordinating factor to be developed before our highway systems can function 100 per cent.

This weakness lies in the absence of lights along state highways where there are narrow thoroughfares, lack of police protection, insufficient visibility and the confusion of dimming and glaring lights, all doubly dangerous to life, limb and property after nightfall.

Mr. Brook's contention that transmission lines designed to light highways also would make electrical current available to thousands of farm homes now denied this modern convenience because of high costs is logical and should appeal to public utilities.

POETRY

New England

Rock-ribbed thy shores, where age on age
The many-voiced waves have ceaseless beat
Their strident tattoos. The hurrying feet
Of legions hold their endless battles wage
For race supremacy. The record page
Is filled, nor yet is chronicle complete.
Three centuries have passed and thy great seat
Of government and culture doth engage
The world's acclaim. Take down yon dusty tome
From lofty shelf, and search ye where ye will:
Wherever learning seeks her cherished home
Here will ye find its loftiest citadel,
Where'er the shafts of bigotry are hurled
New England throws her beams across the world

New England! pride of stanch progenitors,
Home of the pilgrim and the patriot;
From Carcassonne to fabled Camelot,
Where in the realm where legionary wars
Were fought,—can such be found? Thy changeless laws
The laws of God. Thy leaders ever sought
That right should rule, and freedom ever brought
They for their code, a charter without flaws.
A galaxy of States, with fields and lakes
And cities such as nowhere else are found.
Thy soil is sacred, thine is holy ground.
For string of wampum bought, an act that takes Three centuries to seal—we share today
The heritage of Massachusetts Bay.

Imperial Young Man

The girl I walked with yesterday
Was exquisitely fair,
With merry, laughing, bright blue eyes,
And lovely golden hair;
And she appeared to fancy me,
Quite possibly because
I told her with some eloquence
How beautiful she was.

But she was not with me today;
Another maid I met,
Another exquisitely fair,
A beautiful brunette.
I eulogized her beauty some,
But what did she expect?
And this one question I would ask,
Did she deserve neglect?

And so it is with every one,
The blondes and the brunettes,
Whichever happens to be near
My adoration gets.
And which, you ask, would I prefer
In marriage to annex?
I'm not in love with any one—
I just adore the sex!

DANIELSON

DRUMMING SERGEANT HAS ONLY 70 MILES TO HIKE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 30.—With his hike of approximately 250 miles from New York to Boston whittled down to 70 miles, Sergeant S. A. Moeller, Spanish war veteran, arrived here shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon, with his drum rolling and his legs setting a snappy pace as he made his way up through the business section. He is en route to Boston to attend the American Legion national convention.

Sergeant Moeller was met near Main and Water streets by Commander James Harney of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, and escorted to the Attawaugan hotel for lunch. At the hotel entrance he encountered Colonel Henry W. Babson, life president of the 18th Connecticut Volunteers' association, and Emory Tubbs, another local veteran of the Civil war. He saluted them with a long roll on his drum, and promised to play some more for them after he had refreshed himself. He had admitted he was tired and hungry at the time.

Sergeant Moeller wears a Colonial uniform, and in it he makes a picturesque figure. He declines "lifts" from motorists, being set upon traveling the entire distance between New York and Boston afoot. Though he is a man of middle age, he is still sturdy and well set-up, and should easily reach Boston not later than Friday.

Amateur Boxing Bouts

Amateur boxing contests are to be resumed here next Tuesday evening, when the indoor season will be inaugurated in the town hall, Promoter Louis Peloquin said this afternoon. Mr. Peloquin successfully arranged a number of open air shows at the North street arena during the hot weather season. The visiting team of boxers for next Tuesday evening's show will be made up of boys from Holyoke, Worcester and Webster. They will meet boys from Danielson and vicinity, where a number of good ringsters have been developed under Mr. Peloquin's direction within the past year.

During the course of the late fall and winter, Mr. Peloquin will bring visiting teams of amateur battlers here from Taunton, East and South Boston, from the larger cities of Connecticut, from Rhode Island and various sections of Massachusetts. He also is to stage amateur bouts at St. John's hall in Putnam this season, in cooperation with a Putnam man.

There is considerable speculation just now as to the route of the Wauregan-Danielson trunk line highway from the point where the new concrete ends, nearly two miles south of Danielson, and into this community. It has been hinted that when the next section is built, possibly next year, it will leave the present route and cut across country to the Green Hollow road, thence into Danielson via Broad street. Under such a plan the highway would cross the tracks of the New Haven railroad on an overhead bridge. Such an arrangement has been talked of for two or three years past.

The advantage would be to divert much through traffic from Danielson's congested business section. It would also, as a result, help speed up through traffic. It would give even better connections than are at present available for traffic coming from the south and intending to go out of Danielson over the much-traveled route to Providence.

Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools said today that the vocational school, for which the state is providing teachers, opened yesterday at the high school with surprisingly large attendance and splendid promise. These classes are for the women from the home, from the office, from the factory, but not for girls who are attending school.

The closed season on quail, which are becoming so plentiful hereabouts, remains in force until Oct. 8, 1931, and they may not be taken legally during the coming hunting season.

PUTNAM

EAST KILLINGLY COUPLE FREED ON ADULTERY CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 30—In superior court in this city today, a jury acquitted Ira Raynsford and Viola Hubbard, both of the Mashentuck district of East Killingly, of a charge of adultery. The jury remained in chambers for 36 minutes after they received the charge of Judge Newell Jennings, presiding magistrate.

The case against Raynsford and Mrs. Hubbard was one of the longest tried during the September criminal term of court which came to a close this morning.

The last act of Judge Jennings before adjourning the term was to sentence Charles Fitts of Hampton, who pleaded guilty to a serious statutory crime, to serve a term of not less than 18 months or more than three years in state prison. Fitts who is widely known in this section, previously entered a plea of not guilty and elected trial by jury. A few minutes before the case was taken up, Attorney William A. King of Willimantic, counsel for Fitts conferred in chambers with Judge Jennings. Upon re-entering the court room, Fitts when put to plea for a second time acknowledged his guilt. Sentence followed immediately.

Frank Hanner, youthful Willimantic check forger was in court awaiting to hear his sentence. During the arguments in the Raynsford-Hubbard case, Hanner sat in the prisoner's docket of the court room with his pretty wife of about 6 months. Hanner who has pleaded guilty to several counts of fraud, was given an additional four days of grace, when Judge Jennings ordered Sheriff C. A. Gates to return the young prisoner to the county jail and hold him until Friday, when preparations for the final disposition of his case will be complete.

The jury was dismissed, but instructed to return to court on Friday morning when the September term of civil superior court will convene. Jurors excused for the term were L. Dexter Crawford of Windham and Omer Loiselle of Thompson.

Short Calendar Session

On Friday morning at 10 o'clock, Judge Newell Jennings of Bristol will preside at a short calendar session of superior court. The following cases have been assigned for hearing at this session:

The Willimantic Lumber and Coal company vs. James A. Lane, motion for summary judgment; Hollis H. Lyman vs. Charles E. White, motion for summary judgment; Thelma Harris Balcom vs. Arthur Leslie Balcom, motion for more specific judgment; The Killingly Trust Co., Trustee vs. Central Worsted company, disclosure of defense; James E. Smith et als. vs. William B Smith et als; Violet Baldwin vs. Alfred J. Bousquet, motion for judgment by default for failure to answer; Elizabeth Marsden vs. Alfred J. Bousquet, motion for judgment by default for failure to answer; Alfred Baldwin vs. Alfred J. Bousquet, motion for judgment by default for failure to plead; Frances P. Cancellas vs. Joquim Cancellas, continuance, second order of notice; P. M. Leclair's Sons Co., vs. Misael Bazinet, et al. default for failure to appear, judgment; Jacob Dohff, vs. Alvin Eichelberg and Clarence Dawley, motion for default for failure to plead as to defendant Eichelberg; John H. Hambly et als vs. Quidnick Windham Mfg. Co., petition for confirmation of allowance to receivers, report of ancillary receivers for period ending September 10th, 1930, petition of ancillary receivers for authority to pay a fourth and final dividend, petition for allowance of final compensation to receivers; Archibald Macdonald, Jr., Admr., et al vs. Howard R. Bullard et al. judgment that one-half of the proceeds of the foreclosure by sale be paid to Clara G. Bullard.

Uncontested divorce: Minnie L. Dexter vs. Harold P. Dexter.

Two of the main line express trains of the Midland division of the New Haven road which passed through this city daily have been drawn out of service, it was announced Monday by railroad officials. Both trains were those of the afternoon schedule and arrived in this city 2:30 and 3:30 p. m. They were trains 182, an eastbound running from Pennsylvania station in New York to Boston and 123, a westbound train from Boston to Waterbury. No other trains have been added to replace those withdrawn, but the eastbound express arriving in this city at 1:48 p. m., which for a number of years has been a 6 day train, has been transferred to the daily train list. The above list of changes became effective with the state's return Sunday morning to standard time.

William E. Sault, for the past two years assistant superintendent of the New Haven division of the New Haven road, whose headquarters were in this city has retired on pension and has been succeeded by William Brooks of Hartford division, recently promoted to assistant superintendency of the sections of railroad divisions in this city.

Supt. Sault formally turned over the duties of his office to his successor on Monday. This afternoon he spent a few hours visiting with his many friends in Putnam and in railroad circles along the line between New London and Worcester, which he directed during his term of office. Supt. Sault, a veteran railroad man, enters retirement taking with him an enviable service record. He came to Putnam from New Haven, where he was general yardmaster of the New Haven terminal, to succeed Thomas R. Rawley who was later made assistant superintendent on the Providence division.

Supt. Sault was best known for his devotion and sincerity to the duties and responsibilities of his office which were many and great. Last winter during a bitter cold night, while on duty supervising the work of clearing a derailment at Hilltop, near Worcester, Mr. Sault froze his feet and suffered from the results of the exposure, which nearly cost him the loss of his feet.

Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston was reported by officials of the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass., where he is suffering from a serious illness, as slightly improved today. Chief Thurston, although not yet out of danger, is gradually regaining his strength and continues his fight to ward off the malady with which he is stricken.

Judge M. H. Geissler in city court this morning granted a continuance of 6 months to a local man arraigned on a minor charge.

A large enrollment was made by students at the Putnam Evening school which commenced its sessions last night, Supt. of Schools L. N. Farrin reported today.

THE 1930 SERIES

Philadelphia will not be able to accommodate all who would like to witness the opening of the 1930 world series. Those fortunate enough to get a seat will be envied, not only today but in those following, but while attendance may not be possible there will be plenty of interest through such channels as remain open to the average fan. He is going to revel in the details as quickly as he can get them.

Having won the honors in their respective leagues, Philadelphia and St. Louis play to see which will be the first to win four out of seven games. The honor of being world champions is distinctive. The Athletics won it last year, proved their right to defend it now, and the Cardinals gained that privilege in the National league after one of the finest finishes that has been witnessed in a long time. The Athletics had less difficulty in the closing days than did the Cards, but the latter aggregation was able to meet all the demands imposed upon them by the other aspirants for the place.

Each club has made a fine record throughout the season and the friends of both can advance plenty of reasons for their belief that their teams will win. Team play, batting and pitching strength of the respective teams make an impressive showing as they are contrasted. As the teams face each other there is no indication that it is going to be a one-sided series. Confidence exists in the hearts of the respective teams and their followers, but with the expectation that the better team will win.

Baseball has its uncertainties. It is a game that has long held the interest of the American people, and there will be no evidence in the series that there has been any decrease, but there is and always has been an insistence upon a fair and open contest and a real determination of the championship.

Two excellent teams are matched for the decision. The veteran Connie Mack has won great admiration for the success he has had in managing winning ball teams, but fandom doesn't believe championships ought to be determined by favoritism; it looks to the team that can play the best ball to carry off the pennant.

BETTER HOMES

The movement for home ownership and better homes is one that has awakened extensive interest throughout the country. It is an aid in solving the housing problem and it is beneficial to all those involved.

In speaking of home ownership, President Hoover has declared that "It is more than comfort that is involved. It has important aspects of health and morals and education and the provision of a fair chance for growing childhood. Nothing contributes more for greater happiness or for sounder social stability than the surroundings of their homes."

Many are the instances where it appears most unfortunate that people do not give more serious consideration to the importance of home ownership. It is believed that it is the failure to look at all sides of the proposition that is responsible for this attitude.

In connection with the plans for the conference on home building and home ownership, the president urged the importance of improved opportunities for acquiring homes. It is frequently noted that heads of households are deploring the fact that they have been forced to give up the apartment in which they have lived for decades because of change in ownership. The new owner wants more rent or wants the apartment himself and they must go after those who have occupied the property so long that they have probably bought its equivalent through the monthly rent and formed an attachment for the home which is not easily broken.

It is unfortunate that such persons did not consider seriously enough the importance of acquiring their own homes in their younger days, homes from which they could not be moved, homes that would advance in value, and homes that would have been reason for greater interest and contentment.

The movement in behalf of better homes because of the influence upon family life is deserving of the strongest support. It should get every possible encouragement through organized effort and through individual endeavor. It means much to the community and stimulates an interest in community affairs which it is impossible to arouse in any other way.

A PUBLIC BENEFIT

At various times throughout the year, charitable organizations appeal for public assistance. Being engaged in work for the relief of those needing it in the community—a public service—it is believed that there should be public interest and participation. The idea is a sound one and so regarded generally.

In the city of Detroit at the present time an appeal is being made by the Goodwill Industries for aid. There is nothing new in the presentation of such an appeal, but there is a work being done by that organization which suggests the thought that it might well be adopted elsewhere with equally good results. The Goodwill Industries is not an experiment. It has been in operation for a decade and during that period it has been instrumental in meeting the needs of the unfortunate and needy in a valuable manner.

It is a proposition that works not only for the aid of those who are assisted but for that class of workers who have passed the age when their services are not wanted in their regular employment, those who are suffering from infirmities, or those whose afflictions make it impossible for them to do hard work but who are still able to do a little.

This organization collects materials which have been rejected in the Detroit homes, clothing, shoes, furniture and the like, takes them to its headquarters and puts those who need such work to reconstructing them so that they will be fit for others to use. These goods, when completed, are sold to those who are able to pay something, so that from the first to the last there is a service being rendered to all.

This organization acts as a clearing house for much material that might otherwise go to waste or be junked, when, as a matter of fact, it is too good to be ejected without finding someone who could make use of it. Those who are employed in such work must be grateful for the opportunity to earn something. Those who patronize such an establishment can fully appreciate its economic advantages. It is, in general, an effort for helping many individuals without actually making them objects of charity.

ENFORCING REGULATIONS

Out in Toledo the authorities are trying to make the traffic regulations mean something. They have come to the conclusion, the same as officials have in many other cities, that it is useless to make a big flourish when putting new regulations into effect and then forget about them in a fortnight or so.

There are those in Toledo who insist upon disregarding regulations. They have seen others do it and have gotten into the habit themselves because, as they say in such instances, nothing happened. Having "gotten by" once they kept at it and, in so doing, they inspired others. These infractions involved not only the movement of traffic against lights, but parking and responding to tags. The result is that Toledo for the time being is engaged in trying to show the motorists that "the lights, the traffic signs and the yellow tickets do mean something."

By this time it is probable that Toledo realizes that there was laxity in the first place. What will it do after the present effort has lost its edge? Is it making this move as a permanent feature of enforcement or is it engaged in a temporary demonstration that will disappear in a few weeks?

The unfortunate part of all such efforts is that those who happen to violate the rules during the period of alertness are properly penalized. Those who pay no attention to the same rules before the enforcement started and after it stops, escape without a remonstrance, and in so doing are helping to proclaim to others that the regulations amount to nothing and need not be respected. There will be no more trouble under proper enforcement, if that enforcement is constant, than there is under non-enforcement. Enforcement of that character, enforcement that means something, is what brings respect.

DANIEL GUGGENHEIM

Long identified with mining activities and more recently interested in aviation, Daniel Guggenheim was widely known throughout the world. Extensive have been the operations of the family in South American countries, the western hemisphere, in fact, from Alaska to Chile being dotted with projects with which Daniel Guggenheim has been identified and in whose development he has played an important part.

His father came here as an immigrant and raised a family that has taken a most prominent place in the business activities of the country on sound lines and high principles. Not only because of his development of metal industries, his efforts in the nitrate industry, his promotion of tin mines and similar enterprises, did his name became widely known, but he was conspicuous for his philanthropies.

He saw great possibilities in aviation. He believed that it should be developed along sound lines for the business and economic welfare of the country and so deeply was he interested that he established a fund of $2,500,000 for the promotion of aeronautical education, the extension of the fundamental aeronautical science and the development of the commercial aircraft as an aid to business. That he was instrumental in making a big contribution to aeronautics, and especially to safer flying, is unquestioned.

Daniel Guggenheim was rated among the wealthiest men of this country. His money was not inherited, but came through hard work and successful enterprises. But while he amassed a large sum he likewise made large distributions, many of which were known and appreciated, but many of which will never be known. His death means a distinct loss in many fields of activity.

THIN ICE

"Why don't you wear galoshes?" asked an aggrieved masculine voice just back of Millicent. The owner of the voice grasped her arm firmly. "Fallin' all over yourself—"

Millicent looked up furiously at him. "I can walk very well alone, thank you," she snapped. And tripped upon the ice.

"There! You see?" catching her adroitly. "Maybe now you will let me pilot you across. You work for Benedict & Son, don't you? And you're on your way to lunch down the block, because it's the only presentable place around here. So am I."

"Indeed!" Millicent's tones were scornful. She had seen this masterful person before. No doubt he worked for Benedict & Son, too. Such an immense place that you couldn't know everybody there. And she was just one of many stenographers, although old Mr. Benedict often called her to take his dictation when his secretary was absent.

"I don't think I'll fall again," she stated suddenly aware that her very desire to maintain her balance was making her wabbly in the knees.

"No, don't worry about it. I won't let you fall."

And so they crossed the street together. They entered the restaurant together, too. And the waiter, anxious to please led the way to a little table for two.

"Like to work for Benedict & Son?" asked the young man, after they had given their orders.

"Yes. It's a very fine firm to work for," Millicent assured him. "Old Mr. Benedict is quite reasonable, and they say that his son, whom he's taking into the business, is just as fine. Goodness, a lot of the people in the firm are eating here today!" suddenly conscious of many sly glances sent her way.

"Only decent place around here," murmured the young man. "Have some more fish? So the old man isn't so bad, eh?"

"Well, he'd be pretty cross if he saw us sitting here and found out that we didn't know one another. He's death on flirt—on such things."

"None of his business," retorted the young man.

But just then a tall, stout figure loomed above them. Old Mr. Benedict himself.

"Er—" Millicent's mind outdistanced the lightning. "Mr. Benedict, gulping, "may I introduce a friend of mine, Mr. Smith."

Mr. Smith, as she called him, arose gravely and wrung old Benedict's hand with vigor. "Pleased to know you, sir."

"Eh?" Old Benedict turned purple. He glared at the young man, they glanced down at his bruised hand. "Well." He smiled ruefully. "Glad to meet you, Mr. Smith. I must be getting back to the office. Nice day."

"You might have helped me out," reproached Millicent, the instant was out of hearing.

"Thanks for the knockdown," drawled the young man. "I really did help you out. I didn't contradict you, at least. My name really is not Smith. Oh, I say—"

But Millicent had fled.

Three o'clock found her still thinking of him, however. A fine mess indeed. What if old Benedict should ask about him! There was the buzzer now.

She entered his office anxiously. If he should mention that man. Why, why there was that person, himself, cool as you please, standing right at her employer's desk.

"Come in," called old Benedict, rising. "I will be ready in a minute. Meanwhile, Miss Blaine, may I introduce you to Mr. Frank Benedict, my son?"

"So very glad to meet you," grinned the amiable young man. "I was just getting a vote of thanks for taking the firm's best stenographer safely over thin ice."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—Passing through Statuary Hall—some folks call it the "Chamber of Horrors"—in the capitol, as usual, the Bystander's eye was caught by that marble likeness of the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette which is Wisconsin's outstanding contribution.

It is a remarkable statue. Partly because it stands well out toward the center of the old house chamber; but more because of the striking pose of the seated figure, it always catches tourist attention.

The double circle of huge bronzes and marbles ranked around the walls merely seem to form a grotesque background for "Battle Bob."

Of them all his is the only statue touched with a semblance of life. As you look at it, it would hardly surprise you to see "Battle Bob" rise and say, "Mr. President," as he sought recognition in the senate.

Unparalleled

And what a day that would have been for the original LaFollette of Wisconsin could he have so risen and glimpsed the headlines of the paper which the Bystander clutched as he stood before the statue.

They told of the primary triumph of his second son, soon to be governor of the state. They bespoke the profound and lasting impression which that stocky, short-statured, sternfaced man who seems only poised a moment in that marble chair made on the political history of his state, of the nation, when he walked these echoing corridors in life.

If there is in American history a like case of political prestige passed down from father to sons, the Bystander does not know of it.

If there is any other American legislator whose 40 years of political labors have been carried on beyond his death, not in the cold type of history, but in the persons of the sons in whom he seems to live again, no one has pointed out that parallel.

Six Times Now

Immediately on the father's death, "Young Bob," his eldest son and namesake, took over that senate seat. Six successive times now Wisconsin has voted to keep a Bob LaFollette in that chair.

And Bob, junior, was the youngest man ever to enter the senate, barely within the constitutional age requirement.

That he long ago established himself as a power in the senate in his own right, yet hewing to his dead father's political philosophies, "Young Bob's" bitterest opponent would scarcely deny.

And now, barely five years after "Battle Bob's" death, the governorship he thrice held is to pass into the hands of his second son, "Young Phil."

The LaFollette tradition in Wisconsin already is more than 45 years old. And the brothers LaFollette today, Senator Bob and Governor-designate Phil, are hardly more than boys, young chips off the old block.

Rings for the cure of rheumatism are sometimes advertised. Wedding rings have been used to cure love for ages.

YOUR HEALTH

Business Speed And The Business Man's Health

By David O. Smith, M. D., F. A. C. P. Washington.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute.)

Some few years ago tuberculosis caused more deaths than any other disease. At present, more deaths result each year from cardio-vascular-renal disease than from any other malady. Disease of the heart, blood vessels and kidney constitutes a triad of interrelated subjective and objective symptoms known to the medical profession as cardio-vascular-renal disease. It is difficult to determine often times whether the heart, the arteries or the kidneys are first affected in this symptom complex. Frequently the first symptom noted is an increased blood pressure. Too often the first manifestation is a cerebral hemorrhage commonly called "a stroke" or apoplexy.

With sufficient care, the forerunners of these more serious and often fatal manifestations are detected and the disease arrested, or at least retarded in its progress. The medical profession has always been alert to the protection of the physical well being of the human race. Cardio-vascular-renal disease is a constitutional disease dependent on the patient's own habits and on inherited constitutional weakness of his tissues involved in the disease. It is not so easily controlled by the medical profession as infectious diseases in which the cause can be eradicated or the effect mitigated. The late General Gorgas, under whom I had the honor of serving with the surgical staff in Panama, won the fight against yellow fever malaria. Diptheria and typhoid fever too have been conquered. But the fight is being waged against the invading cardio-vascular-renal disease with the casualties still increasing every year.

The first against this disease is largely dependent on the patient—while he cannot choose the character of his inherited blood vessels, he can control his habits of influence on these constitutional tissues. In this respect he needs the frequent observation, counsel and advice of his physician.

The active alert business man in this age of competition is given to high speed production accompanied by anxiety for his success. During this stress and strain the vasomotor control of the nervous system exercises a pressor influence over the arteries causing an increase in blood pressure within them and an increased burden on the heart. This results in pathological changes in the arterial walls and in the heart and ultimately in the kidneys. I was called recently from my berth in a pullman car to see a man in his stateroom, where he had just suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He was soon transferred by ambulance to a hospital where under best medical care, I am informed he died 18 hours after the inception of the hemorrhage. His history was typical—an active alert business man 54 years of age, considered by his family as in the best of health, with only treatment by an oculist for a recent hemorrhage into the orbit which would suggest impending danger of a cerebral hemorrhage; the usual history of "hearty dinner" a few hours before the hemorrhage and the too frequent history of continued activity after the warning of a recent occurring hemorrhage without the care and advice of an internist. This man, who lived at the altitude of Chicago, is stated to have driven his own car to Boulder, Colo., where he took the train along the crest of the Continental Divide for Glacier National park. Apparently even his recreation was not under the advice of his physician.

Everyone should have a complete physical examination, with blood pressure reading, by his family doctor, at least every years, and if the blood pressure is increased or the urine contains albumin and casts, the patient should remain under frequent observation and advice of his doctor. Much can be done to retard the progress of cardio vascular-renal disease. There are no parasites to combat in this constitutional disease and the fight can be won only by the cooperation of the individual.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Sardinia.

Scarlet-clad horsemen, women in a riot of color—hues of red, blue, green and yellow—and handsomely robed priests nearly hidden from view by masses of pious pilgrims, recently formed a colorful scene at Tascus, Sardinia, where natives attended one of the principal Sardinian festivals.

"Although almost mile for mile the same size as New Hampshire, Sardinia is a land of contrasts," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Sardinians wear drab working clothes during the week days but on Sunday they fare forth in their best bib and tucker. Most of the men of the island don a sort of stocking cap and the women wear shawls, but only these are noticeable details in which the islanders are alike. Here one or two colors and a particular fashion predominate; there, another group of colors and another fashion are in vogue. None of the styles is modern, for the greater portion of Sardinia is still living in centuries past.

"The cities and villages also sharply contrast. Stroll down the streets of Alghero situated on the northeast coast, and you will imagine yourself in a Spanish town. The Catalans settled in Alghero and left an indelible mark on the architecture and in the language of the inhabitants. That the Pisans settled Sassari, is indicated by the Tuscan blood and language of its people. The inhabitants of the northern tip of the island, separated from Corsica by the seven-mile-wide Strait of Bonifacio, display a decided trend toward Corsican customs.

"And nearly all the remaining portions of the island are diversified. There is a conglomeration of languages. Villages but a few miles away from one another might be thought to be a thousand miles apart. This individuality is traceable to the centuries when each Sardinian village was the balliwick of an independent clan.

"When a traveler steps on the quay at Cagliari, the capital and largest city, he is impressed by the modern aspect of the island's principal gateway. Wide streets are coursed by tram cars; steel frame buildings peer over the waterfront, terrace above terrace; a network of copper wires leads to telegraph offices and to electric light bulbs dangling from imported street-corner brackets; and automobile horns vie with the grunts of sleepy ox-cart drivers.

"But this modern aspect is but a thin mask. From one of the modern streets one can throw a stone into a street of Sardinia's past. It is a mere slit between straggling rows of two, three, and four-story houses. No automobile horns sound there and the ox-carts have difficulty in passing. The street noises are different from those of the newer portion of the city. Women sitting in the doorways embroidering and weaving baskets attempt to make themselves heard above the yelling of children at play. Vendors of snails and sweetmeats have a vocal battle with these and crying babies who seem to protest taking their baths in washtubs on the front doorstep in full view of neighbors and passersby.

"At Cagliari's back door begin the mountains that all but make the island inaccessible from the eastern shore. Beyond them come the plains that end in the blue waters of the Mediterranean about 400 miles southeast of Barcelona, Spain.

"Busses traverse many Sardinian roads today, and railroads touch the larger towns. By either conveyance, Sardinia looms before the traveler as an interesting island. Villages struggle along steep hillsides, straddle knolls and nestle in verdant valleys. You pass at the foot of mountain peaks topped by the ruins of castles that once rang with throngs of royal merrymakers. You cross bridges spanning dashing mountain streams that taxed the skill of ancient engineers. At Cagliari guides will show you the remains of an amphitheater where, during Roman times, gay throngs cheered and booed the performances of men and animals.

"Even in Cagliari women still use their shawled heads to bear their burdens; and here as in the smaller villages one day a week blindfolded asses still plod around the flour mills tended by sturdy housewives as they did in ages past; and camera's eyes still feast upon the sight of boys and girls sitting on their doorsteps munching 18-inch discs made from a batch of flour that was milled on their mothers' last 'grinding day.'"

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

Prudent Spending To Help Business Within Meaning Of Thrift

"We must not overlook the fact that the standard of living of the American people is steadily improving. The bare necessities of life are not enough. We have our rightful conveniences, our comforts, our luxuries. In this way we are developing new industries as all as furnishing employment for more people and for more capital. All of this is within the meaning of true American progress and true American thrift. For America never goes backwards."

It was these words that S. W. Straus recently sought to use his widespread influence to encourage judicious, thrifty spending by the people of this country as an aid to business. Perhaps his words will be of help just now when every effort is being made to stimulate general business activity. He always urged that in times such as the present people should spend money with as much freedom as might be considered within the bounds of prudence from the standpoint of the individual.

He never advocated the widespread spending of money by the public simply to encourage business. He felt that the individual should always live within his means and at all times be prepared for the proverbial rainy day. He gave voice to the belief that the general expenditure of money by individuals for things they could not afford could result only in dangerous inflation and a situation of economic unsoundness. At the same time he advocated a policy of judicious spending by those who could afford to spend in order to help business. Particularly in times of business depression he believed that those who could afford to spend money freely in ways that would help relieve unemployment and promote better business should do so.

"Judgment" he pointed out, "must be used in deciding the proper balance to be maintained between spending and saving by the individual. We should not cultivate habits of miserliness, neither should we spend beyond our means. No man has the right to pauperize himself today and jeopardize his future economic independence under any circumstances or for any reason whatever."—By H. R. Daniel, Secretary American Society for Thrift.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Prohibition Results

Mr. Editor: A few quotations from an interview with Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army, contained in the Christian Herald issue of Sept. 27th, 1930, may be of interest to many of your readers:

"After 25 years spent in the United States I've had a chance to observe the situation, both before and after the 18th amendment came into effect. And I am convinced as a result that there is no part of the United States that has not been improved by the prohibition law!"

About the "good" old days of the licensed, law protected saloon, she says: "There's been a lot of loose talk going around about that. Before prohibition came, we used to have a horrible time of it, on the Bowery, every Saturday night, picking up the drunks (men and women), lying intoxicated in the gutters. A corps of stretcher bearers brought them in to our homes, where they could sober up without being robbed or murdered for their few remaining pennies. Stretcher bearers proved inadequate so we got to using wagons and carts. It was a common thing to collect from 1200 to 1800 in a single night. Prohibition immediately reduced this to 400, and after 12 years we now average only seven in all. Today, in our Memorial hall on the Bowery, we house 4800 men a week, and we do not have more than four or five cases of intoxication, or one in 1,000. Drinking has dropped 60 per cent. Applications for relief have dropped at our station 50 per cent. The slums are passing."

The above should be enough to convince every voter that his and her duty at the coming election is to put in office those who will keep prohibition on the statute book.

Yours truly,
NIL DESPERANDUM.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut.

Fitzgerald Manufacturing Company, Torrington.

The Fitzgerald Manufacturing company, with plants located at Torrington and Winsted, is one of the largest and most progressive of the manufacturing enterprises in northwestern Connecticut.

The history of the growth of this corporation is both interesting and romantic, and a true picture of the dogged determination of the true New Englander in following through in the ideals that lay the cornerstone for future success.

In the beginning of the present century, P. J. Fitzgerald and M. F. Fitzgerald, now president and treasurer respectively of this thriving concern, saw in the growing automobile business the big demand that eventually would be created for replacement parts. Being experienced metal workers, they soon built a small building and were manufacturing gaskets.

Almost immediately, it was apparent that the original quarters would not suffice and in 1910 larger quarters were obtained at the corner of Church and Railroad avenues. Shortly after this in 1913, it was thought advisable to broaden the manufacturing fields to other lines. The next step was the purchase of a large building of approximately 100,000 square feet in Winsted, where the manufacture of electric horns and other specialties was begun. This building formed the basis of the present Winsted plant.

From 1913 to 1918, the gasket business of the company outgrew its second home which together with the extension of the electrical lines to include motor driven appliances made necessary the building of a new and modern factory at the present site on North Main street, Torrington. From that time to the present, three separate additions have been made to the plant until now the factory at Torrington occupies 150,000 square feet in addition to the Winsted plant. During this time the corporation has increased its capital from a very modest sum to well in excess of $1,000,000.

The present appliance line, nationally known under the trade mark Star-rite, is well and favorably known to the American housewife. This Star-rite line is a very extensive one, and includes electrical equipment of ranges, urns, grills, and table stoves, as well as flat irons, motors, heaters and fans. For health and beauty there are Vim rays, vibrators, hairdryers, curlers, and for those who feel they must reduce—there are the exercises. In fact, the line offers a most complete selection of household table cooking, health and beauty electrical appliances.

The automotive gasket line, nationally known under the trade mark of Fitzgerald Never-Leak is complete, embodying all known types of cylinder head, manifold, ring gaskets, and treated fibre, as well as facilities for manufacturing special gaskets for any purpose.

From a very modest beginning, it will be seen that the Fitzgerald Manufacturing company has grown very rapidly. At present, the company has main offices in Torrington, and branch offices in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Toronto. In addition, it maintains a staff of salesmen in both lines, covering the entire country, as well as an export division.

The present officers of the company are: P. J. Fitzgerald, president; M. D. Fitzgerald, vice president; M. F. Fitzgerald, treasurer; B. G. Peck, secretary; T. B. Patchen, assistant secretary.

A man doesn't necessarily feel girlish when he makes his maiden speech.

Skin Kept Clear By New Laxative..

Now that doctors know how often pimples, blemishes, etc., come from clogged up systems there is really no excuse for having a bad complexion. Just do what men and women everywhere are doing and keep the system clean with Feen-a-mint, the modern chewing gum laxative.

This pleasant new corrective for constipation is just the thing to use for the ailments that come from harmful "intestinal bacteria" such as coated tongue, bad breath, or unusual tired feeling. When you notice the first symptom of these conditions, take one of these tiny white Feen-a-mint tablets.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store. —Adv.

UPSET NOT SERIOUS IF BOWELS GET THIS HELP

When you're out-of-sorts, headachy, dizzy, bilious, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite energy—don't worry. Its probably constipation.

Take a candy Cascaret tonight and see how quickly your trouble clears up. No more headache; no gas on stomach or bowels. Appetite improves; digestion is encouraged. Take another tomorrow night and the next night. Get every bit of the souring waste out of your system. Then see how bowel action is regular and complete.

Cascarets are made from cascara, which doctors agree actually strengthens bowel muscles. Ten cents at all drug stores.

VARIOUS MATTERS

Last quarter of 1930 begins.

It is daybreak now at 5:56.

Light vehicle lamps at 6:02 this evening.

The best moonlight nights during October will be from the 5th to the 11th.

Old Saybrook selectmen and registrars made 25 new voters at their last sitting.

A well child conference is planned for Thursday afternoon at the library in South Coventry.

Foley's almanac predicts: "Oct. 1st to 3rd, cool and frosty in northern and middle states."

Mackerel are so abundant that the new fish were selling in Norwich Tuesday at 8c a pound.

Pumps, chimneys, attics and cellars are being put in condition now for winter, by wise householders.

Up at Spring Hill, most of the wells are dry and hauling water is a real burden for the farmers.

Yom Kippur Thursday will bring numerous visitors to town, while others will join friends elsewhere.

"Brown October" will be rightly named this year—with so many sorry evidences of the parched season.

The cabinet of the Woman's guild of the United Congregational church is to meet in Miss Pullen's study Friday afternoon.

The oysters of the new season look big and fat and promise to be in steady demand with the coming of cool weather.

The new state road from Southbridge, Mass., is to connect with another good highway at West Woodstock's town line.

As is his annual custom, M. J. Golden of Old Saybrook has left to attend the World Series in Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Cottagers at Best View and Wintergreen Point continue to use their boats on the cove, some of them having very speedy craft.

Numerous relatives of members of the American Legion posts will accompany the Legionnaires to Boston for the big celebration.

Harvest supper, Fri. eve., Oct. 3, Baptist church chapel, Voluntown, Unity circle, No. 1250. Come and bring friends. 35 cents.—adv.

A Waterford man, Henry Robinson, is back at his home at Station 5, following a lengthy visit to Portland, Maine, and New Brunswick.

The big fields at Uncas-on-Thames, from which the crops have been gathered, have been plowed again, as a preparation for next year's sowing.

In a number of Norwich homes, furnace or oil fires were started Tuesday, when even during the afternoon the mercury did not get above 66.

REPUBLICAN NOTABLES TO ATTEND BIG COUNTY RALLY

Acceptances received for the New London County Republican club's rally and outing today (Wednesday) at Harvard quarters, Red Top, reveal that most of the state officials and party leaders will be among those present. The affair has been arranged as a New London county tribute to its native son, Lieutenant Governor Rogers of New London, nominee for governor, and that his home section has accepted the affair with considerable enthusiasm is indicated by the fact that of those who have sent in acceptances, almost 250 are residents of New London county. A total attendance of about 400 is looked for.

Lieutenant Governor Rogers is scheduled to speak upon the subject of Connecticut's Finances, and it is expected that he will reveal the details of the programme which has enabled Connecticut, under republican administrations of the past 20 years to maintain a "pay as you go" policy. The address will mark the opening of Mr. Rogers' campaign for the governorship and hence it will be awaited with considerable interest throughout the state.

The principal speaker will be Former Congressman James H. MacLafferty of California, intimate friend and adviser of President Hoover and he is expected to bring a direct message to Connecticut republicans from the nation's chief executive.

WILL MAKE ARGUMENTS IN PERKINS CASE TRIAL

Arguments are to be made this (Wednesday) morning in the superior court at New London before Judge C. L. Avery and a jury in the trial of the $10,000 damage suit of Francis H. Perkins, administrator, of Waterford, against Thomas Connell of New London.

The suit is brought for the death of Francis R. Perkins, 12, who died from injuries received on the night of Dec. 23, 1929, when struck by an automobile operated by the defendant on the Jordan road in Waterford.

Witnesses called to the stand Tuesday morning by Attorney G. C. Morgan for the plaintiff were Francis H. Perkins, the boy's father; Dr. Harold W. Wellington, Dr. Charles Kaufman, James T. Sherlock, G. Frank Merrill, Clarence H Eccleston, Fred L. Goss, Leon B. Mosier and State Trooper Michael J. Murphy.

In the afternoon, Attorney C. Hadlai Hull had one witness testify besides the defendant. This closed testimony and court adjourned to hear the arguments the following morning.

The jury hearing the case consists of the following: New London—Samuel B. Darrow, Orville E. Clark and C. Oscar Tracy; Stonington—George D. Johnson; Montville—John J. Doyle; Waterford—John Gallaher, Chester Brigham and George Gallup; East Lyme—Fred H. Smith, Walter Crocker and Frank Harris.

YOM KIPPUR OBSERVANCE IS TO BEGIN TODAY

Observance of Yom Kippur is to begin this (Wednesday) afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Community synagogue. The order of services will be as follows:

Wednesday, 5 p. m.—Kol Nidre, traditional hymn, three times; sermon by Rabbi Shabshelowitz in English; subject, "Melodies and Echoes of Kol Nidre Eves"; text of sermon: "Let us lift our hearts together with our hands to God in heaven." (Lamentations iii,41).

Thursday morning, 8 o'clock—Memorial services; 11:30, sermon in English; subject, "The Memory of the Past"; text of sermon, "Thou shalt let me know the path of life." (Psalms xvi,11). Musaph service, 1 o'clock; Mincha and Maftir Jonah, 3 p. m.; Rabbi Shabshelowitz will preach in Yiddish before the last service—N'eelah.

The services are concluded at sunset with one long tune of the Shophar.

NORWICH DELEGATION FOR AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION

That Norwich will be well represented at the national convention of the American Legion in Boston, October 5 to 8th, inclusive, is evident from the fact that already a dozen Legionnaires and their wives have made Boston hotel reservations for the three days of the convention. They are: Patrick J. McMahon, commander of Fletcher post, No. 4, this city, and Mrs. McMahon; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Neil; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Raymond; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lathrop; District Commander and Mrs. Joseph Bellefleur and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wilcox.

Others who are planning to attend the national parade are Carl Colt, John Lucia, Joseph Daley, Everett Morrill and Charles B. Gilbert.

D. A. R. STATE CONVENTION TO HAVE PROMINENT GUESTS

Many distinguished guests will attend the state meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which will be held today (Wednesday) at the Second Congregational church at New London. Greetings will be given the assemblage which is expected to number about 500, by Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, past president-general of the Sons of the American Revolution, as well as by prominent national officers of the D. A. R., and the organization of Children of the American Revolution.

FOUND EMPLOYMENT AGENCY CLOSED, MANAGER MISSING

HARTFORD, Sept. 30—(AP)—The first attempt of State Labor Commissioner Harry E. MacKenzie to examine an operator of an employment agency on charges that the job service had been exploiting unemployed ended in failure today, when operatives of the department found the agency closed and the manager missing. Hartford police have a warrant for Barney Kleebatt, one of the proprietors of the agency, the Keystone Employment exchange, charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Big Grass Fire

There was a big grass fire Tuesday afternoon about 2:30 in the lots between the railroad and Laurel Hill road across from the new county home buildings. It was said to have started from sparks from a locomotive. Men from the county home work and the fire apparatus and crew from the state hospital checked the blaze.

REPAIRS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS PUT BUILDINGS IN SHAPE FOR SEASON

As is the custom, the town school committee the past summer made a survey of the work necessary to be done on the school property of the town during the summer vacation and made specifications covering the separate jobs. These as usual were submitted to the local contractors and the work given in each case to the lowest bidder, all bids being opened by the committee chairman in the presence of T. J. Kelly, secretary of the board, at his office.

Knowing that, according to the records of the school board reported at the July meeting, sufficient funds remained in the school appropriation to cover all necessary work, the usual clause ("payment for this work will not be made till after the town meeting in October") was omitted in all specifications.

The following work was done at the schools:

Broadway—The usual repairing of doors and windows, changed over electric feed wire; repaired water controls on boilers; repaired and painted part of roof; re-cut the brown stone step at entrance; yard, sidewalk, buttment wall repaired on boys' side; all conductors repaired; all indirect airflues re-bricked; ceiling in basement repaired and plastered; two stairways in front of building repaired; painted and kalsomined ceilings, walls and woodwork of the eighth grade, kindergarten, first grade, front entrance, halls and stairways.

Prospect Street—New smoke pipe for heater, repaired and painted sections of roof; put up new conductors; repaired toilets and waterpipe.

Elizabeth Street—Painted side-walls from floor to hand-railing in auditorium, rear hall, ramps, and stairway passages; put chain instead of cord in 16 windows; repaired plastering where necessary.

Mt. Pleasant Street—Painted, varnished, and kalsomined ceilings, walls and woodwork in four class rooms, store room, hallways, stairways, and black-boards; put all new desks in first grade.

Taftville—Installed all new tubing and main supply pipe in boiler at lower building; repaired front fence and part of rear fence.

Town Street—Repaired roof and removed the old decayed flag pole; rebuilt two rear entrances; painted fire-escapes and iron fence; painted the entire outside of building two coats; ceilings, sidewalls, and woodwork were refinished in two rooms on the upper floor, and both toilet rooms; repaired the tower and patched the shingling on side walls of building before painting; put up new smoke pipe and put new grates in the boiler.

Sachem Street—New sink in boys' toilet; ceilings, sidewalls, and woodwork refinished in all of the rooms; new lock on the front door.

Central Avenue — Repaired and painted part of roof; many of the conductor pipes had to be replaced; changed over three class rooms.

Boswell Avenue—Repaired gutters on roof; scraped, and refinished all desks; in two rooms on top floor; new sash cord and glass reset in seven windows.

Samuel Huntington — Painted all down stairs, hall and corridor from floor to hand railing.

Broad Street—Rebuilt fence along Rockwell street on the James and Bogue property lines; painted teachers' room; part of front hall and sidewalls under blackboard in eighth grade; all new smoke pipe in boiler room.

Occum—Installed larger steam main in basement; two new coils of steampipe in north room on second floor.

Yantic—Repaired drinking fountains and toilets; painted front and rear halls and walls in toilets.

Hobart Avenue—Kalsomined sidewalls and ceiling of upper and lower halls; painted the front door.

Laurel Hill—Repaired gutters and conductors; painted and varnished ceilings, sidewalls and all woodwork in teachers' room; built new supply closet on second floor; repaired outside shed entrances; refinished throughout what has been a spare room; put in new seats to accommodate 30 pupils; changes necessary were made to supply heat for this spare room, and another radiator in the kindergarten; plastering patched in corridors.

Bishop—Painted all sash two coats on the outside.

West Thames Street—Painted both toilets two coats; built cupboards in four class rooms and supply room; repaired cellar window frames; installed new smoke pipe for heaters; painted all outside woodwork two coats; repaired and painted gutters on roof.

High Street—All rooms, hallways, stairways and toilets thoroughly cleaned, painted and kalsomined; all woodwork on the outside of this building and fence had two coats of paint; roof repaired; repaired fence all around the yard; wired for light in four rooms and toilets; new smoke pipe for heaters; new screens for basement windows; repaired storm sheds and outside stairs; new metal ceilings in kindergarten and grade two.

Beside the foregoing, at all the schools the janitors have washed and cleaned all floors, disinfecting each, cleaned and varnished all desks, chairs and any other furniture in their respective buildings.

SCHOOL TEACHERS ASKED TO HELP SCOUT WORK

School teachers of Norwich have been asked to become contributing members of the Boy Scouts of America, according to the local scout headquarters.

In a letter sent to the teachers during the past week a statement from James E. Russell, dean of American school men and women is included in which he says, "My friends, as a schoolmaster, I want to tell you that it is my honest conviction that our schools in America supported by the public for the public good will not be equal to the task of the next generation unless we incorporate into them as much as is possible of the Scouting spirit and the Scouting method, and in addition to that, fill up just as many as possible of the leisure hours of the boy with the out and out program of Scouting."

The work of the local Boy Scouts have been endorsed by the educational leaders of the city and it is hoped that teachers will help the work by becoming contributing members.

ACCOUNTANT CONFERS WITH WILLIMANTIC OFFICIALS

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 30.—(AP)—N. S. Silsbury, an accountant of the National Surety Bonding company, of New York, with which Frank P. Fenton, town clerk and treasurer, is bonded, today conferred with First Selectman William A. Buck and Fenton on the financial condition of the town of Windham.

The town's books are now being audited by the Walter T. Musgrave company which is a preliminary report last week announced an apparent shortage of about $34,000 in the town funds.

Neither Fenton nor Buck would divulge the nature of today's conference, while Silsbury said he preferred to withhold any comment on the town's financial condition until the completion of the audit.

SMALL FIRE LOSS IN CITY DURING SEPTEMBER

Although the Norwich fire department answered 22 calls during September, the total fire loss in the city for the month was but $500. There were two bell alarms, 12 telephone calls and 8 oral alarms for the four week period.

The two largest losses were a shed fire on Starr street, September 7th, loss $200, and a $100 loss at the home of James Fitzpatrick, on North Thames street.

OBITUARY

Joseph Hardwick

Joseph Hardwick of Quaker Hill, died late Tuesday afternoon at his home.

Mr. Hardwick suffered a breakdown about two months ago and failed to rally. Monday night he suffered a bad spell which left him very weak.

For some years Mr. Hardwick was engaged in the real estate business. Previous to that he was employed for many years as yard superintendent for the T. A. Scott company in New London, until the company merged with the Merritt-Chapman concern.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Cassie Scott, daughter of the late T. A. Scott, and a daughter, Mrs. Catherine Latimer, daughter-in-law of Frederick P. Latimer, of Hartford.

WEDDING

Smith—Taylor

At Mansfield Center parsonage Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Fannie M. Taylor was married to Elwin T. Smith, both of Norwich. The witnesses were Mrs. John Brownlee, of South Willington, and John Richardson, of Spring Hill. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones.

Inspected Navy Recruiting Station.

Lieut. Commander Carleton F. Bryant, United States navy officer in charge of all navy recruiting in the state with headquarters at New Haven, inspected the navy recruiting station at New London on Tuesday. He was very much impressed with the cleanliness of the office and the efficient way the recruiting officer handled all recruiting activities in this district.

BYRNAN CONCERT GIVEN BEFORE FINE AUDIENCE

An audience of about 250 appreciative music lovers enjoyed the appearance of a promising Norwich violinist, Henry Brynan, in a concert programme Tuesday evening at Slater hall under the auspices of the Norwich Rotary club and for the benefit of the John S. Blackmar fund of the club. Appearing with Mr. Brynan as accompanist was Dominic Tranzillo, who added much to the pleasure of the evening by his piano group.

Mr. Brynan displayed a tone that was sonorous and well rounded, playing with musicianly feeling and a pleasing command of technique that won the enthusiastic plaudits of his hearers and called him back for an encore number he concluded his final selection of the programme which was given as follows:

Sonatino Op. 137, No. 2, Allegro Moderator, Menuetto, Allegro, (Schubert).

Sonata Op. 12, No. 2, Allegro vivace, Andante piu tosto allegretto Allegro piacevole, (Beethoven).

MOHEGAN INDIAN HEIRS BRING MILLION DOLLAR SUIT

Making the claim that the descendants of Uncas and the Mohegan Indians have been prevented from using the so-called "Royal Burial Ground" of Uncas and the Mohegans, a 16-acre tract in Norwich in the Falls neighborhood, Edyth B. Gray of Groton, with others of the Mohegan Indian descendants, has brought a one million dollar suit against the state of Connecticut, the attorney general, the city of Norwich, the Masonic Temple corporation and others.

Attorney John H. Barnes is counsel for the plaintiff, who seeks a reconveyance of the property to her as trustee for the heirs of the Mohegan Indians and an order from the court for an accounting of the rents and profits from the property.

The tract in question is in the Sachem street neighborhood where there is an Indian cemetery plot to be seen with the monument to Uncas and headstones at the graves of other Mohegans. The neighborhood covered by the claim as to the royal burying ground is largely residential besides covering the Washington street location of the Masonic temple.

In part the complaint in the suit says:

3 That the premises sought to be recovered in this action are a specific reservation, all of the value of one million dollars, described as follows:

A plot of ground containing sixteen acres more or less, (survey map, metes and bounds, hereto) located in the township of Norwich, in what is now the city of Norwich, a short distance from the Yantic river and always and ever known as the "Royal Burial Ground" of Uncas and said people; and an easement—that of the right of passage to and from the Cove, so called, on said Yantic river to the burying place, or ground, and the further easement—the right to cut and use the wood growing on the ground contained in the first easement or passageway half-way up the slope.

4. Your plaintiffs further allege that notwithstanding the said grant and reservations aforesaid all of which was known to the defendants, and which your plaintiffs are prepared to show by diverse deeds duly recorded, and other good and sufficient evidence, the state of Connecticut, the said city of Norwich, a municipal corporation duly established, aforesaid, and the said town of Norwich, the said Masonic Temple corporation, and diverse persons at present unknown to your plaintiff combining and confederating together with the said state of Connecticut and the said city of Norwich and town of Norwich whose names, when discovered your plaintiffs pray they be at liberty to insert herein with apt words to charge them as parties defendant hereto, have trespassed upon said land aforesaid, and torn down the monuments, gravemarkers and boundaries of the land thereof, and confiscated and taken the land of said Mohegan Indians and still hold and claim title hereto.

5 And your plaintiffs further allege and say that the said reservations of sixteen acres aforesaid was dedicated as a burial-ground for said tribe of Indians, their heirs and assigns forever; and that by virtue of said dedication the said tribe of Indians aforesaid erected monuments and buried their dead in said reservation of sixteen acres and portions thereof, and the said plot of land was and had been used as their burying ground time out of mind; yet notwithstanding the rights of your plaintiffs in said ground the said state of Connecticut, the said town of Norwich and diverse other persons as aforesaid, have defaced and removed and destroyed said graves and monuments and boundaries thereof; and the said state of Connecticut, the said town of Norwich and city of Norwich and diverse other persons aforesaid have forbidden, refused and prevented your plaintiffs to bury their dead, the decendants of said tribe in said plot of ground, aforesaid, or to use the same.

Sued For $3,000.

The National Radiator Corp., of Johnstown, Pa., has brought suit against the Norwich Plumbing Supply House, Inc., of this city, for damages of $3,000. The action is brought in the superior court on the common counts.

RECREATION INSTITUTE AT SAMUEL HUNTINGTON SCHOOL

A recreation institute will be fostered by the New London County Farm Bureau on the evenings of October 1, 2, and 7, 8, at Samuel Huntington school, Norwich Town. Similar institutes are being conducted in other counties of the state during October.

William B. Jackson of the Playground and Recreation Association of America who has had wide experience along this line in every state in the union, is to conduct the class which at present will number more than 75. The personnel of the class is made up of representatives from the various towns of the county. Mr. Jackson will teach them group games and stunts which can be used on the programs of various organizations, such as farm bureau groups, granges, church entertainments, parties, etc.

Mr. Jackson is a native of Vermont, and incidentally a brother of the late Lieutenant Governor Jackson, who was drowned during the Vermont flood. In some of his classes in the west, people have traveled as far as 90 miles in order to learn new games and stunts which they could take back to their local communities.

The classes will start at 8 o'clock each evening scheduled and will close at 10 o'clock. The farm bureau office is ready to give further information to any one interested.

ACADEMY BOY WINS SCHOLARSHIP AT YALE

Daniel Joseph O'Neil, a Norwich Free Academy graduate, who is a freshman at Yale, is the New London county winner of Sterling Memorial scholarship, which covers full tuition in the freshman year at college. William Francis Lennon of Willimantic, a graduate of Windham high school, wins the scholarship for Windham county and Richard Austin Battles of New London, a graduate of Bulkeley high school, is awarded a scholarship for the state at large.

FORMER TAFTVILLE PASTOR WRITES OF PROGRESS HE SAW IN SOUTH AFRICA

Of interest to Taftville residents is a letter received by George N. Beardow of No. 2 Providence street, Taftville, from Rev. Fred R. Bunker of Wilton, Conn., which contains an interesting outline of his recent trip to Africa Rev. Mr. Bunker, together with his son, Rev. Wilfred Bunker, who is a missionary, at present stationed in India, substituted at the Taftville Congregational church for about three months following the death of Rev. Edwin Gordon Crowdis. The letter follows:

My Dear Friends:

Here I am at home again and it may be well to tell you about my journey to South Africa.

I had a very interesting and profitable trip. It was profitable for the complete rest and relaxation it gave me, and exceedingly interesting to go over my former trails and see the new scenes and meet new people and opportunities.

My journey outward to Durban, including a most interesting ten days' stay in England waiting for the right steamer, lasted from March 20th to April 27th—over quiet seas and with lovely weather throughout. My homeward journey by sea from Beira to New York, including four days in port at both Capetown and Southampton, occupied from June 7th to July 17th. Thus I had two and one half months of such rest and quietness as only an ocean voyage can give.

My stewards on the entire journey were kindness impersonated, and I had many most interesting and friendly travelling companions, who were ready to talk when I wanted to talk, and let me alone when I wanted to be quiet.

I had excellent food in great abundance and variety, comfortable beds, couches and chairs to loll in, good decks to tramp on for exercise, and no pressure of work or worry; and the inclination to make the most of my opportunity to forget automobiles, telephones, and appointments.

In addition to all was the consciousness that the good friends, who made it possible for me to take the journey, expected and required of me to make the most of my period of recreation. I had, therefore, an ideal journey and rest on my twofold voyage.

Six Weeks Land Journey

Between the two voyages I had a most interesting and satisfactory, though strenuous, land journey of about six weeks. I spent ten days in Natal, visiting several mission stations, travelling by automobile for the most part, over old trails which I had negotiated by night and by day, in rain and sunshine, on horse, bicycle, and Ford car, for many years. My mind and heart overflowed with beautiful memories, vivid recognitions of old experiences and places, the glorious scenery and sunshine, and the joy of seeing and being in lovely Natal again.

Then there were old friends and new friends meeting me with a wonderful welcome and friendliness, by letters, telegrams, and warm hand-clasps—yes, and with words of appreciation, which are most gratifying if not always deserved. I thanked God for the old friends and past experiences; and my heart thrilled at the new friends and the great service which they are performing, in conserving the past and grasping the future opportunities. In face of the almost tragic and sudden depletion of the missionary staff by death and removals and retrenchment, these fine Zulu leaders are shouldering the mission burdens, and with inadequate numbers and support are holding things together, hoping and trusting for improvement in the ability and policy of the American Board in standing by the Zulu church which it has established in South Africa.

My burden carried from Natal, was that, while appreciating that great and blessed results had been accomplished, greater and more blessed awaited fruition if the work is adequately supported for a few years longer, until the Zulu church can get the strength and train leadership to bear its entire burden.

Both the missionaries and native leaders are carrying tremendous burdens of responsibility and facing challenging opportunities in these closing years of the century of the American Board's work in Natal. It made me wish that I was young again and had another lifetime to give to the Zulu people.

Then there came the 2,000 miles of railway journey from Durban to Beira through Johannesburg and the cities of Rhodesia. Durban, Johannesburg, and all the South African cities are growing rapidly in population and power. This is a growing country. Fine businesses, farms, factories, and residences, are increasing rapidly. The transportation by automobile, bus, and auto-lorry, over many and better roads, is almost startling to one who has been away from the country for a decade. Travel has been reduced from days to hours, and has been extended to an unimaginable extent.

Not only Capetown, Durban, and Johannesburg, but the smaller cities are now equipped with all the modern conveniences and comforts of electrical power. The radio, the telephone, and the auto vehicle, bring the world to the heartstone of even the dweller in the backveldt. One would hunt, almost in vain, to find the isolation that we experienced in the pioneer days of Rhodesia. One old friend, who still rides a donkey, though he could afford a Cadillac, is the talk of the countryside because of his preference.

Only the glorious skies and sunshine, and the mountains and valleys and forest sand veldts are unchanged. I saw a fine koodoo bull (a rare right now), a few duikers, and several herds of baboons, but they are curiosities now in these travelled parts, giving one a thrill if he sees them.

Even The "Reds" Are There

Even the cry of "Red" is in the land, so up to date is it? The "Bolshivik" has appeared as a disturber of the peace in the labor districts. In Durban and Johannesburg the soap-box agitator has a great hearing on Sundays and holidays; and way back in the hills of P. E. A., after missionary companions and myself had lunched at a hotel and were driving away, an "old-timer" rushed out and shouted, "Look out for the bolshivik." That was his idea of the missionary.

At Mt. Silinda I found that a great change had taken place in a generation; then a few huts, now a large settlement and an efficient modern institution; then tallow dips, now an electric plant just installed; then only unclad pagans, now a fine group of civilized Christian people in homes of their own; then only foundations, now the equipment for a vast work of propagating the faith far afield from this center, by home, school, and church.

Immediately my knowledge that the field was great and the laborers few was intensified by statements regarding the pressure of great new opportunities for service coming to the mission from all directions. Native chiefs, planters, and the government were uniting in calls and even demands that the mission should enter new and untouched fields. Here was no possibility of withdrawal or of ceasing of endeavor because of past achievement or work accomplished. Here was no overlapping of mission societies. Here everything was new and pressing, with fresh demands to occupy fields exclusively the mission's own responsibility.

The Portuguese East African problem was as pressing as ever. A vast new mission field had just opened to the west in Ziki's country. The school and church and evangelistic demands of the central fields about Chikore and Mt. Silinda had increased manyfold within a year or two. The mission needed a greatly increased support to meet its essential obligations, and yet was facing the demand for disastrous retrenchment and retreat. The government was expressing increased appreciation, appropriating increasing grants in aid of their educational work in Rhodesia, and was urging them to enlarge their field of service with promised increasing support for the future; but they were facing warnings of possible rebuke if they did not cut down the work already begun.

Here the problems of mission policy are the raw and clamoring demands for relief and rescue of real people. To the missionaries it is not a question of what might be if they had ample means, but of what must be done, or duty left undone, and obligations unmet. It is necessary to get this view of the situation if one is to understand why these men and women, who have their hands already full of immediate duties, are everlastingly grasping at new and greater opportunities, and insisting on being supported in meeting them. Here the missionary movement is not filtered through various organizations endeavoring to affect the dreams of good and complacent people, as a theoretical Christian obligation; but is a vital and vivid demand for immediate action for the redemption of people without hope and without God in the world.

I found myself immersed in this familiar atmosphere at Mt. Silinda. I was taken to Chikore, to Gogoi, and to Machemeje, where the same atmosphere prevailed, and wherever I went the Macedonian call pressed in upon me. There was no escaping it out there.

In Rhodesia

Here again in Rhodesia I rejoiced in my old companions and I became confident and hopeful as I became acquainted with the younger men and women on whom the future depends.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Despite bearish reports throughout the day about his ailing back, Frankie Frisch, keynote man of the St. Louis Cardinals, will take the field tomorrow when President Hoover tosses out the first ball for the opening world's series battle between the National league champions and the Philadelphia Athletics, two-time American league titleholders and present world's champions.

Frisch's backache, diagnosed as a plain case of lumbago, was the principal topic of conversation today as the baseball brigades answered the rallying call to arms for the season's big climax. When the one-time Fordham flash, whose second base work and hitting is of the utmost importance to the hopes of the Cardinals, did not appear for the final practice at Shibe park, reports circulated quickly that he might not be in condition to start the series.

Frisch Says He's O. K.

It looked very dubious to the experts when they discovered Frisch in bed at his hotel, surrounded by medicinal lamps, bottles—cures contributed by well-meaning friends and a staff of aides that would do credit to a hospital—but the ball player declared the situation greatly exaggerated.

"I will play tomorrow, backache or no backache," Frisch declared. "I could have been out there working today and as a matter of fact I wanted to, but the doc insisted I take it easy, in order to be sure of being on the job for the first game."

The medical verdict was that Frisch, although not in first class condition, would be able to perform. Manager Charles (Gabby) Street echoed this opinion, at the same time preparing to meet an emergency.

The loss of Frisch would be a stunning blow to the chances of the Cardinals, whose defense is largely built around the brilliant second baseman, in addition to which his bat is considered one of the most potent in the lineup. It will be a severe handicap, anyway, with his actual playing condition in doubt until he gets into uniform. Should Street be forced to make a switch, he will move Earl (Sparky) Adams over to second base from third and put the handy utility man, Andy High, on third.

Rommel May Start Game

Aside from the case of Frisch, the only other major uncertainty in connection with the opening game concerns the pitching selection of the Athletics. Most of the experts believe it will be the No. 1 man of the A's staff, Robert Moses Grove, but many of them lean to the opinion that Connie Mack will pull another world's series surprise and assign Knuckleball Eddie Rommel to the opening job.

If Mack had made up his mind, he did not indicate it today. Not even his closest counselors and associates professed to have the slightest idea who would oppose Burleigh Grimes, veteran spit-ball star, who had been definitely chosen to do the hurling for the Cardinals.

If Mack has any idea of placing the main burden on Grove and his big right-handed ace, George Earnshaw, he must start one or the other tomorrow. He might attempt to win quickly with these two by starting Grove in the first game, Earnshaw in the next two games, split by an interval of travel to St. Louis, and then come back with the famous southpaw in the fourth contest. On the other hand, Grove might be held back exclusively for relief duty, with the idea of having him save as many games as necessary or possible with his blinding speed, after the starting efforts of Rommel, Shores, Walberg, Mahaffey or even Quinn were exhausted.

Grimes to Start for Cards

Street's pitching plans are cloaked in no such mystery. The Cardinal pilot has indicated he will follow Grimes with Flint Rhem, fast right-hander, and Wild Bill Hallahan, faster left-hander. The veteran Jess Haines may be the fourth starting pitcher, unless Grimes is ready to work again by the time the fourth contest rolls around.

The Cardinals believe Grove is the only rival moundsman they need to worry about and predict that if they tame the southpaw ace, the series will be over in short order in their favor.

They point out that Earnshaw has not gone so well in his appearances in the closing weeks of the season. They do not fear any of the other Mack twirlers, but so far as that goes the Cubs did not fear Howard Ehmke last year until he had fanned 13 of them in the opening game.

Athletics Are 5 to 4 Favorites

The Athletics, nevertheless, are favorites and the odds of around 5 to 4 in their favor will lengthen if it develops tomorrow that the Cardinals cannot rely on the usual brilliancy of Frisch's all-around play. The main factors weighing the "dope" in support of the A's are:

(1) The confidence aroused by their present hold on the world's championship, plus the crafty leadership of their manager, Connie Mack.

(2) Possession of perhaps the greatest pitcher in baseball, Lefty Grove.

(3) The backstopping of Mickey Cochrane, greatest catcher in the game.

(4) The cleanup wallop of Al Simmons, outstanding slugger of the contending teams.

Cardinals Radiate Confidence

So far as the Cards are concerned, no one of these reasons or all four disturbs the confidence and fighting spirit with which they have rolled into the championship fray. The team that so convincingly outstripped one of the strongest National league fields in years does not think it can be stopped.

"If the Cardinals play against the A's the way they did against Brooklyn in the series that sped them to the top, I will be satisfied," said John Arnold Heydler, president of the National league and leader of the forces hopeful that the three-year winning streak of the American league will be brought to an abrupt finish. Heydler feels that the greatness of the St. Louis club has been tested and not found wanting.

The Cards not only have manifested their fighting spirit under heavy fire this year, but they have readily apparent assets in the quantity as well as quality of their pitching staff, the sustained power of their batting attack right down the line, and the excellence of their infield defense, assuming Frisch can hold up his full shape. The Red Birds appear unquestionably the strongest National league entry since they last beat the Yankees in 1926 under Rogers Hornsby.

Snappy Workout for Cards

There was plenty of snap and spirit in the workout of the Cardinals this afternoon at Shibe park, where they put on a brisk batting and fielding drill after the Athletics had engaged in a two-hour drill in some secrecy. Al Simmons, the big gun of the A's, remained to do a little joshing with such rivals as Grimes and Bottomley. Al was solicitous, too, about the condition of Jimmy Wilson, Cardinal backstop who injured an ankle several weeks ago and is not expected to play in the series, unless something happens to the heavy-hitting Gus Mancuso.

The first Cardinal on the field was Taylor Douthit, fleet centerfielder, and his initial act was to inspect the fly-catching conditions under the sun that proved so blinding a year ago to Hack Wilson of the Cubs.

"Douthit has played worse sunfields than this and he will have no trouble," remarked Street as his centerfielder galloped around spearing high-hit balls.

So far the debate over rival chances has been much more brisk than the rush for tickets, despite the interest in the opening game and the presence of President Hoover with a party including many cabinet officers and other government officials.

Speculators did little or no business today, with the supply of pasteboards apparently well in excess of the demand. Unless there is a belated attack on the turnstiles tomorrow, Shibe park may not be filled to its increased capacity of 33,000. Three thousand bleacher seats, selling at $1 each, go on sale tomorrow morning. On top of the houses facing the park on 20th street, temporary bleachers have again been erected, to accommodate several thousand spectators, but this enterprise was not very profitable a year ago.

STREET SEES NO SENSE IN MACK'S "SECRECY STUFF"

ST LOUIS, Sept. 30.— (AP)— When Connie Mack said he didn't know who would pitch the World Series opener for his Athletics, Gabby Street was willing enough to tell all interested that Burleigh Grimes would pitch for the Cardinals. In fact, Gabby answered all the questions, even down to how his pitchers would attempt to fool Foxx, Simmons, Cochrane and the rest of the Athletics.

Gabby just couldn't see the percentage, if any, in "this secrecy stuff."

City Registrar Jack Grosse, who puts on his high silk hat and goes down to the station when important persons are scheduled to visit St. Louis, alert as usual, communicated with Street to determine Gabby's wishes when the Cardinals return home from Philadelphia for the third game of the series.

Any celebration, Gabby informed him, will be frowned upon. Furthermore, Gabby said, the time of the train's arrival and the point where they will leave the train will not be revealed.

Explaining this "secrecy stuff," Street said the players need "plenty of rest."

The Usual Stuff

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30—(AP)—Pre-battle statements of the rival managers to the Associated Press:

Connie Mack, Athletics: "It looks like a very good and I hope very interesting series. We all like a good contest. My boys are all in good condition. We expect to win but if we don't, there will be no alibis."

Charles Street, Cardinals: "This is just another series for us, no tougher, if as tough as those we went through to win the pennant. Our pitchers are all in great shape, starting with Grimes, and the whole team is confident. So am I."

CUBS HEAVY FAVORITES TO WIN CITY SERIES

CHICAGO, Sept. 30—(AP)—A season's debate over the merits of the downtrodden White Sox and the somewhat haughty Cubs drew to a climax tonight as the teams finished preparations for their interesting series for the baseball championship of Chicago.

The series opens tomorrow at Comiskey park, home of the White Sox, and continues until one team wins four games. Rogers Hornsby and his Cubs were heavy favorites, but a hard fought series was anticipated because of the admitted superiority of White Sox pitchers and their top heavy record of victories over the 1929 National league champions in the past.

More than 32,000 were expected to attend the first game of the series.

Manager Hornsby tonight indicated he would send either Pat Malone, his fire ball ace, or Bud Teachout, his young southpaw, to the mound in the opening battle. Manager Donie Bush of the White Sox expected to employ his knuckle ball ace, Teddy Lyons. Malone beat the White Sox twice in the 1928 series, which the Cubs won but did not defend in 1929 because of their participation in the fall classic last year.

Except for pitching and left field, the Cubs admittedly had a wide edge on the White Sox, who finished seventh in the American league. The big bats of Hack Wilson, Kiki Cuyler, Riggs Stephenson, and Gabby Hartnett gave them a superior attack and their defense also looked better than that of their Southside neighbors.

CATCHER'S ERROR IS BIG BREAK FOR ROCHESTER

PARKWAY FIELD, Louisville, Ky., Sept. 30—(AP)—A third strike caught on the first bounce and apparently noticed by nobody except the batter proved the turning point in today's little world series game. It gave the Rochester Internationals a four to two advantage over the Louisville American association representatives. Rochester won, 8 to 6, and now needs but one more victory to win the series.

In the eighth inning, Louisville leading 5 to 4 Worthington tripled with one out. Penner, who had relieved Marcum for Louisville, struck out Collins and Wilson, but catcher Barnes caught the last strike on the bounce and failed to throw to first. The Louisville players moved in as though the inning was over, then saw the alert Wilson racing for first and clustered themselves around home and third. Wilson dashed to second.

Florence came up and singled to right to put the Red Wings a run ahead. Pitcher Berly banged a triple to right and Florence scored. Berly was out trying to stretch his hit into a home run.

Brown's single and Pepper's single in the ninth gave Rochester another run. The Colonels rallied to tally one in the ninth on a base on balls to Herman and a single by Marcum who after being batted out in the sixth had gone to right field.

JIMMY QUINN TO BOX LABERA IN PRELIMINARY

Jimmy Quinn, local featherweight, who made such a good showing recently against Rene Peloquin will box one of the six-round preliminaries to the Mays-Aguilar main bout at the Thames Arena in New London on Friday night. Quinn will stack up against Johnny LaBera of Waterbury, a boy who holds verdicts over Frankie Traynor of New Haven and Nick Christy of Bristol. The Waterbury boy is reported to be a tough youngster who will give the local favorite a busy evening.

Another eastern Connecticut boy who will show at the bouts will be Joe Russo of Westerly who meets Young Miguel of the Coast Guard Academy. The opening four-rounder will bring together Carmen Knapp, New Haven, former state amateur lightweight champion and Benny Gallinis, lightweight champion of the Coast Guard.

CITIZENS AND VELVETMEN CLASH AGAIN SUNDAY

The Polish Citizens, facing the loss of much prestige and probably championship aspirations, will tackle the J. B. Martin nine in the second game of their three-game city series Sunday afternoon at Martin park. The Cits, who won the title of the City league and then went on to trim the New London Kaceys City league winners in the Whaling City, in three out of four games, were routed by the Velvetmen last Sunday, 11 to 4 in a game which saw them go completely to pieces, committing six errors behind Boots Greene. Sunday it may be different if they can return to the form they showed against the Kaceys.

McFARLANE LEADS FIELD IN WESTCHESTER OPEN

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y. Sept. 30—(AP)—Willie MacFarlane, veteran pro from the Oak Ridge Country club, Tuckahoe, N. Y., led the field with 148 for the first 36 holes of the 72-hole Westchester open golf tournament today.

MacFarlane put together rounds of 76 and 72 to lead Tom Creavy of Tuckahoe by two strokes. Creavy, after turning in a brilliant 70 for the first 18 holes needed 80 this afternoon and totaled 150. Bobby Cruickshank of Purchase held third place with 151.

Johnny Farrell of Mamaroneck finished well down in the list with 158 as did the veteran Mike Brady.

A Challenge

The Boys club football team of New London wishes to challenge any fast 150 to 160 pound team in Norwich and vicinity. Last year they had a good team, trimming the Speed Boys, Trojans and other fast teams.

For games address John Callahan, 53 Waller St., New London. They would particularly like to meet either Montville or Jewett City.

Mistaken Identity

Rotund and slightly inebriated, he stood swaying uncertainly on his short, but none-the-less rugged legs waiting for a taxi-cab to take him into town. It had been a large evening and every little thing was viewed through rose-colored glasses. He was in a friendly spirit toward both man and beast, evidencing a particular fondness for kitties.

The taxi arrived in due course of time, as all taxis do. He had just climbed into the car and the driver was about to start when he noticed a pretty little black and white kitty nosing around in the gutter. His insatiable love of feline femininity and his fear that the kitty might get run over by an automobile caused him to tell the driver to halt. Out of the car rolls the man and heads in the general direction of the kitty. The kitty, seeing the man approaching and apparently having no love for rotund men when they are in their cups, started off to a retreat in back of a tree.

Feeling that his interest in the welfare of the cat was not appreciated by said cat he determined to force his attentions upon the animal for its own good. He stalked unsteadily toward the tree approaching the tree from the opposite side from that on which the animal disappeared. He stealthily peered around the trunk of the tree. Yes, there was the kitty. Now he had her. He made a quick grab for the kitty who turned and instead of taking flight stared him steadily in the eye. The inebriated individual stopped short in his tracks, both hands clasped to his eyes and his breath coming in short gasps. And the gentle night breezes wafted an aroma through the neighborhood of Second street that was pungent and permeating.

"By gal, she no kitty, she skunk," ruefully commented the suddenly sobered citizen as he groped his way into the taxi cab, much against the protestations of the driver. Seated in the taxi the highly perfumed gentleman was brought to town, his remarks regarding cats and their counterparts being as strong as the odor which was filling the cab.

Not satisfied to be alone with his clinging fragance he entered a restaurant in the city upon his arrival and forthwith there was a sudden exodus of patrons from the place. Today, the man is socially ostracized and the taxi-cab is going through a very thorough process of deodorizing.

"NO DECISION" BOUTS URGED BY PHILADELPHIA ARENA

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30. —(AP) — Due to several unpopular decisions of the judges and referee, the Arena corporation today advocated a return to no decision boxing in this city.

In a letter to Frank Wiener, chairman of the Pennsylvania state athletic commission, Peter Tyrell, matchmaker at the Arena, called attention to the outcome last night of the Eddie Shea-Lew Massey bout, and said that the demonstration which followed the decision had proved "once again" that awarding of official decisions was a detriment to the sport. In the opinion of the experts at the ringside and most of the fans, Shea had much the better of the battle, but the officials gave the decision to Massey.

The letter pointed out that the McBride act, which governs boxing in Pennsylvania permits decisions by referees and judges but does not make them compulsory and that if permission to hold no decision bouts was forthcoming the new system would be started next Monday night in the bout in which Babe Hunt and Jack Renault take part.

CARNERA TAKES ON FOUR IN EXHIBITION

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 30.— (AP) —Primo Carnera, giant Italian fighter, boxed six exhibition rounds with four heavyweights tonight as part of the fight program at the Arena. He stepped around with Jack DeMave and Charlie Anderson for two rounds each and fought one round with Dan Risko and another with Sid Taylor.

Eddie Burare Jacksonville, 125, defeated Jim Bones, Bridgeport, 125, in one of the five six-rounders on the card. In the other six round bouts, Young Grenada Hartford, 121, defeated K. O. Morgan, Stamford, 121; Sid Lampe, Baltimore, 129 1-4, defeated Nick Pettite, Bridgeport, 131; Frankie Traynor, New Haven, 129, outpointed Romeo DuBois New Haven, 128; and Tommy Jarrett New Haven, 133, knocked out Alberto Leon, Hartford, 134 1-2, in the fourth round.

Izzy Kaplan Charged With Assault

MERIDEN Sept. 30,— (AP) —Izzy Kaplan, Meriden pugilist and brother of Louis 'Kid' Kaplan, former world's featherweight champion, was arraigned in superior court today on a bench warrant charging him with an attempted assault on a West Haven girl on September 4. He pleaded not guilty and was held for trial next week in $2,000 bonds.

EIGHT SOCIETIES WILL PARTICIPATE IN LEFTY DUGAS DAY PARADE

That Taftville is out to give Lefty Dugas a royal welcome home is evidenced in the announcement that eight of the Taftville social and fraternal organizations are to participate in the parade that will open the festivities on Saturday afternoon. The parade is to be one of the big features of the day's activities in honor of the home town boy who made the grade in big league baseball.

The parade is scheduled for 1 o'clock and there will be bands and everything that goes to make up a real time. There are expected to be nearly a thousand of the village folk in line. The organizations that will make up the parade are: The American Legion post, St. Jean the Baptist society, St. Louis society, Army-Navy club, Knights of Columbus, Ponemah Wheel club, Foresters and Lafayette club. Besides the organizations will be the members of the two ball teams that will furnish the entertainment later in the afternoon. Other features will be introduced as plans for the parade near completion.

Jimmy Trollard has announced that Johnny Tillman, pitcher for the Wilkes-Barre team of the New York-Pennsylvania league will be on the mound for his club. There are no announcements forthcoming as to the probable make-up of the Shyma team.

Lefty Dugas arrived home last evening from Pittsburgh having been called here by the death of his sister-in law.

MAJOR LEAGUE CLUBS DRAFT 21 FROM MINORS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.— (AP) —Selection of Stewart Bolen, crack left-handed pitcher of the Baltimore Orioles, by the Philadelphia Nationals, and Wiley Moore, right-handed veteran pitcher of the St. Paul club, by the Boston Red Sox, tonight featured the annual draft meeting of the major leagues, presided over by Baseball Commissioner Landis.

Altogether, 21 minor leaguers were acquired under baseball's selective system, which has been the source of frequent clashes between the majors and minors. The prices paid for the drafted players scale down from $7,500, the price for men taken from the three "AA" circuits, International, American association and Pacific Coast league.

The Boston Braves drafted the most, three players, including Earl Sheely, first baseman of the San Francisco Seals who hit .415 in the Coast league this year.

The New York Giants obtained the former Florida football star, Tom Nash, who has been outfielding for Nashville in the South Atlantic association.

The Detroit Tigers and Pittsburgh Pirates did not make any selections.

The complete list of selected players:

National league:

Phillies—Stewart Bolen, southpaw pitcher, Baltimore; Fred Koster, outfielder Little Rock.

Cincinnati — Robert Asbjornson, catcher, Nashville; Frank Sigafoos, infielder, Los Angeles.

Boston—Earl Sheely, first baseman, San Francisco; William R. Dreesen, third baseman, Springfield, (Mass.). Roy W. Ieubbe catcher, Charlotte, N. C.

Brooklyn—Clyde Day, pitcher, Kansas City; Jim Pattison, pitcher, Macon, Ga.

New York—Hugh Pickering, third baseman, Birmingham, Ala.; Tom A. Nash, outfielder, Nashville.

Chicago — Richard Whiteworth, pitcher, Fort Worth, Tex.

St. Louis—Albert J. Moore, Buffalo, N. Y.

American League:

Boston—Wiley Moore, pitcher, St. Paul; J. B. Brillheart, southpaw pitcher, Minneapolis.

Chicago—Fred Eichrodt, outfielder, New Orleans.

St. Louis Browns—Frank Waddey, outfielder, Memphis.

Cleveland—William Hunnefield, infielder, Toledo.

New York—Phil Weinert, southpaw pitcher, Louisville.

Washington — Baxter Jordan, first baseman, Newark.

Athletics—Ed W. Phillips, catcher, Toronto.

VETERAN OUTFIELDERS FOR WORLD'S SERIES TUSSLE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30—(AP)—Only one of the outfielders likely to start world's series games is a stranger to the baseball classic. George Watkins, right fielder of the Cardinals, is playing his first season of major league ball. The other members of the sextet, Al Simmons, George (Mule) Haas and Edmund (Bing) Miller of the A's and Charles (Chick) Hafey and Taylor Douthit of the Cards, have smelled powder before.

Hafey and Douthit particularly will welcome an opportunity to improve upon their past performances. Neither contributed much hitting in the 1926 series, won by the Cardinals from the Yankees, and they ran together chasing a fly ball from Herb Pennock's bat. Douthit was out for the rest of the games but Hafey came back after taking a count.

In in the ill-fated St. Louis series of 1928, Hafey hit only .200 and Douthit's performance at bat was so impotent, he was benched.

On the other hand Simmons, Haas and Miller all distinguished themselves in the last series. Simmons' hitting was timely and he scored the winning run of the final game on a double by Miller. Haas tied the score in the ninth inning with a home run.

Simmons' work this year has been even better than that of 1929, and he is the outstanding performer of all the outfielders on the two clubs. His batting average of .378 places him near the top of the American league ranking list and he is an accomplished fielder.

Hafey, troubled for a time with a recurrent eye affliction, was again in his stride in the closing days of the National league race and played an important part in the late drive of the Cards. Hafey can drive a ball about as far as any player in his league and his batting average is .340.

Douthit is given the highest praise his fellow players can bestow when they say he can "go get 'em." There are not many outfielders in either league who can be classed with Douthit as a ball-hawk. Haas, his rival, has had a comparatively poor year and has been out with injuries. The two centerfielders are not hard-hitters, their averages being about the same, a few points under .300.

The hitting of Watkins has been a feature of the National league race. The Rochester recruit, conceded only an outside chance in the spring to force his way into the outfield lineup, has batted .368. While he claims no distinction as a sensational fielder, his fellow players regard him as dependable.

Miller, the A's right fielder, is a veteran, making up in consistence anything he may lack in brilliance. Over a stretch of nine years in the American league he has a batting average of .312. His mark of .368 in the last world's series was surpassed only by Dykes and Cochrane, who clubbed their way into the select .400 class.

The Cardinal reserves are more numerous. George Fisher, who joined the club from the International league by way of the Giants, has batted .374. Ray Blades, who doubles as a player and coach, is still a great fielder and Ernest Orsatti holds himself in readiness for outfield or infield emergency calls.

The A's have in reserve, the veteran, Homer Summa, and Jim Moore, a recruit from Texas who got under the wire just in time to be eligible for the series.

HAS GREAT CONFIDENCE IN GRIMES AS A PITCHER

A local baseball fan, whom everybody knows, has such faith in the pitching ability of Burleigh Grimes that he is backing this faith with cold cash to the tune of $500, or any part of it, if he can get takers. Many plays his money on his hunches and it has been proven that they are pretty nearly right as some of the boys have found out to their sorrow. However, he stipulates that unless Grimes starts he will not risk a nickel. To prove his judgment he left the cash with the sports department.

GABBY STREET PROVES TO BE ANOTHER "MIRACLE MAN"

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30—(AP) — The baseball world tonight hailed a new "miracle man."

Charles "Gabby" Street earned the title today when he brought his St. Louis Cardinals triumphantly through one of the most heated National league pennant races on record and took a place alongside George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves in 1914, as one of baseball's immortals.

Sixteen years ago Stallings led his team from nowhere in mid-season to a league title in October. Street tonight had duplicated that feat. The Red Birds have yet to win the world's series as the Braves did in 1914. In any event the knothole gang of today will hear and read about "Gabby" years hence.

A month and a half ago, all but a few considered the Cardinals out of the league race. Street was one of those few, and his "never say die" spirit kept his hopes alive.

With the Red Birds some dozen games behind the league leaders the first of August, "Gabby" kept plugging away, always cheerful, always optimistic. Now another league pennant is to float over Sportsman's park here.

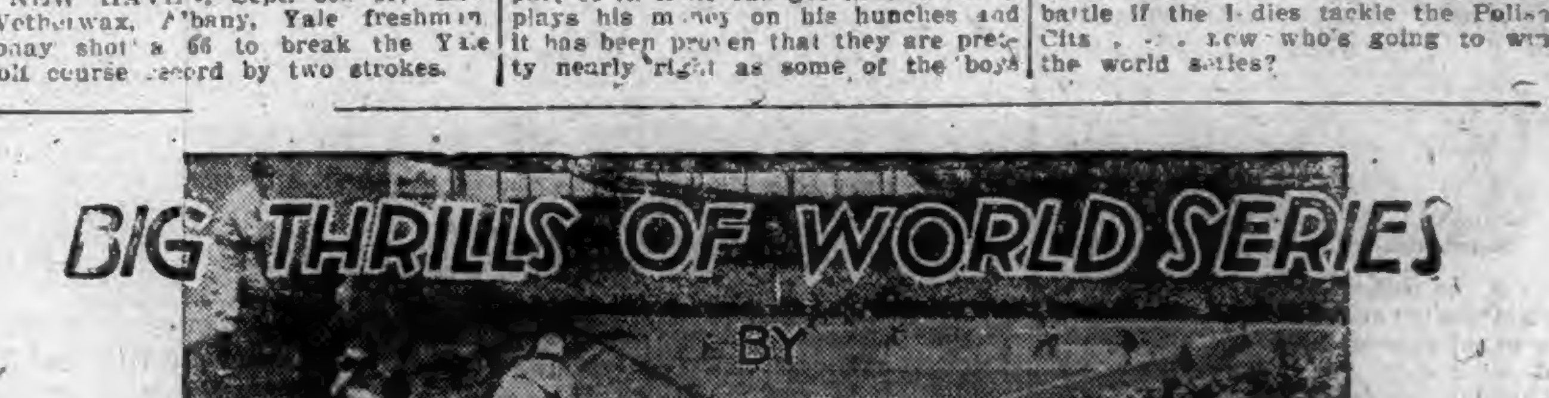
Two years ago Street came out of the bush leagues to give the majors a whirl. In 1929 he was a Cardinal coach but his word carried little weight in team management, and his principal duties consisted of taking care of Grover Cleveland Alexander and keeping him on the "straight and narrow."

Came 1930 and "Gabby" got his big chance. That he has made the most of it is shown by the pennant he has won his first year as a big league manager, and the fact he has a contract for another year with a boost in salary. He is the first Red Bird manager since 1926 to hold his job for two years.

"Gabby" has kept fighting in the face of disheartening breaks all season. His task was an uphill pull from the start since players and umpires alike considered him a "fresh busher". At the beginning of the season his team didn't look good to the experts but he was optimistic.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Well, well, well, we're no sooner through one big series than we start another . . . the Citizens-Kaceys affair is over and now we enter the Citizens-J. B. Martin argument . . . looks like a pretty even thing . . . now that it has been settled that Norwich baseball is faster than New London ball, this year anyway, did anyone ever stop to figure out just how much below league ball, say Class B or C, would be a team composed of home talent . . . we think it could give a good account of itself . . . here's our team, all Norwich boys . . . Lamory and Ecclesston, catching: Lucier, Boots Greene and Johnny Greene, pitchers; West first base; Fuller, second base; Climkoski, short stop; Nap Liberte, Carew Krause, left field; Lloyd Jarvis, center field; Lefty Dugas, right field; Mondo Normandin, Hal Cummings and Mike Nickerson, pitchers . . . there's the team and within the 15-player limit . . now that we've finished our dream, let's get back to facts . . . the big crowd in New London last Sunday at the Cits-Kacey game was a record for that city . . . there were 2,240 paid admissions . . . to those who were there it was doubtful whether this crowd was any bigger than that which saw the Academy-Warren Harding game at the campus in 1925 . . . a couple of semi-pro clubs over in the other part of the state want to fight it out for the state title . . . maybe the Cits should have something to say about this title business . . . the Washington Senators played an Eastern league all-star team at Hartford Tuesday with only 800 fans looking on . . . when Bulkeley took home the baseball cup emblematic of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island league honors, at Wednesday night's meeting of the league, it was the first time in six years that Coach Brigham's Academy team did not get it . . . home runs are funny things . . . up at J. B. Martin's Sunday, Tony West walloped one over the autos in right field a real clout, but he was given only a three-bagger, being caught at the plate as he tried for a home run . . . yet up to the Academy there have been some hits much shorter than this that went over the center field fence or into bushes or autos in left or right that counted for four bases . . . Eddie Hamil Royal second baseman in the City league, has returned to Providence college after a year's absence during which he was at Conn. Aggies . . Eddie stands a good chance of making the varsity next spring . . . The Westerly Independents handed the New London Kaceys a 14 to 4 beating Sunday at Westerly and strengthened their claim to a shot at the New London county championship . . . this victory won the three-game series for them from the Whalers . . . it ought to be a real battle if the Ladies tackle the Polish Cits . . . now who's going to win the world series?



No. 7—Barney's Comeback

In 1924 Washington laid at rest the vaudeville sally, "First in war, first in peace and last in the American league."

The Senators, then managed by the youthful Bucky Harris and the Old Gray Fox, Clark Griffith, as president, were first in the American league and defeated the Giants in an exciting world series.

This series was the first to be attended by a president of the United States, and it also saw the triumphant return of Walter Johnson, the beloved "Barney" of the Washington pitching staff after he had lost two games.

In the first game Johnson, the great fire ball sharpshooter, was stopped 4 to 3 in 12 innings. Tom Zachary, cool, calculating left-hander who can still beat the Giants, came back in the second game to even the series by winning 4 to 3.

The next two games were divided and Walter Johnson was named to pitch the fifth game, with the series deadlocked. He lost, 6 to 2. Zachary was good for another victory, and in the sixth contest he turned the Giants back, 2 to 1.

The seventh game brought the big thrills. It continued 12 innings before Washington won, 4 to 3. Manager Harris resorted to some world series strategy by sending Ogden out to pitch so he would get the Giants' line-up for right hand pitching in the game.

After Ogden had pitched to two batsmen Mogridge, southpaw, was sent in.

In the ninth with the score tied at three all, Johnson was called in.

Twice he had failed, but he did not fail this time. With the winning run on third base as a result of a triple by Frisch, he fanned George Kelly. In the tenth he forced both Frisch and Kelly to miss third strikes with the winning run on second base.

Two "breaks" went against the Giants in the 12th. Ruel, the Washington catcher might have been retired on a high foul had not the opposing catcher, Hank Gowdy, stumbled over his mask as he ran for the ball.

Ruel had made only one hit in the series but with this "life" he doubled.

Johnson was safe on Jackson's fumble. When McNeely young Senator outfielder, hit a hard ball at Lindstrom, it bounded over the New York third baseman's head and Ruel came home with the winning run.

Washington lost the 1925 series to Pittsburgh after the Senators had won three of the first four games and the series looked like a breeze for the followers of Harris. The weather was the worst in years. It was cold in Washington and rain fell in Pittsburgh.

Roger Peckinpaugh, declared the most valuable player in the American league made eight errors in the series, all the miscues charged to his team.

The seventh and deciding game played under intolerable weather conditions, was won by Pittsburgh, 9 to 7. Walter Johnson pitched the full game and permitted 15 hits, but might have escaped with better support.

Other world series have had their tense moments: Grover Alexander coming out of the bullpen to fan Tony Lazzeri in a pinch in the final game of the 1926 series, a wild pitch by Miljus in the 1927 set-to, three home runs by Babe Ruth in one game at St. Louis in 1928 and two astonishing rallies by the Athletics against the Cubs last year after Howard Ehmke had given a sensational pitching performance to start the series.

But those are current events and not ancient history.

The End.

SEVERAL AUTO CASES IN STONINGTON COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 30.—Judge William A. Wilcox, of Pawcatuck, held regular session on Tuesday morning of Stonington town court, when court matters were disposed of as follows:

Antonio Folice, 38, of 6 Smith street, Pawcatuck, apprehended by Connecticut State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh for auto speeding on the Boston Post road, had his case nolled.

In the reckless driving case against Edward Simmons, Mystic, an absolute nolle was asked and granted by Prosecutor H. P. Hammacher. The prosecutor told the court that in Mystic last Sunday about 3:45 p. m., two automobiles were in collision at the junction of Denison avenue and the Boston Post road, one of which was driven by Edward Simmons, of Mystic. He said that near the beacon light at this street intersection the collision occurred at the extreme left of the road and although both autos were badly smashed no one was seriously injured, so far as he learned. The case had more the aspect of a civil suit for damages, there being no cause for criminal complaint.

Ernest W. Read, 38, 38 Ash street, Lewiston, Me., pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The man was apprehended by Pawcatuck Police Officer George L. Seifelt in company with Officer Tierney, of Mystic, when the accused was driving from Mystic towards Clark's Chowder house, off the Boston Post road. The prosecutor said that the defendant was accompanied by Mike Perry, who had his little girl with him at the time. The accused was taken to Dr. Thurman P. Maine, who found him to be under the influence of liquor. Being found guilty, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs, which totaled $123.70, which was paid and the defendant discharged.

Mike Perry, who accompanied Read, was before the court on a charge of intoxication. On recommendation of the prosecutor, his case was nolled upon the payment of costs, amounting to $16.65.

Albert Roffo, 22, of 31 East avenue, employed by the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co., was before the court on the complaint of Deputy Connecticut Game Commissioner Orrin L. Swain, of North Stonington, who charged him with hunting without a license. The commissioner had learned of shooting near the railroad tracks just east of Wequetequock and upon investigation found the defendant shooting at a sparrow with a rifle. Further questioning brought out the fact that the gun, when seized by the deputy, was standing near a pole and Judge Wilcox asked if the gun had been confiscated. The accused stated that he had brought the gun on the job to sell it and if he had been hunting he would have carried more than four shells. He said that in Rhode Island he always had a hunting license. He was found guilty on his plea and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs, totaling $21.10, and directions were given by the court to have the gun returned.

"Admiral" Edward Corey, 54, of Pawcatuck and well-known Pawcatuck river man, was before the court on complaint of Deputy Swain, who charged him on Sept. 19 with angling for fish in inland waters without a license. He pleaded guilty. Prosecutor Hammacher stated that three fish were found in his possession by the game officers. Judge Wilcox learned from the defendant that he knew that "Monument tree," so-called, is located near Pawcatuck rock and that the fish were taken from the Pawcatuck river dock of the William Clark mills of the American Thread Co. The "Admiral" said that fishing was carried on in boats at that point and the fishermen were not molested. He paid a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $15.45.

Percy Crompton and John Welsh, employed by the Thread company, who had their cases continued previously on a complaint charging them with fishing in inland waters without a license, continued for a second week.

Samuel A. Melanson, textile worker, 12 Lincoln avenue, Pawcatuck, was before the court charged with a breach of the peace and an assault on Sept. 25 upon his wife, Beatrice E. Melanson, the complaining witness. He pleaded not guilty. His wife took the witness stand to testify that at about 7 p. m. on the day in question, when she had her year and a half old boy in her arms, he seized her by the wrist and when she set the child down he struck her with his fist over the head and knocked her down.

L. Everett Clarke, who occupied the upstairs apartments, testified that upon hearing the cries of the three children he had gone into the tenement below and had seen the blow struck and the wife thrown to the floor. He said that on previous times there had been other disturbances but he had not been at home.

Mrs. Annie A. S. Clarke, his wife, testified that she had seen Mrs. Melanson struck on the back of the head and last July had known of another attack. The defendant took the stand to declare that he had not struck his wife as far as he knew. He stated that on a previous occasion he had not broken two of his wife's ribs in another attack. He was found guilty and sentenced to 30 days in New London county jail and was committed by Sergeant Webber of the state police.

SHE LOVED TO EAT BUT WAS ALWAYS PUNISHED FOR IT

Much of the suffering from so-called "indigestion" or acid-dyspepsia could be avoided if everyone could know what thousands like Miss Lillian Ralston have learned. This New York City business woman, who lives at 1160 Park Avenue, says:

"I suffered from headaches and heartburn after meals; couldn't sleep like I should; never felt right.

"For five years I experimented with medicines and treatments, until I learned about Pape's Diapepsin. I have used three packages now; have gained five pounds, and feel fine. I eat meats and anything I please. At the first sign of discomfort I chew a tablet of Pape's Diapepsin and the trouble is gone in a minute."

If you, too, suffer from sourness, gas, belching, nausea, headaches, dizziness, or pain after eating—either regularly or just at times, get a box of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist. Then you need never worry again about what you eat. These tablets are like candy and just as harmless. If you would like to try them before buying, write Pape's Diapepsin, Wheeling, W. Va., and you will receive a sample box, FREE.

BRIDGE ENGINEER MAKES INSPECTION OF BRIDGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 30.—Robert S. Johnson, bridge engineer of the federal road board, department of agriculture, arrived in Westerly Tuesday morning from Troy, N. Y. He made a personal inspection of the Pawcatuck river bridge, both on the Rhode Island and Connecticut sides, visited the office of the Westerly highway commission, secured all their data and correspondence from the R. I. state board of public roads and the state engineer, and all the information available from Harry R. Milner, chairman of the municipal improvement committee of the Westerly chamber of commerce. In company with the Westerly highway engineer, he went over the various points on the bridge with reference to the inspections made by both Rhode Island and Connecticut engineers. In the afternoon he left town to report direct to his division head.

Westerly Highway Engineer A. L. Leon said: "I inferred from our conversation that Engineer Johnson felt that the time was at hand for something to be done towards a new bridge."

Harry R. Milner said: "I am very pleased with the prompt action of Arthur N. Hyde and feel that something constructive will result from the inspection by Engineer Johnson."

COMMUNIST LECTURER IS ARRESTED AFTER WESTERLY S2

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 30.—James P. Reid of 954 Atwell avenue, Providence, announcing himself as the communistic candidate for United States senator from Rhode Island, was arrested at the conclusion of his talk in front of the Dixon street state armory here tonight. Previous to this time the entire Westerly police force with Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, Lieutenant Champlin, Town Prosecutor John Ferguson and Police Committee Member Joseph Fraser and Archie Meikle, had assembled to prevent a gathering of the communists.

Members of the party were scattered about and kept an eye out on the police. Several of them were pursued in an automobile, but they returned later to the scene. Reid asked Mr. Ferguson for a permit to hold a meeting and was told that he should seek it, through proper channels in writing.

Following a short discussion, the communists departed from the place, only to return when one of the "fellow workers" procured an orange crate and placed it in the highway directly at the armory entrance. Mr. Reid proceeded with the usual talk for a half hour.

One statement made was that the communists in Russia work but five hours a day, and met with the retort by the armory janitor, Alexander Aiken, that perhaps they were so hungry they could not work longer. At the end of his speech, Chief of Police Brown notified him that he was under arrest.

At the police station he was charged on a warrant sworn out by Chief Brown on Sept. 30, with "on certain highways, Dixon street and Railroad avenue, their use for an assemblage and public gathering in violation of a town ordinance," which required a permit to be first obtained.

At 9 o'clock he was arraigned before Judge Oliver H. Williams and, when pleading, said "this is a test case. I plead not guilty." Trial was set down for Oct. 10 and he was held in $100 bail, for which Anton Rindell became surety.

Reid was the only socialist member of the Rhode Island general assembly from Providence in 1912 in the lower house.

Westerly friends have learned that Earl M. West, a former Westerly drug clerk employed at the Rhode Island Drug store and in Barbour's pharmacy on Broad street, this town, died Sunday at his summer home on Long Island after an illness of six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Segar, of High street, and Mrs. R. M. Clark, of Providence, left for New York today to attend the funeral service.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and two sisters, Mrs. Charles B. Segar, of Westerly, and Mrs. R. M. Clark, of Providence, and a brother, F. W. West, of Providence.

Mr. West was employed at Barbour's pharmacy for several years and was a young man well liked by everyone who held his acquaintance, and resided while in Westerly at one time on Park avenue.

Representatives of Harold W. Merrill post, No. 16, American Legion, of Westerly, were engaged on Tuesday afternoon in the stringing of an American Legion Welcome banner across Broad street. The erection of the banner is in anticipation of the many hundreds of automobiles which it is expected will pass through Westerly on the Boston Post road and on the Nooseneck Hill state highway, en route to the national convention of the American Legion which is to be held the coming week in Boston. On Tuesday afternoon, police help was asked to regulate street traffic, while the banner, for which permission was granted by the town council, was strung across the highway.

Real Estate Transfers

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appear the following transfers:

Sept. 30. Cecil Monty Beringer to Antonio Morrone and wife, Mary Morrone, an undivided one-half interest in a certain plot or tract of land on the south side of Narragansett avenue, together with all buildings and improvements at the corner of Narragansett and Newton avenues, bounded westerly by land of George E. Cottrell for a distance of 60 feet and easterly by Newton avenue.

Sept. 30. Estate of Laura Beringer, to Antonio Morrone and wife, an undivided one-half interest in the above described tract of land, together with all buildings and improvements.

George W. Woodward, Westerly tax assessor and Dartmouth alumnus, has returned to his home from a week-end visit in Hanover, N. H., where he accompanied Howard C. Davis, of Boston, on a visit to their alma mater. The trip was made in Mr. Davis' auto with a stop on their way, in Amherst, Mass.

The Dixon street state armory, under direction of the quartermaster's department, is receiving renovations before the winter season. The windows in the drill shed and also in the main building have all been reputtied and the window sashes repainted with two coats of paint.

A young man, claiming to be a Westerly citizen and residing at 8 Pond street visited police headquarters on Monday afternoon and sought to obtain from Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown a permit for an open air meeting. He was informed by Chief Brown that he had orders to issue no such permit for a communists' meeting as desired.

The ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps was in Boston on Wednesday afternoon to return from the hospital with Mrs. C. Florence Geary, wife of Harry Geary, who has been receiving treatment there, and returned to her Narragansett avenue home in Westerly.

Miss Helen C. Brophy has returned to her Westerly home from a short visit in New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Card have returned to their Pawcatuck home from a visit with friends in Norwich the first of the week.

Mrs. Idella C. Harvey, wife of Fred W. Harvey, of Pawcatuck who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, has so far recovered as to be able to be about again.

Wheeler, of West Mystic, a student at Connecticut college, is one of two students to receive a scholarship which is being awarded this year for the first time. The scholarship is from the new Travili fund at the college and is for scholastic standing and promise.

Truck Strikes Car

A bad accident occurred at the four corners by C. E. Stapelyn's in Burnet's corners Monday afternoon when a Star coupe owned and driven by Miss Ruth Thompson, a teacher at Mystic Oral school, was demolished by a Sinclair auto truck driven by Howard Briggs, of Stonington. Miss Thompson was coming from Mystic, saw the truck coming down the hill from the direction of Old Mystic, and decided she had time enough to get across the road onto the other side road beside Stapelyn's house. She was unable to make it, however, and the truck crashed squarely into the middle of the car, which was reduced to kindling wood and later was taken up into the woods and dumped. Miss Thompson received numerous bruises and was in an hysterical condition. Miss Blanche Moll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Moll, of Old Mystic, a passenger with Miss Thompson, was cut and bruised and badly shaken up. One hip bone cut through the skin. Dr. Maine was called and made it as comfortable as possible. Mary who witnessed the accident said it was one of the worst they had ever seen and yet no one killed.

OBITUARY

Mrs. William Jackson

Mrs. Susan Jackson, 82, wife of William Jackson, died Monday morning at 10:45 at her home in Burnet's Corners. She had been in failing health for the past three years, and had been confined to her bed for the past several months, in the care of a nurse. She was born in Ledyard, the daughter of David Scott and Lydia Watrous Scott and had always resided in Ledyard and the town of Groton. She was twice married, her first husband being Henry Thompson. ROLLIN RATHBUN KNOWS WHERE TO CATCH BIG SMELTS

Rollin Rathbun has been called by almost everyone in the fishing village "the lucky fisherman" with a reel and pole. But every year he has been the champion smelt catcher, getting anywhere from 700 to a thousand each day. He holds the record of about ten thousand for a season. Some say he goes the right time and knows where the smelts are. But he has fished right aside the best smelt fishermen in the village and still would catch the little fish while the others could not get a bite. Is it a gift, or does the champion know his stuff, or is it the bait that he uses? He cannot be beat with a pole and reel. Happy Rathbun says he would like to have a race with any smelt catcher along the Connecticut shore for fun, money or marbles, for a day's sport, or for a season.

The king smelt catcher is getting his pole ready for the season of 1930, for with cool nights and mornings the narrow yellow fish will bite. So come on, pole and reel fishermen! Give the village smelt champion a race and let the best one win! Smiling Rathbun will fish beside friends and use the same bait or a horse fly on the hook. One fellow who went with him last season says if he put a sock on his hook the smelts would bite.

Also he holds the record for the longest smelt that ever came out of Palmer cove; it was 17 inches long and weighed almost 1 3-4 pounds. If anyone would like to race the 24-year-old smelt catcher, let him drop a line to the champion any time and it will reach him all right.

Recently he thought he would go after a few blue shell crabs before the curtain was pulled down for the year; so up in the North cove he went and found some big ones. He was catching them right and left—some fun, like playing post office at a birthday party. The village pole and reel fisherman had around 225 crabs, all nice ones; then he caught a freak one, that sure looked funny. It had three claws, one little one growing on his left claw. He could travel, hitting on all three—never anything like that had been heard of in this village, a crab with three claws. Over 300 people came and saw the circus crab. Rathbun was offered $50 for it, but he only smiled and said he would keep it. His 42nd cousin came up from Ohio for a visit of a week. So the lucky fisherman showed him the freak crab. It was the first time Hank Stratch ever saw a blue shell crab of any kind. He wanted to take it back to Ohio and show what grows in the Connecticut salt waters—a crab with three claws, can you beat that one? We've all heard of a five-legged cow and six-toed chicken, but never saw a crab with three claws before. Noank sure can catch freak things out of the harbor and coves, also monster fish and has had a 700-pound sea turtle towing away a dock a few years ago. The piece was in an Ohio paper about it. While the town was still as the hands on the town clock that monster sea turtle ran away with the dock. Noank sure has made a name for itself by catching queer and freak shell fish.

90 SHARE COMPOSITE PRICE OF STOCKS DROPPED ANOTHER NOTCH YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)— The stock market made a frenzied fa[illegible]well to the third quarter of 1930 today.

Liquidation and short selling, again appearing voluminously in the afternoon coincident with the failure of an exchange member, plunged prices downward swiftly before supporting orders took effect. The turnover reached the large total of 4,496,930 shares.

It was the heaviest selling of the current decline. Although the late covering movement saved the market from closing at the bottom, net losses averaged about two points and the 90 share composite price dropped another notch to within 7 1-2 points of last November's low.

Pessimism, whether justified or not, was the dominant note in speculative circles. The suspension of the member firm, although not surprising, was distinctly depressing to a market that trembles at the slightest flutter of unfavorable news.

The decline embracing a broad list of stocks was stopped on the announcement of an extra dividend of $1 by American Can. Hasty covering in this pivotal issue helped the general list and the rally ranged from 1 to 3 points from the lowest levels. Seasoned investment stocks closed with only moderate declines after virtually all of them had touched new lows for the year or for the movement.

A growing belief in commission house circles that banks have been liquidating security loans substantially was hardly supported by the weekly condition statement of the federal reserve member banks, for the total on this item increased $57,000,000 in the week ended September 24. There was a $21,000,000 drop in this account for the out of town banks, but Wall street was not inclined to view this as unduly significant.

The $24,000,000 decrease in "all others," or commercial, loans was used as a bearish argument, since the total of these borrowings is now only $50,000,000 from the year's low, reflecting the scant demand for bank credit. Other dampening influence on sentiment included the cut in copper to 10 cents and the decline in August department store sales reported in the federal reserve monthly review.

Stocks moved against the trend of the leading commodity markets, which were considerably improved. Wheat failed to hold the top, but closed 1-2c to 1c a bushel higher, while corn rallied 2 to more than 3 cents net. Cotton, after early weakness, recovered for gains of 35 cents to $1 a bale.

Domestic bonds of savings bank grade moved ahead, but there was considerable unsettlement in foreign issues.

Call money firmed to 2 per cent, a natural trend in view of the proximity of the month end settlements. Rates on time accommodations, however, eased and prime commercial paper was shaded.

Short prices rallied moderately for an interval in the forenoon when leading issues got 1 to 3 points higher. On the break, however, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, and virtually every other favorite made new post-June lows and Radio, Standard Oil of New Jersey and General Electric, among scores of others, dropped into new low ground for the year.

The close found U. S. Steel down one point, whereas it had been off 2. Losses in American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, General Electric, Montgomery Ward, Atchison, Anaconda, Auburn Auto, General Motors, Westinghouse Electric and International Harvester ran from a fraction to 2 points. American Smelting, Gillette, Canadian Pacific, Standard Oil of New York, New Haven and a few other important stocks closed higher. There were spectacular net declines of 24 1-2 and 21 in Jersey Central railroad and Detroit Edison, respectively, while Diamond Match lost 16 and Case, 8. American Can was off 3.

Foreign exchanges eased. The German mark and the Spanish peseta made new lows.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Factors highly divergent in the character of their influence were at work in the bond market today. The result was an irregular session in which reinvestment demand coincident with the approach of interest and dividend paying time carried high grade railroad and utility issues forward to new highs for the year and a weak stock market and a pessimistic view of the foreign situation sent a large number of loans to new 1930 minimums.

The most marked reactionary trend developed in the foreign list, where recessions ranging in many instances from 1 to 4 points depressed more than 50 bonds to new low prices for the year. The domestic list of secondary bonds and stock privilege issues re-acted to the lower trend of stocks, and in some instances best grade issues were off fractionally as speculators sold their investment bonds to cover their marginal accounts in the share market.

The volume of business showed a big jump over Monday, surpassing $14,000,000. Much of the buying was attributed to the payment of dividends and interest on securities, due tomorrow, and was reflected in the strength of both seasoned railroad and utility issues and U. S. governments.

Canadian National Railways 4 1-2s, Canadian Pacific railway 4 1-2s, Chicago and Alton 3 1-2s, Big Four, general 5s B, and 5s D, Colorado and Southern refunding 4 1-2s, Illinois Central 4s, Kentucky Central 4s, New Haven debenture 4s, Northern States Power 5s A, Oregon Share Line Guaranteed 5s, Union Pacific 4s, established new highs on gains that in some instances were a point or more. Many other rails and utilities sold off fractionally from their high prices of the year.

Liquidation in the industrial list brought sharp reductions in bonds of sugar, oil and amusement companies, and some railroads whose earnings have been sharply curtailed. The drop of sugar futures to a new all time low record forced Cuba Cane Products 6s, Cuba Sugar 7 1-2s and East Cuba Sugar 7 1-2s, to new 1930 lows on losses of 1 to 5 points. Armour and company 5 1-2s, St. Paul adjustment 5s, Childs company 5s, International Hydro Electric 6s, International Telephone, Parmalee Transfer 6s, Republic Iron and Steel 5 1-2s, Richfield and Shell Union Oil bonds, and several issues of the Seaboard Airline reached new 1930 bottoms.

The buying of French 7s and 7 1-2s at the highs of the year, together with the advance of Belgian issues and the firmness of Japan and British issues stood out in sharp contrast with the new low levels sought by virtually half of the foreign bonds traded today. Both European and South American issues were affected by the selling movement, German 5 1-2s, Italy 7s, Chilean 6s, Bolivian 8s, 7s and 6s, and Argentine 6s, Australian 5s and Brazilian 8s, were among the active government issues to reach new low ground for the year.

The continued easy tone of the money market held prices of U. S. governments at the high level of the year.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)— Curb market stocks again plunged precipitantly today, several issues breaking through the low levels established last November.

The decline reached a climax during the middle of the afternoon, when failure of the investment house of J. A. Sisto and company was announced. For a time the market for several stocks of companies in which the Sisto firm was interested was completely demoralized; but bids began to appear before the close, and the market as a whole, made moderate recovery from the day's lowest levels. The day's total sales aggregated 1,-145,100 shares, the largest in more than three months.

Cuneo Press, of which Mr. Sisto is a director, sold as low as 16, cutting in half the previous final price, but later rallied to 23 1-4. Cosden Oil, which sold early in the year at 74 3-4, was traded as low as 8. Sisto Financial, which closed yesterday at 18 1-8, dropped to 10. For a time it was 2 bid. Hygrade Food sold at 2 3-8, and closed 4 7-8, off 2 1-8.

The utility shares remained the most active group, and declines were less precipitate here, although such issues as American Super Power, Middlewest Utilities, and Niagara Hudson recorded new lows with declines of 1 to 2 points. Electric Bond and Share sagged nearly 3 points to a new minimum for the year at 63 1-8, and closed at 64. Last November, however, it sold as low as 50. Associated Gas A rose fractionally, against the general trend.

Among the more prominent industrials, Aluminum company and Deere dropped 10 and 3 to new lows, although the former later recovered part of its loss. Ford, Ltd., and American Cyanamid B, however, were steady. Newmont Mining broke 5 points to 7, also a new minimum. In the oils Gulf lost 3 points, going below 100 for the first time this year. Most of the prominent investment company issues also recorded new bottom levels. United Founders dropped to 12 1-2, a record low, but closed at 13 5-8, off only 1 3-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(AP)— Despite disturbance from stock market unsettlement, grain values showed a general trend upward today, with Russia and Canada reported as having curtailed wheat offerings abroad. Dry weather complaints from domestic winter territory and also from the Balkans and Australia, were current. There were likewise reports of damage to unthreshed wheat in Canada by recent heavy rains and snow.

After a maximum gain of 2 3-4c a bushel, the Chicago wheat market closed nervous 5-8a1 5-8c higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 5-8a3 7-8c advanced, oats 3-8a1c up, and provisions varying from 25c decline to 35c gain.

Provisions averaged higher with cereals notwithstanding a drop in hog values.

NEW YORK Sept. 30.—(AP)—Shipments of pipe of the Republic Steel corporation made a new high monthly record in September, exceeding August shipments by 25 per cent, with all three units of the electric welding pipe mill booked to capacity through October, the company announced. Officials expect another record for October.

In a letter to stockholders of the Chrysler corporation accompanying checks for the third quarter dividend, Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board, pointed out that "the groundwork is being laid for expansion of the company's business among commercial car users on principals of service to them that represent an entirely new approach to the commercial car market." The letter added that the first half of this year the company's production and sales of automobiles amounted to a larger percentage of the total automobile business, exclusive of Ford, than in the same period of either 1929 or 1928.

Brown Brothers and company announced that P. Blair Lee, of Philadelphia, son of Blair Lee, former U. S. senator from Maryland, has been admitted to partnership in the firm. He will have his headquarters in the firm's Philadelphia office and has resigned as vice president of the First National Bank of Philadelphia.

Joseph Wilshire, president of Standard Brands, Inc., in a letter to stockholders accompanying third quarter dividend checks, said that the company "is today enjoying excellent business and the outlook for the remainder of 1930 is very good."

A fixed investment trust, based exclusively on the stocks of leading New York city banks and trust companies, is in process of organization and it is expected that a public offering of trust certificates by the New York Depositor corporation, will be made shortly. The new trust is to be known as Trusteed New York City Bank stocks and will be created by a trust agreement with the Chatham Phoenix National Bank and Trust company.

ANNONCEMENTS

Ladies' Classes at Y. M. C. A.

The management of the local Y. M. C. A. announces that the gymnasium classes for girls and women will begin this (Wednesday) afternoon and evening, and following the gym work swimming will be enjoyed. Last season the number of members in the ladies' classes was the largest in several years, and it is expected that this will be a banner year in numbers and interest.

The committee has been fortunate in securing again Mrs. Phillips Streeter and Miss Signe Seaberg for the instructors this season, and they will endeavor to make it most pleasant and profitable for all who attend. There is probably no better way and profitable way to maintain good robust health than the combination of gymnasium exercises followed by a shower and swim. All who intend to take advantage of these privileges are urged to register at once at the Y. M. C. A. office.

Palace Theatre

A beautiful double feature bill combining comedy and dramatic romance to Paradise," is a highly dramatic story Palace theatre tomorrow for a three days run. The first picture "The Road to Paradise", a highly dramatic story of the lives of twin sisters, one an underworld moll and the other the pampered doll of society, sisters who are twin sand look exactly alike and who have nothing in common, but who change places and add great climax after climax as the dramatic moments unfold, a sister's fight for a sister who has chosen the easy road to a good time only to find unhappiness and heartaches.

"The Matrimonial Bed" also on this great double bill is a pent-up comedy that moves along at a pace that will keep you in up-roars for the entire length of the show, a story that has been successful wherever it has played, a picture so packed full of laughs that you will wonder how anyone could possibly get into so many situation. One of the strongest casts ever presented in one picture go to make this an outstanding hit. Lilyan Tashman, Florence Eldridge, James Gleason, Beryl Mercer and Frank Fay, all contribute to make this a comedy sensation.

Today for the last time the Palace presents that mighty drama of the sea, Herman Melvilles "Moby Dick," starring the immortal actor, John Barrymore, with Joan Bennett. Anyone who has missed this great picture should make every effort to see it today it is so fine.

FORMER PASTOR WRITES OF PROGRESS

I enjoyed the children—those little but most real and important missionaries of the homes. I was glad to meet the native leaders, and only longed for more time to get acquainted with them. It was a joy to meet several of the men who became Christians at Beira, at the same time that Kamba and Tapera did, and are now artisans of skill, and honest and industrious citizens of this new Kingdom of God in this land. It was good to see the excellent work which Kamba and Bede Simango are doing at Gogoi, and to visit with them in their homes, however briefly. But the telling of that story must wait for other occasions than this letter.

Then too, I shall never forget those beautiful views from the top of Mt. Silinda over those wonderful hills and valleys of Rhodesia, and the far glimpses of the Portuguese lowlands. It almost hurt, it was so beautiful and interesting.

The mission called a conference to meet me and discuss the situation in P. E. A. A cablegram from the board was received the morning of the conference warning against too ambitious undertakings.

The mission did not avoid facing openly and fully the many serious problems which clustered around the situation at Machemeje. As the conference proceeded, there grew the stout determination not to be daunted by the obstacles and handicaps, including the certainty of reduced appropriations from the board, but, with confidence of support from the Fairfield association and other sources, to push the work in P. E. A. Finally the conference decided to send four missionaries immediately to visit Machemeje, and they asked me to accompany them.

We went by automobile, first to Umtali, and then far down into Portuguese East Africa, along the railway route, to Villa Machado, the nearest point to Beira by car. From there we took a railway caboose on a freight train to Beira. We did try to cut the journey to Machemeje short by going across country on a road that had not been cleared of grass, but the seeds and chaff from grass twice as high as the automobile so clogged the radiator that we had to turn back to the main road. And such roads! I could not get over the wonder of them.

Beira had grown much larger but was much the same type of town that I remembered it to be. From Beira we took a large gasoline launch up the Buzi river to Nova Lusitania, the administrative and sugar planting center of the Buzi company. We had a motley crowd of passengers on board—Africans, Indians, Chinese, Greeks, Portuguese, and many mixed varieties. We saw nine hippos disporting themselves by a distant bank, and we saw the same group on our return, with a mammoth crocodile added.

Autos Instead of Canoes

From Nova Lusitania we were carried by two automobiles over good roads, forty miles to the Limestone Cliffs opposite Machemeje in two hours, a journey that used to take us five days with canoes. We learned too that the road which we travelled upon was to be completed to a point near Mt. Silinda, and that there was another road on the other side of the river which now reaches Mt. Silinda. We learned also that there is a good road extending from Nova Lusitania, through Mashanga, to Inhambane and far away Lorenzo Marques. So that Machemeje is now within a day or two's journey from Mt. Silinda, Beira, or Mashanga. A remarkable development in the P. E. A. problem!

We spent four days at Machemeje. Mr. Petras accompanied us from Beira, and entertained us in his huts on the river bank. He had made an offer of the second half of the farm for £1200, instead of his first offer of £2000. Family matters were compelling him to sell out and go to Greece. We visited all parts of the 5,000-acre farm, and were increasingly convinced of its great value as a farm, and of its fitness for the missionary development which we proposed. Recognition soon grew into enthusiasm on the part of the visiting missionaries. They decided unanimously to recommend the mission to purchase the second half of the farm; and before I left Africa I received a telegram saying that the mission had purchased it.

There is a great plain on the farm where anything and everything will grow in abundance. The plain covers about 1,000 acres. Then there is about 3,000 acres of hilly and stony land which is very fertile; excellent for native residence. About 1,000 acres has abundance of timber and wood upon it also first class limestone,—all of which is unique in the land, and of great value.

By this securing of the entire farm we have a site for a station which is separated by natural boundaries from any possible encroachment or interference from troublesome neighbors, which was a serious danger before.

The great timbered ridge on one side, the river on two sides, and a vast native reserve on the fourth side, gives us an ideal site, peculiarly adapted to the special needs of the situation in P. E. A.

We became convinced that the farm will support many families of natives, even more than I had estimated. Whatever produce they can raise above their own needs, they can take to a ready market in Beira, with flat-bottomed boats.

We visited the kraal of chief has been displaced by his young son, by the government. We found that the young chief had been a convert and a lay preacher in the mission in Johannesburg. He had his lay preacher's certificate with him. We wonder what effect this will have on his governing his pagan tribe.

We visited the Christians who found sanctuary on our farm when driven off by the Buzi company. They have a fine village and they said that the land had proved so fertile that they had more grai nthan they knew what to do with.

Kamba Simango had made application for permission to open a school at Machemeje, and had been refused on the ground of the presence of two Roman Catholic schools, one on each side of the Machemeje farm. The missionaries visited these schools, and found them very primitive. I think too from what I have since learned, that a school on our farm will be outside the limit set by law for proximity to these schools. Also, the law of domicile will, I hear, protect us in having a private school of our own. These questions will have to be tested on the field.

A letter just received from Mr. Fuller indicates that by now the mission staff is on the station.

Met Mr. Loze

At Lorenzo Marques, I met Mr. Loze, of the Swiss mission, and Tapera Nkomo whom I have supported there during the past year. I only had a day there, but I was greatly pleased at the reports of the work which Tapera has been doing. He is now married and has a very good wife,—willing to go with him wherever duty calls him. He had been at Mashanga just before I arrived there. I decided that it would be best for him to ally himself with the Rhodesia mission, and I arranged for him to work with Mr. Fuller. He will go to Mashanga when needed.

From many directions it came to me that there are many groups of native Christians in the whole district. There are groups at Mashanga, Mambone, the Buzi, and other places. They have no missionaries but are carrying on by themselves. At present it seems as though the government is granting them liberty to worship. This was one of the most hopeful signs that I saw.

Then, too, I became convinced that there had been a change for the better in the labor situation. The old ruthless form of recruiting has been displaced by labor regulations which are an improvement over the former system. There is much to be desired still, but it was a relief to know that there was improvement.

I sailed from Capetown to Southampton with Mr. Loze of the Swiss mission, and he is very hopeful that a better day for missions has dawned for P. E. A.

I must now close this long letter. This is an outline only of a wonderful journey. With most cordial greetings.

Yours faithfully,
FRED R. BUNKER.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Gets a Shaking

E'en in the very midst of fright it sometimes pays to be polite.
—Old Mother Nature.

Up in a certain beech tree climbed great big Buster Bear. To a certain branch of the same beech tree clung Impy the black Chipmunk. He hadn't moved, because he didn't dare move. Never in all his short life had he ever known quite such a fright. It was dreadful. Inside, he kept saying to himself "He's coming for me! He's coming for me! Oh, dear, what shall I do? He's coming for me!"

And Impy really thought this was so. He knew nothing about Buster Bear. He didn't know that Buster didn't see him; he didn't know that Buster was fond of beechnuts. So it was quite natural for Impy to think that Buster was after him. He had been afraid when Buster was on the ground, but it hadn't entered his head that Buster could climb. Reddy Fox couldn't climb. Old Man Coyote couldn't climb. This fellow looked so big and clumsy that climbing was the last thing he looked capable of. Impy couldn't believe his eyes.

At last Buster reached the branch that Impy was clinging to. Impy was quite a way out toward the end. Buster began to shake that branch. Impy clung on for dear life. Buster shook harder than ever. He was trying to shake some nuts from the tree, for even then he didn't see Impy. It seemed to Impy that he couldn't hold on any longer. He was just about to let go and drop, and take his chances of getting hurt when Buster stopped shaking. You see, Impy had moved and the minute he moved, Buster Bear saw him.

"Well, well, well!" said Buster Bear away down in his throat. His voice was grumbly rumbly. "Well, well, well, who might you be?"

At first Impy couldn't find his tongue. Buster gave the branch another shake. "Tell me," he commanded, "who are you?"

"If you please," replied Impy in a frightened sounding voice, "I'm only a Chipmunk."

"Only a what?" cried Buster Bear.

"Only a Chipmunk, if you please," replied Impy, trying very hard to be polite.

Buster Bear stared at him very hard. "If you are a Chipmunk," said he, "where did you get that coat?"

"Old Mother Nature gave it to me," said Impy.

"I can't believe it," said Buster Bear in his deepest, most grumbly-rumbly voice. "Who ever heard of a Chipmunk in a black coat?"

"If you please, it's all the coat I've ever had and, truly, I am a Chipmunk," replied Impy.

"Who is your father?" demanded Buster Bear.

"Striped Chipmunk," replied Impy. "Striped Chipmunk is my father, if you please."

"I know him," replied Buster Bear. "But that doesn't explain that black coat of yours. The idea of a black-coated Chipmunk!"

"Well, what of it?" demanded another voice. It was a sharp little bark. Impy knew that voice instantly. It was the voice of his father, Striped Chipmunk. Sure enough, there was Striped Chipmunk on the ground beneath the tree.

Buster Bear looked down and grinned. "Hello, Striped Chipmunk!" said he. "It's a long time since I've seen you. There is a young fellow up here in this tree who is all black and he says that you are his father."

"Well, what of it?" replied Striped Chipmunk again. "You know that Reddy Fox once had a black-coated son. Why shouldn't I have one?"

This was too much for Buster to answer.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Walter Huston, who plays the title role in "The Bad Man," which comes to Warner's Broadway today, found fame and success only after twenty years of struggle on the stage.

For many years he worked in the comparative obscurity of vaudeville, and was eventually banned from his profession in that line because of a fight between the Keith circuit and the Shuberts. In desperation he turned to the legimate stage and "promoted" himself the title role in "Mr. Pitt."

Today he is rated as one of the most accomplished actors on stage or screen.

"The Bad Man" is a First National Vitaphone production of Porter Emerson Browne's famous stage play of the same name. Dorothy Revier, James Rennie and O. P. Heggie are in the cast.

Oat, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the manager of The Norwich Bulletin and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit: 1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business manager are: Publisher, The Bulletin Co., Norwich, Conn. Editor, H. M. Briggs, Norwich, Conn. Business Manager, William H. Oat, Norwich, Conn. 2. That the owner is: (If owned by a corporation, its name and address must be stated and also immediately thereunder the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding one per cent or more of total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, the names and addresses of the individual owners must be given. If owned by a firm, company, or other unincorporated concern, its name and address, as well as those of each individual member, must be given.) Est. Floyd H. Crane, New York. Chas. D. Noyes, Norwich. William H. Oat, Norwich. 3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are (If there are none, so state.) None. 4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him. 5. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is 14,133. (This information is required from daily publications only.) William H. Oat, business manager. Sworn to and subscribed before me this 30th day of Sept. 1930. Helen B. Moore. The Legal Voters in Town Meeting of the Town of Norwich, are hereby warned to meet in ANNUAL TOWN MEETING, in the Town Hall, in said Norwich, ON MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1930, AT 8 O'CLOCK, P. M. for the following purposes:

To hear and act upon the annual report of the Selectmen and their recommendations, the reports of the Town Treasurer, the Sinking Fund Committee, the Town Health Officer, the Town School Committee, and the Trustees of the Otis Library to fix the salaries of the Town Officials, to lay a tax to meet the lawful expenses of the Town, including the expenses of the Public Schools for the ensuing fiscal year; and to fix the compensation of the Tax Collector.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum not to exceed the amount of Four Hundred Thousand ($400,000) dollars at such times and in such amounts during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to defray the debts of the Town accruing before the next Annual Town Meeting and to deliver the notes or other obligations of the Town therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interests of the Town.

Also to authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum of money not to exceed Twenty Thousand ($20,000) dollars at such time during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to pay the Town's share of the County tax, heretofore levied upon the Towns of this County, and to deliver the notes or other obligations therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interest of the town.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Sixty-five Hundred ($6500) dollars, to be used for the current expenses of the Otis Library.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Fifteen Hundred ($1500) dollars to be used for the care and maintenance of the trees on the highways of the Town.

Also to appropriate a sum not to exceed One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to defray the traveling expenses of pupils residing in this Town who desire to attend the Putnam or Willimantic Trade Schools.

Also to determine whether the Town will hereafter assume the expense of the care and maintenance of thirty-nine electric lights located on the public highway in or near the Village of Taftville; which lights have heretofore been cared for and maintained by the Ponemah Company.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to be used in maintaining a Treatment Station for the care of venereal diseases.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ninety-two Thousand Five Hundred ($92,500) dollars for the purpose of relieving the parents or guardians of children who attend the Norwich Free Academy and are domiciled in the Town of Norwich from the payment of the customary term fee for the School year of 1930-1931.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ten Thousand Five Hundred ($10,500) dollars for the purpose of providing medical inspection and health work for the school children of the Town of Norwich.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain a Street light at the corner of the private ways, known as Edward Avenue and Sylvia Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain two additional hydrants on Town Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known hydrant at the junction of Harland Road and Sachem Plain Road.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to accept a deed of a private way in said Norwich extending from West Town Street to Sturtevant Street and now known as Sholes Avenue from the owner thereof and maintain said private way hereafter as a public highway.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way in the Town of Norwich heretofore known as Perry Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway of the Town.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known as Germania Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway.

Also to approve the action of the board of selectmen in removing the town sign-post heretofore located at the corner of Main and Market streets to a location on the east side of Laurel Hill bridge.

Also to authorize the proper officials of the town to execute and deliver to the Thames Bank and Trust company a proper bond of indemnity and to obtain from the said company a certificate of its capital stock to replace a certain lost certificate which was the property of the town representing certain shares of stock of the Thames National bank owned by the town.

Also to do any other business proper to come before said Meeting.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, this 29th day of September, A. D. 1930.

WILLIAM S. MURRAY,
CHARLES P. BUSHNELL,
Selectmen of the Town of Norwich.

NEW LONDON CITY ENGINEER ORDERS USE OF GARDEN HOSE SUSPENDED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 30—Because of the long continued drought, City Engineer George Watters today issued an order prohibiting the use of all garden hose for the purpose of drenching lawns or gardens. While the supply of water in the city's reservoirs is at a low point, no alarm is entertained; but the order today is a matter of precaution, especially as early rain is not predicted by the weather bureau.

Albert Currier, submarine base, was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. The former count was nolled and on the second charge, Currier was fined $5 and costs. Currier while roaming through North Bank street late last night, climbed the stairs leading to the home of Mrs. Lewaynt, proprietress of a North Bank street restaurant. He entered the apartment and frightened Mrs. Lewaynt, who ran to police headquarters and made known her complaint. Currier was arrested by Sergeant John Courtney.

ESCUREDO BOUND OVER— WAITING 3 MONTHS IN JAIL

Simon Escuredo, a Cuban, former member of the U. S. Coast Guard, was charged with breaking and entering and theft and attempt to break and enter. He pleaded guilty and was bound over to the next term of the superior court. In default of a surety on his bond of $100, Escuredo was committed to jail, where he will wait three months before being put on trial. Escuredo, who was dishonorably discharged from the federal service several months ago and who has been arrested on two other occasions since, was arrested early Saturday morning following the discovery of a robbery at the Kimball Textile store, 20 Meridian street and the attempted robbery of the Peterson restaurant, corner of State and Meridian streets.

Two fishermen were arrested for intoxication last night by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan. One of the men is a war veteran and has been gassed. He was given suspension of judgment, but his companion was fined $5 and costs.

An automobile owned by Frederick Browne, 9 Archer court was damaged by fire late last night. While it was being driven through Ocean avenue, flames burst from beneath the hood and in an instant the engine was enveloped in a vigorous blaze. An alarm was sent in from Box 46, corner of Ocean and Lee avenues, Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and four pieces of apparatus responded. The fire was extinguished with chemicals.

EARLY MORNING COUCH FIRE CONSIDERED SUSPICIOUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 30—A fire of suspicious origin was discovered early today and because of the nature of the blaze, Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh is engaged in making an investigation. Patrolman Henry Hick was making his rounds at 3 o'clock, when he noticed smoke issuing from the north side of the dwelling, 25 Douglass street, owned by Meyer Freeman and occupied on the ground floor by May Barnes, a Negress, and who has been convicted on numerous occasions of conducting a house of immorality and Joyce Brown, another Negress and on the top floor by Erna Penders, a Negro. The front entrance of the dwelling was unlocked and Hick entered, to find a couch in one of the living rooms afire. The officer secured a few buckets of water and extinguished the blaze. Neither the Barnes nor Brown women was home and Enders was found sound asleep on the floor above. How the fire started, with the women absent from home, together with the fact that the entrance was not secured in the absence of the occupants, is what Detective Cavanaugh is attempting to determine.

The police have practically abandoned their efforts to determine the cause of the fire that caused damage of the estimated amount of $80,000 to the garage of J. Adel, Woodbridge street last Saturday morning, when the building was extensively damaged and four trucks destroyed, while three others were damaged.

FORD JUMPS OVERBOARD WITH TWO PASSENGERS

A Ford automobile, with a man named Wheeler at the wheel and who is employed by Reuben Lubchansky, Bank street junk dealer, together with a youth, Edward Wein, 16, of Belden court, plunged into Shaw's cove yesterday and that Wheeler and the youth were not drowned was due to their good luck more than anything else. The youth was seated beside Wheeler as the latter started the engine in the junk yard. The car leaped forward and before Wheeler could get it under control the machine had bounded off the pier into the water. Wheeler and the boy succeeded in freeing themselves from the auto and climbed to the dock, none the worse for their experience. Today a lighter was used to lift the auto back to the pier.

City Council Considers Budget

Meeting as a committee, the members of the city council held a session in the municipal building last evening for the purpose of considering the budget for the ensuing year. It is estimated that the income of the city will be at least $50,000 more than that of a year ago and it is proposed to increase the cost of tuition for students attending public schools from other towns $1 a day during the school term. By the increased revenue it is believed it would be possible to reduce the tax rate three mills but for the fact that a few added appropriations, not included last year, will be necessary this year. It is represented by the council members that the appropriations this year will be $100,000 less than a year ago, before any additional appropriations are approved.

DR. FERRIN'S WIDOW WEDS A. B. ANDERSON, WORCESTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 30—Announcement is made of the recent marriage at Kittery, Me., of Mrs. Carlisle F. Ferrin, widow of Dr. Ferrin, formerly of Glenwood avenue, to Alfred R. Anderson, a retired contractor, who resides at Worcester, Mass. Dr. Ferrin died about two years ago.

Miss Margaret T. Corcoran, 28 Williams street, is spending a fortnight in New York and Atlantic City.

Frederick Cooper has returned to his home in New York, having been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Learned, of Huntington street.

Northrup Chapman, Colorado Springs, Col., is spending a few days with his father, Rev. Edward M. Chapman, 917 Ocean avenue.

Harold Berrian, of Fishers Island; Joseph Miller, Mystic and Thomas D. Belfield, Marion, Pa., patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Carl Vogt, 94 Truman street, reported to the police this afternoon that while he was at the Jennings grammar school earlier in the day his Empire bicycle was stolen.

Seek Mt. Vernon Fugitive

The police of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., this evening requested the New London police to be on the lookout for a Ford roadster carrying New York registration 5-1614, which is being driven by George Dennis Hamilton Webb. He is 22, about five feet three inches in height, weighs about 130 pounds, has light hair and is light complexion. Webb is headed for Canada and the Mt. Vernon police seek his detention.

Frank T. Arms, Guy T. Arms, Catherine Cheatham McKenna and Elizabeth Cheatham Anderson have sold a building lot on Neptune avenue, Ocean Beach, to Daniel Heffernan.

Farewell Supper

Miss Eva Daboll, employed by the Corticelli Silk Co., and for many years a faithful worker at the B. P. Learned mission, was tendered a farewell supper at the mission Sunday, because of the departure of Miss Daboll for Florence, Mass., and where she will be employed by the silk company. Miss Daboll received numerous presents, the gifts of children and teachers of the mission Sunday school. Miss Anna Merriam, Miss Ruth Sellew, William Chapman and Richard W. Mansfield, superintendent of the mission, comprised the committee that arranged the supper.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of Wilson McCurdy and William T. Thompson, submarine base and also ordered the right to drive denied to B. D. Trippert, also of the submarine base.

An automobile carrying Rhode Island markers, which had been parked on the wrong side of Water street and three feet away from the curb for twenty-four hours, was ordered towed to a garage and put in storage by the police today.

Held For Bigamy

Joseph Sieciorka, alias Sutkowsky, was in the police court today, charged with bigamy. Probable cause was found and Sieciorka was held for trial at the next term of the superior court. In default of a surety on his bond of $1,000, Sieciorka was remanded to jail. Sieciorka was arrested here several weeks ago, charged with breach of the peace when caught in a raid on a Winthrop street house. He concluded his sentence today and was re-arrested. Sieciorka deserted his first wife in Holyoke, Mass., several months ago and then came to New London where he married a local woman.

Fine For Drunken Driving

Gustav Christophersen, 33, a plumber, residing at Poquonoc Bridge, was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 and costs. The court ordered $25 of the fine remitted.

Horn Blowing A Nuisance

Gatardo Benvenuti, 68 Goshen street, charged with breach of the peace, was fined $25, but execution of the sentence was suspended. Benvenuti is the owner of a motorcycle and has been one of several cyclists, who have ridden about the city blowing their horns incessantly, so much so that numerous complaints were made to the police. Last night, when Benvenuti drove through Main street continually blowing his horn he was arrested by Patrolman Michael Dorsey.

FUNERALS

Richard White

The funeral of Richard White, of 37 Grand street, was held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. The high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. George Clark. As a waiting hymn, Edward F. Murray sang "There's a Beautiful Land on High." The bearers were Anton Veraschi, George Baler, Hugh Cunningham, Charles Lindheim, Austin Ruddy and Patrick O'Leary. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. S. Thompson Bindloss

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida M. Bindloss, wife of S. Thompson Bindloss, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence in Flanders, and were attended by many mourners. Rev. M. Neilson, pastor of Flanders Baptist church, officiated. Relatives acted as bearers. Burial was in Flanders cemetery.

George A. Miner

The funeral of George A. Miner, son of Mrs. Arthur Miner, of Poquonoc Bridge, who was fatally injured Saturday afternoon when thrown from his motorcycle, sustaining a fractured skull, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Poquonoc Baptist church. The services were conducted by Rev. Albert E. Hyland, and were attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The bearers were Lewis Cromwell, Thomas Haggerty, Raymond Goudet, Albert Myers, Lee Strickland and R. Walther. Burial was in Ledyard cemetery.

The deed transferring title in the property of the Woodworth estate, Ocean avenue, to the New London West company, was filed for record today at the office of the city clerk. The property was recently ordered sold by the superior court and the purchase price was $38,000.

William C. Johnston has sold to Sarah J. Graham an undivided one-half interest in a building lot on Niles Hill road.

Nellie D. Turner has sold land on Hempstead street to Grace D. Brown. The property adjoins other property owned by the purchaser.

Archibald S. MacFarlane has sold a building lot on Cedar Grove avenue to Joseph Ryan.

Barnet Gordon and Morris Itzkowitz, of this city, and Morris Greenblatt, of Waterbury, have leased the store, 105 Bentley avenue, Ocean Beach to the National Economy store, of this city. The lease is for three years and dates from May 1, 1930. The annual rental is $450.

Stephen Barry, of East Lyme, was arrested in that town yesterday by State Police Officer John Smith, charged with driving with improper markers and driving without a license.

Clarence Luce, Niantic, was in East Lyme justice court last evening, charged with reckless driving and intoxication. His case was continued a week for further investigation.

Ruth Thompson, Mystic Oral school and Howard Briggs, Stonington, were arrested in Groton yesterday by State Police Officer Arthur Kaith, charged with failing to grant right of way and will be given a hearing in the Groton town court next Monday. The arrest of the drivers followed a collision of the automobiles they were driving at Burnett's corner.

WEDDING

Chapman—McBride

Daniel C. Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chapman, 838 Vauxhall street, and Miss Marjorie K. McBride, daughter of Mrs. Anne McBride, 191 Lincoln avenue, were married at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The nuptial mass was sung by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crawley. Otis A. Chapman, brother of the groom was best man and Miss Jane McBride sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Chapman held a reception at the home of the bride's parents, after which they left for New York on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at 280 Ocean avenue. Mr. Chapman is employed by the Connecticut Power company.

Starter Shifts Trolley Arms

In order to enable the Norwich-New London line trolley cars of the Connecticut company to leave the State street terminal on schedule since the inauguration of the one-man type of cars last Sunday, the company has issued an order requiring the starter on duty here to shift trolley arms upon the arrival of each car. Heretofore the crew of the car has made the shift, but much time is required to collect fares when the passengers are leaving the car and this cannot be accomplished readily with a score or more passengers alighting. Time will be saved by the starter making the change of trolley arm. At present a second motorman is being carried on each car to assist in its operation and this course will be followed until the new system has been in force a week or more.

The following have applied for marriage licenses at the office of the city clerk: Frank S. Prottas, merchant, of 107 Squire street and Mildred Charron, Norwich; Chester J. Parcheski, shipping clerk, 84 Winthrop street, and Mary M. Carey, 37 Waller street; Donald H. Hayes, clerk, Starr Hill, Groton and Esther M. Ryley, mill worker, 56 Truman street; John F. Ferez, sailor, Main and Hill streets and Rosalie Cortes, manicurist, 28 Hill street; Harry E. Dougherty, farmer, of Waterford and Clara E. Wilbur, office worker, 47 New street; James Whittaker, grocer, Pawtucket, R. I., and Catherine Lord, nurse at Odd Fellows' home, Groton.

MONTVILLE

At the meeting of the official board of the M. E. church Monday evening in the church parlors, at Uncasville, Rev. Otis Lee Monson presiding, it was voted to grant the Girl Scouts the use of the vestry for their regular meetings. Fred Perkins was elected lay delegate of the committee to plan union services of the four churches in Montville, Union Baptist, Mohegan church, Uncasville M. E. church and Montville Center Congregational church. Plans were made for a temperance pageant to be given one Sunday in January, 1931 by the Connecticut Anti-Saloon league.

The pastor announced that the Epworth league of the Norwich district will hold its convention at East Hartford Saturday, Oct. 4th, at 2 p. m., with a banquet at 6:00 p. m. This will be followed by an address in the evening by Rev. A. E. Claxton of New York. Final plans were made for the Norwich District Preachers' fall conference at Uncasville Methodist church, Oct. 6th and 7th, with Dist. Supt. Rev. M. E. Genter presiding. Visiting Nurse Ass'n

At the annual meeting of Montville Visiting Nurse association, held in the school auditorium at Uncasville, the session was called to order by the vice president, H. G. Dart, in the absence of its president, Mrs. Ralph H. Melcer, who is ill. The secretary's report was read and accepted. Five meetings were held during 1930. The association lost a faithful member when Mrs. Avery passed away last April. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $692.71. The visiting nurse's report was read and accepted. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Ralph H. Melcer; first vice president, Mrs. Hubert Dart; second vice president, Mrs. Chas. E. Ramage; secretary, Mrs. A. W. Gesner; treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Huggard.

Red Cross Officers

Previous to the Visiting Nurse meeting the annual meeting of the Red Cross was also held. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Ralph H. Melcer; secretary, Mrs. Herbert Dart; treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Huggard. The Red Cross has assisted the Visiting Nurse association during the year, has helped with the dental work among school children and secured glasses for one child; also assisted poor families, sent money to the flood stricken area in Vermont and New Hampshire.

During the three masses in St. John's Catholic church, Uncasville, Sunday, Rev. Terrence P. Finnegan, of Norwich, substituted for the pastor, Rev. Thomas F. Lynch, who is on his annual vacation. As usual, Rev. James P. Timmins, of St. Thomas' seminary, Hartford, assisted in the day's services. The Children of Mary and the Rosary and Scapular society will go to confession next Saturday in order to receive holy communion in a body at the mass Sunday at 7.30. The pastor has requested the Sunday school children to go to confession Saturday afternoon and to receive communion at the 8.30 mass Sunday. Confessions will also be heard Thursday afternoon and evening in preparation for the first Friday of the month, when mass will be at 5.30 a. m. and communion will be administered at 7.30. Masses next Sunday morning will be at 7.30 and 8.30 and high mass at 10.30 instead of 10, the services going on the regular winter schedule.

Rally Day At Baptist Church.

"Our Appointment With Christ" was the theme of the 10.45 a. m. Sunday morning services at Palmertown Union Baptist church by the pastor, Rev. Raymond F. Bates. Miss Lillian Ritchie was leader of the 6.30 p. m. C. E. society meeting, the topic being "How Would I Spend $1,000,000 On Missions?" The pastor closed the Rally day services at the 7 p. m. Glad Hour with a talk "Nothing in the Way." There was special music by the choir.

Alleged Reckless Driving.

John Vrononski of Pequot, Montville, was arrested by Police Officer Howard Lamphere Saturday evening on a charge of reckless driving at Uncasville Four Corners. The accused will be tried before Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church this (Monday) morning at 9 o'clock.

Ely Clark of Palmertown and Mrs. M. T. Pont, of Pequot, were dismissed from a private hospital at New London over the week end. They have been patients there for the past ten days following operations for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ludger Valliere and three children and Alfred Valliere and daughter, Jean, motored to Fall River over the week end and called on relatives.

Schools and places of business in the town of Montville will open this (Monday) morning on standard time. All the Sunday services were on old time.

Local fans attended the game between the Polish Citizens of Norwich and the J. B. Martin team at Taftville, Sunday.

The members of Maple camp, Royal Neighbors of America, will hold a rehearsal this (Monday) evening at the home of Mrs. M. J. Pont for the comedy, "Always In Trouble," which they will present sometime in November.

Camp Richards Closed.

Frank Richards, who has been spending the past four months at his summer camp, Camp Richards, at Oxoboxo lake, has closed the camp and has returned to his winter home at Palmertown.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Offerings of fall vegetables and fruits are becoming more liberal. Cauliflower is now in full swing but does not have its usual size and quality owing to the dry weather. Peppers, potatoes and apples continued in liberal supply and low priced. The general tone of the potato market held steady, though very liberal receipts of native stock are reaching the market. As yet very few Maine potatoes have been received.

The last of the summer vegetable crops, still arriving, were showing increased market strength and price gains. Tomatoes were much firmer and higher. String and lima beans and sweet corn were bringing premium prices for stock of quality.

The extreme warm weather of last week had a bad effect on the apple situation. Fruit in all kinds of storage except those artificially cooled was ripening rapidly and the feeling prevailed that markets were due for even more liberal offerings of all kinds of fall varieties than previously expected.

All kinds of poultry were liberally offered and market weak. Full sized eggs remained firm but under sizes were liberal and moving slow.

GREENEVILLE

OBITUARY

Henry C. Robillard

Following a short illness, the death of Henry C. Robillard, 39, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eli C. and Paulina Caron Robillard, of 40 Fourteenth street, occurred Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Danbury, where he had made his home. Mr. Robillard had been operated upon a week ago for kidney trouble but failed to rally.

He spent most of his life in Greeneville, receiving his education in the Greeneville school. Besides his parents, Mr. Robillard is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ina Lincoln Robillard, and two sisters, Mrs. A. E. Kelm of Cuba, and Mrs. Louis Jarry, of Taftville. He followed the trade of an electrician.

Miss Anna Rogers, of New Haven, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Seed on Baker street.

The Greeneville H club met Monday evening in their clubrooms on Fourth street. Regular business was transacted with President Wallace Atterbury presiding. Following the business meeting a pinochle contest was held with first prize awarded to Earl Whitehead.

Joseph Eccles, of Prospect street, is spending ten days at Detroit, Mich., where he will be the guest of his brother.

William Carroll, of Waterbury, is spending a few days with his parents on Mowry avenue.

Return From 1,200-Mile Trip

M. Frank Leonard, of Prospect street, and Louis Combies, of Burton avenue, have returned to their homes after spending a week in Canada. They covered over 1,200 miles in their trip. The trip was made in Mr. Combies' machine.

LOCAL GIRL FALLS DOWN STAIRS AT NORMAL SCHOOL

Word was received Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krouse of Fifth street that their daughter, Miss Eileen Krouse, a student at the Willimantic State Normal school, met with a painful accident at the school. Miss Krouse in some manner twisted on her heel throwing her forward and down a flight of stairs. She was taken to St. Joseph's hospital for x-ray pictures to determine the extent of her injuries which, at the present time, consisted of a badly wrenched leg.

To Announce World Series

Many of the local business men in Greeneville have radios installed in their stores for the returns of the World Series games. Some of the owners have a regular baseball sheet pasted on their windows and will keep tally as the game comes over the air.

Mr. and Mrs. James Shea and son, Francis, and Mrs. Billie McCall, of Westerly, were Sunday visitors with Agnes Sheehan of Fourth street.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. George Stewart, of Norwich avenue, are leaving this week to make their home in Louisiana.

Mrs. Charles T. Webster, of North A street, and Miss Anna M. Beardow, of Providence street, were prize winners at the bridge party given by the Backus hospital nurses on Monday evening.

Miss Margaret Emerson was tendered a birthday party by a number of her little friends on Saturday afternoon in honor of her eighth birthday. Games were played and prizes won by Agnes Gley, Felix Traummer, Janet Emerson and Bertha Kendall. Miss Margaret received many pretty gifts from her little friends. Those present were Doris Anne Weller, George W. Weller, Jr., Harry Ely, Bertha Kendall, Arlene Krauss, Florence Emerson, Philip Traummer, Mary Emerson, Janet Emerson of Lisbon and Richard Kramer, Marilyn Kramer of Greeneville, Agnes Gley and Marjorie Vetter from Taftville. Refreshments were served by Mrs. William Emerson assisted by Miss Augusta Thoma and Mrs. Richard Thoma. A table was set on the veranda prettily decorated in pink and yellow. The children received favors of balloons and crepe paper hats.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Lemoine, of Norwich avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Beval, of Riverside, were visitors in Danvers, Mass., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Meyer, of Blissville, and their guests, Mrs. Theo Goodrum and children, Mary Elizabeth and Myrtle May, of Vallejo, California, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hodson Tuesday, in White Rock

REP. TOWN COM. ENDORSES GREENSTEIN AND KNOWLES FOR REPRESENTATIVES

Attorney Josiah Greenstein of No. 30 Warren street and Fred Knowles of No. 48 Norwich avenue, Taftville, have received the endorsement of the republican town committee as the party's choice of candidates for election as representatives from Norwich to the general assembly. The committee voted endorsement of Attorney Greenstein and Mr. Knowles at a meeting Monday evening at which George M. Charbonneau, the chairman, presided.

Mr. Greenstein is a prominent lawyer with offices in the Thayer building and is an active party worker. Mr. Knowles is a well known resident of the Taftville section of the city and is employed at the Ponemah mills as a loom fixer. He is a prominent member of the Taftville Loom Fixers' union.

Party candidates for election as representatives to the legislature will be chosen at the republican town caucus to be held the evening of October 9th in the town hall. That the caucus will not be entirely harmonious was learned Tuesday evening. A rumor is gaining ground in political circles that two other candidates Charles A. Hagberg and Attorney Telley E. Babcock, will enter the field, in opposition to the town committee's choice of candidates. With a contest looming for the nominations the expectation is that there will be an unusually large attendance at the caucus. The only other business to be transacted at the caucus will be the making of nominations for justices of the peace.

COLLEGE MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD FOR MRS. SELDEN

A special memorial service for Mrs. Joseph Henry Selden of Norwich, who died last Saturday at her home in this city, was held Tuesday morning in the chapel of Connecticut college at New London.

Dr. Paul F. Laubenstein opened the service with a short prayer in which he extended the sympathy of the entire faculty and student body to Henry Bill Selden, son, who is professor of fine arts at the college.

President Katharine Blunt gave a short address in which she said she regretted she did not have the opportunity for a more intimate friendship with Mrs. Selden, "I only met her a few times," President Blunt said, "but I knew that she was a woman of great vigor and generosity. I have heard many stories of the time and thought and energy that she gave to help make Connecticut college a reality." In conclusion President Blunt introduced Dean Irene Nye, who knew Mrs. Selden intimately.

"Both Mr. and Mrs. Selden were interested in Connecticut college from its very inception," Dean Nye said. "They were both important figures in the early history of the college and their interest increased as their dreams were realized. Their aid was manifested in many ways, both of them giving freely of their time, energy and money."

Following the death of Mr. Selden in 1923, Mrs. Selden donated to the college approximately 1,000 volumes from his library which now constitutes an important and interesting part of Connecticut college library, including philosophy and religion. Later she gave the college the sum of $3,000, the interest on which is used for the purpose of obtaining some eminent speaker to come to the college once a year. This fund was known as the Joseph H. Selden Memorial Lectureship.

In conclusion Dean Nye said: "From now on the memorial lectureship will not only commemoriate Dr. Joseph H. Selden but also Mrs. Selden, one of the most loyal friends Connecticut college ever had."

COURT DISMISSES CASE AGAINST THREE PROWLERS

Breach of the peace charges against three men said to have been prowling around the farm of M. Marek at Plain Hill, Monday night, were nolled in the city court Tuesday morning. The accused were Daniel Ziezunk, known as "Big Dan" Eddie Novick and Aleck Swaish. They were arrested by Constable L. A. Fenton and the local police on complaint of the Marek family who claimed the men had been prowling around the farm and that one of them had been in a hen coop. An attempt to show that two of the men intended to steal chickens at the farm collapsed in court.

Novick, who is related to the Marek family, testified that he and the latter were not on good terms. He testified that with the other two men he had gone to the vicinity of the farm for the purpose of securing evidence of liquor law violation with the intention of having Marek arrested. He said he gave Ziezunk some money and told him to go to the Marek place and purchase some liquor to be used as evidence. The men, instead of securing the liquor Novick said they were after, were arrested, and locked up at polce headquarters. Marek claimed that during the previous two nights he had lost 35 chickens. A burlap bag containing a live chicken and a dead one, was found in the coop after the trio had been arrested Monday night.

ADVOCATE GENERAL WILL DECIDE ABOUT SAILOR

The judge advocate general at Washington, D. C., will pass on the matter of surrendering Stephen Kubisky, 20, submarine base sailor, to civilian authorities to answer to a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Kubisky accidentally shot Miss Marie R. Woods, 16, late of 277 Laurel Hill avenue, Sept. 6. The wound was fatal. The sailor is now held in the brig at the base.

Coroner Edward G. McKay issued a finding in the case Monday afternoon in which he found Kubisky criminally liable for the death of the girl. On Tuesday state police requested the surrender of the sailor but were informed that the opinion of the judge advocate general must be had.

85 IN GOODYEAR SCHOOLS HAVE IMPETIGO

DANIELSON, Sept. 30—(AP)—Dr. W. H. Judson, health officer of the town, made known today that 85 children in the schools of Goodyear are not in attendance because of what amounts to an epidemic of impetigo, a disease of the skin and of a highly contagious nature.

Dr. Judson gives warning that once it enters a community "it spreads like wildfire" among school children. The physician advises that every case developing be referred to the town health officer for advice, or free treatment if desired, within 24 hours.

FORMER NORWICH WOMAN BUILDS IN NORTHAMPTON

A newspaper of Northampton, Mass., records the fact that Mrs. Benjamin E. Cook is to remodel the corner of her apartment block in that city so as to provide a store on the first floor and rooms for private or business purposes on the second floor.

Mrs. Cook is a daughter of the late M. V. B. Pierson of this city. Several years ago she married Benjamin E. Cook, the first mayor of Northampton.

RURAL SECTIONS SHOWING BIG TELEPHONE GAINS

Telephone development is proceeding at a rapid pace among the smaller and more rural communities of the state, according to Southern New England Telephone company records. In fact, during the first six months of the current year, the telephone spread at a far more rapid rate of increase in the less thickly populated sections than it did in the major centers of population.

Due to prevailing subnormal conditions, Connecticut's gain in telephones for the first half of 1930 was limited to 2.4 per cent as compared with an increase of 3.9 per cent for the corresponding period of last year. In the 16 Connecticut exchanges where the number of telephone installations is five thousand or more, representing a population in excess of approximately 25,000, the increase in the number of telephones amounted to 4,198, a gain of 1.6 per cent. In the exchanges which have less than 5,000 telephones and where the population varies from 1,000 to 25,000, the gains in stations was 3,673, a rate of increase of 5.4 per cent. These smaller exchanges now have between one-fifth and one-fourth of the state's telephones.

To some extent the larger ratio of increase is due to the movement of families from the cities to the shore resorts along the sound, during the second quarter of the year. As for example hundreds of telephones in New Haven, Bridgeport, Hartford, etc., are discontinued for the three summer months while these subscribers are given service through one of the small shore resort exchanges.

However, the fact that the small towns show a healthy sign in telephones is further evidence of the trend of the city family toward the country, a fact revealed by the last census and affecting every section of the country.

Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, at which time action will be taken relative to the members attending the national convention. Other business will include the nomination of officers for the ensuing year.

BIRTHDAY DINNER WAS GIVEN IN PROVIDENCE

Mr. and Mrs. John Andrews of East Providence, formerly of Norwich, entertained 69 guests on Saturday evening in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Sophie Fragose of 28 Maple street, this city, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Weidwald, Mrs. Fragose was the recipient of many beautiful gifts including a purse of money and a beautiful bouquet of flowers which were presented to her by her granddaughters, Misses Sophie Andrews and Tillie Weidwald. The dancing of the evening was greatly enjoyed by the guests, music being furnished by an orchestra of which Mrs. Fragose's son is the leader, Bernard Fragose and His Melody Boys.

The feature of the evening was the reunion of the seven daughters from New York, Fall River, Providence, Pawtucket, Norwich, and New Bedford. Supper consisting of roast chicken, mashed potatoes, giblet gravy, apple pie and ice cream and assorted sodas, was served by Mrs. John Andrews, Mrs. Elsie Anderson, and Mrs. Alvina Lima. After wishing Mrs. Fragose many happy returns of the day eleven machines escorted Mrs. Fragose back to Norwich returning to Providence Sunday morning.

ACADEMY ADDS TWO TO TEACHING STAFF

The record registration this year at the Norwich Free Academy has necessitated the enlarging of the teaching staff, it was learned Tuesday evening. The two new teachers are Miss Mary Brackett of Minneapolis and Miss Mildred Tourtellott of Medford, Mass. Miss Brackett is teaching French and Miss Tourtellott science and algebra.

TEACHERS TO HAVE COURSE OF LECTURES

At a regular meeting of the Norwich Teachers' league held Monday afternoon, it was voted to engage Prof. Edward Noyes of Yale university to give a 15-week course of lectures again this fall. Those who took Prof. Noyes' course on Victorian English last winter are most enthusiastic about his return. Several interested persons outside of the teaching profession have signified their intention of attending the lectures, and it is hoped by the league that others will avail themselves of the opportunity. Prof. Noyes will come to Norwich Tuesday afternoons, starting in the near future.

WILL PROPOSE CAMPAIGN TO HELP DEPENDENT CHILDREN

Every 33rd child in Connecticut needs the aid of either public or private philanthropy, according to statistics compiled by the Connecticut Child Welfare association in preparing its fall program for under-privileged and unfortunate children. The computation puts the entire number of children requiring assistance at something over 10,000, or more than 3 per cent of the child population of the state.

For purposes of study, the association has divided the children in need of assistance into four groups, comprising the neglected, the dependent, the handicapped and the delinquent.

In the neglected group is placed the child of a broken home, the illegitimate child whom nobody wants and the child of vicious or ignorant parents. The dependent group takes in children who are handicapped by poverty in the home and who must often be sent to institutions for care. These two classifications account for slightly more than half of the 10,000.

More than 3,000 come under the grouping termed "the handicapped," which includes children suffering from such defects as deafness, physical deformity, poor eyesight, mental deficiency, etc. This group needs special training and supervision. Many of their handicaps can be minimized if treated in time, says Mrs. Edith Valet Cook, executive secretary of the association, but there must be early diagnosis and prompt treatment.

In the last classification are placed the delinquents, the children who come before the courts and who are either placed upon probation or committed to reform institutions. This group could be decreased at least 75 per cent by providing more facilities for recreation, adequate probation service in the juvenile courts and the services of the visiting teacher to deal with problem children in the public schools, Mrs. Cook states.

In presenting the statistics of this study at the October meeting of the board of directors, the executive committee will seek permission to hold a state-wide membership drive to secure support for a programme to cut down these figures. They are due, Mrs. Cook says, to the fact that emphasis in child welfare work is still placed upon individual cures instead of upon the eradication of the causes of neglect, dependency and delinquency.

Mrs. Percy T. Walden of New Haven is president of the Child Welfare association and Dr. Arnold L. Gesell of Yale university, vice-president. Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins is the Norwich representative who is available for consultation on any matters pertaining to child welfare in and about Norwich.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY THE SUNSHINE SOCIETY

WATERBURY, Sept. 30—(AP)—Mrs. Francis W. Pinches, of Niantic, was re-elected state president of the International Sunshine society today at the closing session of the 30th annual convention, which was attended by about 150 delegates from all parts of the state. Mrs. John Alden, of New York city, founder of the organization was a guest.

Mrs. Edgar G. Daniels, of Bethlehem, first vice president, and Mrs. Annie E. Miller, of East River, second vice president, were both re-elected. Mrs. Arthur Merrell of New Haven, was named third vice president. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Edith Horsfal, of New Britain, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clara L. Crews, of Hartford, state organizer; Mrs. Elizabeth Proctor, of Niantic, secretary; Mrs. Fred P. Holt, of Hartford, treasurer.

DAMAGE TO SHRUBBERY AND PLANTS AT GEDULDIG'S

Vandals caused damage estimated at between $200 and $300 at the Geduldig greenhouses, Cedar street, some time Monday night, when a large number of plants and expensive shrubbery were ruined. The tops of the plants and shrubbery were torn off and left scattered about. A report of the occurrence was made Tuesday to the police, who are investigating.

TO INVESTIGATE FINANCIAL CONDITION OF NORWALK

NORWALK, Sept. 30—(AP)—Republican leaders in thi scity tonight assumed a non-committal attitude as the local democratic party announced that it had authorized three justices of the peace to launch an investigation into the financial condition of the present republican municipal administration.

The investigation, ordered by the democrats under section 351 of the general statutes, will begin tomorrow, with hearings scheduled to be held behind closed doors by Justices Dr. William J. Moore, John J. Farrell and Henry J. Klein. It is expected to center around the street department, the million dollar sewage disposal plant now under construction, and the recent purchase of school sites.

Many city officials, including Mayor Anson F. Keeler, republican candidate for state senator, the democrats announced, will be summoned to testify before the justices.

NORWICH TOWN

The meeting of Ever Ready circle of the King's Daughters, which was to have been held this (Wednesday) evening at the home of Mrs. Philip B. Whaley, Mediterranean lane, has been postponed to Monday evening, Oct. 6

At Birthday Supper

When Mrs. Lucretia Lathrop entertained a company of 12 at supper at her home in Bozrah, Monday, in observance of her 80th birthday, included among her guests were Mrs. Gardner Avery and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Albert Avery, of Norwich Town. Mrs. Lathrop and Mrs. Gardner Avery were schoolmates.

Took Long Motor Trip

Having concluded nearly a week's touring through Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York state, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Gremley and the latter's mother, Mrs. Harriet E. Brainard, who returned Thursday evening to their home in Mystic, were callers Sunday afternoon at the home of Norwich Town relatives. Leaving Mystic Saturday morning, Sept. 20th, the objective was Albany. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Blanchard of Ellsmere over the week end. Upon arriving at Albany, they, by special permission, went to the extreme top of the state office building, it being in this building that Mr. Blanchard has his business office. Mrs. Brainard remained as a guest in the Blanchard home until Thursday visiting many points of interest in Albany during this time. Monday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Gremley continued through New York state to Watkins Glen, about 212 miles from Albany, remaining over that night at the former place. Tuesday morning about two hours were consumed in going through the Glen, noted for its picturesque scenic beauty. In the Glen are twelve waterfalls, none of which has any water overflowing, because of the long dry season. This was rather disappointing, as generally the falls are an attractive feature of the Glen, where also are winding paths, several foot bridges, hundreds of steps, etc., in ascending and descending. A trip to the top of the Glen was made by taxi, while the return was by way of the steps and narrow pathways, a distance of a mile and a half through.

Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. Gremley stayed at Cobleskill, N. Y., called the parlor of the state, because of its beautiful and well kept homes. From this place the following morning when returning to Albany, a trip was taken through Howe's Cavern, 200 feet under through Howe's Cavern, 200 feet underground to the bottom of the cave. With two guides, one in the lead and one at the rear of each party, after taking an elevator down 156 ft, the remainder of the trip is a gradual descent until reaching the bottom where the Styx river passes through. On this a short boat ride was taken. Although the exploration of this cave was most thrilling, lasting about an hour in observing the many natural formations when passing through, it likewise was most expensive, yet, tourists feel repaid for this outlay. In the cave there have been four marriages performed at what is designated as the pulpit. Mr. Howe, the explorer, for whom the cave is named, had a daughter married at this location, which was the first ceremony, and a grand-daughter was the fourth and last married there. When passing through Duanesburg, Mr. and Mrs. Gremley were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Little, at whose home they stayed six years ago when with others, a trip was made to Niagara Falls. On reaching Albany again Wednesday night, they were joined by Mrs. Gremley's mother, also by Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard, and a visit was made to Albany airport. While in Albany the Sunday previous the entire party motored to the top of Mount Helderberg, 1126 feet. Returning home, the Mystic party entered the northwestern part of Connecticut from New York state, an entirely different route from the outgoing trip, covering in all 89 miles.

STATISTICS BY THE ASS'N AGAINST DRY AMENDMENT

Annual Expenditure For Intoxicants in the U. S. Placed At $2,848,000,000—Figures Are Based On Retail Prices of 50 Cents a Gallon For Beer, $2.30 a Gallon For Wine and $11 a Gallon For Spirits—The Association Believes "We Are Now Consuming Annually 790,000,000 Gallons of Beer, 110,000,000 Gallons of Wine and 200,000,000 Gallons of Spirits"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—(AP)—The annual expenditure for intoxicants in the United States was placed today at $2,848,000,000 by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment which said this figure "exceeds the most liberal estimate of what we would have been spending if the eighteenth amendment had never been enacted."

This conclusion was announced in a pamphlet entitled "Does Prohibition Pay?" which the Association said was compiled as the result of 18 months' research work by statisticians and political economists.

The report challenged claims that national prohibition had increased the productivity of workers. It said the investigation had produced no evidence that prohibition had had any effect.

"The increased output of workers can be accounted for," the report explained, "by the increased use of power, improved machinery, mass production, personnel management and similar factors which are quite outside the control of the individual worker.

"Our analysis of the causes of increased productivity is based on the report of Mr. Hoover's committee on recent economic changes. The report of this distinguished committee nowhere mentions prohibition as a factor in the increased output of workingmen."

The per capita consumption of beer was reported as "only a little over one-fourth" the pre-war figure, but wine consumption is now about one-tenth in excess of the pre-war per capita rate."

Explaining it did not claim its calculations to be infallible, the Association said it believed "We are now consuming annually 790,000,000 gallons of beer, 110,000,000 gallons of wine and 200,000,000 gallons of spirits."

"In working out the national drink bill," it added, "the Association began by reckoning the total production of materials used in making intoxicants, as reported from trade and official sources, and deducting therefrom the estimated amounts used in legitimate industry. The materials included hops, grapes, corn sugar, cane and beet sugar, molasses, corn meal, grain mash and illicitly diverted alcohol."

The Association said, in making its estimate, it had obtained reports on bootleg prices in 30 unnamed communities but added that bootleg prices could be applied to only a small proportion of all liquor consumed.

"If we were to apply top bootleg prices to our estimates," the report said, "the total drink bill would be appalling With the exception of spirits, mostly liquor is made at home or purchased from neighborhood bootleggers at a fairly low retail price."

The estimate was based on retail prices of 50 cents a gallon for beer, $2.30 a ballon for wine and $11.00 a gallon for spirits. The estimated annual expenditure for beer was $395,000,000, wine $253,000,000 and spirits $2,200,000,000.

"Be believe that $2,500,000,000, exclusive of revenue," the report asserted, "is a generous estimate of what we would have been spending today if there were no prohibition. We can find no basis for the sweeping claim that we should now be spending from $1,000,000,000 to $7,000,000,000 for drink if there were no prohibition."

FORECAST OF NORMAL BUSINESS BY END OF 1931

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Business will reach a "statisticians' normal," that is, a point about half way between the peak of depression and the peak of prosperity, by the end of 1931, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Co. and nationally prominent business forecaster, said today.

He made this forecast in an address at a meeting of the savings bank division of the American Bankers' association in convention here.

Preparations were completed tonight by the association and local officials for the reception of President Hoover who will address the bankers tomorrow night at the closing of the convention.

The president will arrive here from Hoover was to arrive here tonight from Indianapolis.

Colonel Ayres, in his address today, traced the cycles of business during the last 52 years. He said there have been seven minor depressions and seven major ones. The minor ones have been national in scope and the major ones international.

We do not know exactly what causes these depressions, he said, but we can observe some of the psychological conditions of the people during them.

In rising out of a depression we pass through a period of increasing hope; as we reach prosperity our hope changes to confidence; our confidence brings a period of over-competition and production, giving rise to a period of doubt; our doubt increases and we reach depression, Colonel Ayres said

As we reach the low level our doubt changes to hope again and we start a climb out of the depression, he said, adding that this is where we are now, and with the expected recovery of automobile production and building construction at the first of the year we should soon begin an upward climb.

TO QUESTION FURNACE MAN ABOUT MISSING JUDGE CRATER

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—District Attorney Crain announced today that he plans to question the furnace man in the Fifth avenue apartment house where the missing Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater lived to find out if the judge, before dropping out of sight, burned papers which might reveal the reason for his disappearance.

It has been rumored that on the day Crater disappeared, or the day before, Joseph Mara, his court attendant, carried two brief cases and six folders, all stuffed with papers from the judge's chambers to the Fifth avenue apartment. All of those papers are missing

Mara is to be recalled before the grand jury investigating the disappearance to tell about these papers and also to say if it was he who deposited in Justice Crater's bank account a $5,000 check drawn by William Klein, an attorney and a friend of Crater's.

JAPAN RATIFIES THE LONDON NAVAL TREATY

TOKYO, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Japan today followed the lead of the United States and ratied the London naval treaty

Emperor Hirohito will affix his signature to the treaty probably tomorrow and the gold seal of the empire will testify to his action Later this month the ambassador to Great Britain, Esunec Matsudaira, will receive the document and formally deposit it with the British government.

Ratification was accomplished by unanimous vote of the privy council, which in its recommendation to the emperor, placed upon Premier Hamaguchi's government responsibility for the success of the pact. The council said:

"Relying upon the government's pledges that it assumes full responsibility for executing an efficient naval replenishment program and at the same time lightening the nation's taxation burdens, the council deems it right that the emperor ratify the treaty."

DEATH IN NEW YORK OF COMEDIAN JACK DONAHUE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Jack Donahue, hoofer-comedian whose agile feet and nimble Irish tongue carried him to the center of Broadway's spotlight, died today at his home on Central Park West.

That slogan of the good trouper, "the show must go on," was blamed for hurrying on the death of the still youthful Donahue, whom critics hailed as the most gifted dancer on the stage. He was only 38.

For 27 years he had danced—from amateur nights in his native Boston across the stages of the small-time vaudeville theatres of the country and finally to big-time musical comedy on Broadway.

He had packed them in on Broadway all last season with his portrayal, in the musical comedy "Sons o' Guns," of the rich young Yankee who didn't want to go to war against the Germans because he liked their cooking but who, when he broke out of a traitor's cell and found himself in No-Man's Land, captured three German prisoners who turned out to be a team of acrobats.

He was touring in the show until last Wednesday when, in Cincinnati, he collapsed of overwork. A complication of sinus and kidney trouble had been sapping his vitality but he continued his hoofing until his condition became critical.

YOUTHFUL CROSS-COUNTRY FLIER NOW AT AMARILLO, TEX.

AMARILLO, Tex., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Robert Buck, Elizabeth, N. J., 16-year-old flier seeking to lower the junior transcontinental speed record now held by Eddie Schneider, arrived here at 1:07 p. m. (C. S. T.), today, after a discouraging trip from Wichita, Kans.

He decided to spend the night here instead of continuing to Albuquerque, N. M., as planned, when weather charts looked unfavorable

He took off from Wichita at 8:55 a. m. (C. S. T.), but was forced to return to the field there 15 minutes later on account of low oil pressure. He took to the air for his second departure at 10:05 a. m. (C. S. T.).

The youth said his time from Wichita to Amarillo was lengthened fully one hour by strong headwinds and necessary detours around storm clouds.

$64,000 DAYLIGHT HOLDUP BY ROBBERS IN CHARLOTTE, N. C.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 1—(AP)—A daring daylight holdup in which $64,600 was obtained by two unmasked robbers was reported today by two employes of the American Trust company, of Charlotte.

The employes, Carl E. Bailey, a guard, and Leroy H. Stanton, bank clerk and messenger, reported they were forced to drive a money truck to the edge of the city where the robbers left them tied in the machine and escaped with the money.

Torrence E Hemby, vice president of the bank, said the institution was fully protected from loss through holdup and robbery insurance.

FRENCH GOOD WILL FLIERS LAND AT SAN ANTONIO

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French airmen, landed at the municipal airport shortly after 4 p. m. (C. S. T.), today, from El Paso, Tex., after being escorted into the city by a convoy of army planes. They left El Paso at 9:55 a. m. (M. S. T.), and made this leg of the good will trip without incident.

AGED FARMER COMMITTED SUICIDE BY HANGING

WINSTED, Oct. 1—(AP)—Peter Dantrich, 74, local fruit and vegetable raiser, committed suicide today by hanging. His body was found by his brother, William, suspended by a rope from a tree on the side of a mountain near his home. The act was ascribed to poor health

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

GENEVA, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Briand of France, speaking at the league of nations assembly, expressed optimism over the prospects for the November session of the prepartory disarmament commission.

VIENNA, Oct 1.—(AP)—A Rumanian politician visiting Vienna said that Queen Helen of Rumania, after many tears and great sorrow, had decided to leave Rumania forever and to hand over entirely to King Carol their little son Michael, formerly the boy king.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The Daily Herald said that King George recently desired to confer a title on George Bernard Shaw in recognition of his literary eminence but that Shaw declined it. The newspaper gave Mr. Shaw's secretary as the source of its information.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS SCARE AT WESLEYAN

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Despite reassuring statements issued by university authorities, 141 students, or nearly one fourth of the entire student body, had evacuated Wesleyan university by nightfall before the threat of infantile paralysis which has cost six lives in Connecticut in the past two weeks.

Two new cases were reported by Middletown health authorities today, bringing the total under treatment here to eight One was Parmalee Jones of East Cleveland, a freshman at Wesleyan and the other, Edna Granes, 9, of Middletown.

Dean William G. Chanter, of Wesleyan, today issued the following statement:

"The situation at Wesleyan has been carefully considered by the authorities there The best medical advice has been secured and it is unanimously to the effect that college should not be closed and that students should be advised that the best thing they can do is to keep on with their studies and not to worry.

"If their parents insist upon it they will be allowed to leave but if they do, it must be for the two weeks which constitute the incubator period of the disease.

"At present there are two cases from the student body in addition to Francis J. Lipky who died yesterday. One of the two under treatment (Guy Hastings, of South Manchester) seems out of danger The other was taken ill only last night. On the advice of parents, 141 have left for their homes. The medical service at the college is well organized and a careful check is being kept on student health."

STATE TICKET NAMED BY RHODE ISLAND DEMOCRATS

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The democratic state convention in session here today unanimously nominated five candidates, headed by former U. S. Senator Peter G. Gerry, of Warwick and Providence, for U. S. senator, and adopted without debate a platform asking for repeal of the 18th amendment and for constitutional reforms in Rhode Island.

Other candidates chosen were: Theodore Francis Green, of Providence, for governor; Thomas P. McCoy, of Pawtucket, for lieutenant governor; Lewis W. Cappelli, of Providence, for secretary of state; John P. Hartigan, of Cranston, for attorney general, and Louis T. Rocheleau, of Woonsocket, for general treasurer.

Samuel W. Smith, Jr., of Jamestown, Arthur L. Conaty, of North Providence and Francis B. Condon, of Central Falls, were nominated for congress at the congressional convention immediately following the state convention. The keynote speech by John J. Cooney, of Providence, attacked the republican administration of the state and appealed for united Roman Catholic support for the democratic ticket in November.

AUTOS ARE NOT LIABLE TO SEARCH ON "MERE SUSPICION"

NEW YORK Oct. 1.—(AP)—Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy of Wyoming ruled today in United States district court that automobiles are not liable to search by customs and prohibition agents "on mere suspicion."

He ordered the return of an automobile to Sebastian Estrada and a power boat to Antonio Palmeri and dismissed liquor complaints against two other men. Customs agents declared liquor was found in the car, but not in the boat, at the time of the seizures and arrests on a North river pier.

"The development of subsequent events after the search has been instituted," Judge Kennedy ruled, "cannot be held to justify unlawful search and seizure The courts have not gone so far as to sustain the search of automobiles on mere suspicion that they are being used for the unlawful transportation of liquor. If such procedure should be upheld it would subject our citizens to a reign of terror."

RUNYON S. BALDWIN FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Runyon S. Baldwin, of Wilton, wealthy New York real estate operator and son of the late William Delavan Baldwin, chairman of the board of directors of the Otis Elevator company, filed suit for divorce against Gertrude Baldwin in the superior court today, charging cruelty and intemperance. A suit for separation brought by Mrs. Baldwin is now pending before the supreme court of New York.

FIRE IN STROUSE-ADLER PLANT IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A fire originating among a pile of boxes in the fourth floor of the Strouse-Adler compayn's factory tonight resulted in considerable damage to stock. Joseph H. Ullman, vice president of the company, estimated the loss at about $25,000, most of it caused by water.

The fire was quickly extinguished by the factory's sprinkler system. Water inundated the fourth floor and seeped to the lower floors.

THREE MEN INJURED IN CRASH OF CABIN AIRPLANE

WELLSBORO, Pa., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Three men were injured today in the crash of a cabin airplane which fell as it circled over the airport here for a landing

At a hospital in Blossurg, they were tentatively identified as Henry Brown, of Webster Grove, Mo.; Dorsey Sager, of Wichita, Kans., and Harold Hough, of Chicago Hough was piloting the plane. Physicians said two of the men had broken limbs, but said examination of their injuries was incomplete.

Tammany Leaders Ordered To Testify

Or Lose Their Jobs—Mandate Issued By Mayor Walker to All Employed by the City

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—Mayor Walker served notice today on Tammany district leaders employed by the city that they must testify freely before the special grand jury probing charges of corruption in the city court or lose their jobs.

The mayor's mandate was deliv[illegible] in a brief address to seven Man[illegible] district leaders and two wo[illegible] leaders who are members of [illegible]net.

His ultimatum was in co[illegible]ance with a recent letter to him from Governor Roosevelt expressing dissatisfaction with 17 Tammany leaders who refused to sign waivers of immunity.

"No man can remain in the employ of the city under appointment by me," the mayor said, "declining to sign a waiver of immunity to testify fully and freely as to any official act or conduct. If you have heretofore refused to sign such a waiver, I direct you to notify the grand jury in accordance with this instruction and you will communicate to this office by 4 p. m. tomorrow that you have done so."

Only seven of the 17 recalcitrant witnesses are in the employ of the city. Several of the others, however, hold county or state jobs and it is believed most of them will obey the governor's "suggestion" that they return voluntarily before the grand jury.

The wholesale refusal of Tammany chieftains to waive immunity was begun by John F. Curry, head of Tammany hall, who declared he was "insulted" by a request to sign a waiver.

CHINESE GUNMEN WOUNDED BRITISH CUSTOMS OFFICIAL

TIENTSIN, China, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A group of well-dressed Chinese gunmen today shot and critically wounded Bertram Lenox Simpson, British commissioner of customs at Tientsin under the rebel-northern general, Yen Hsi-Shan.

The gunmen, who were alleged to have spoken the Manchurian dialect, arrived here this afternoon and registered at a Japanese hotel, saying they had come in by rail.

Later they hired a car and three of them drove to the commissioner's residence After they had shot Lenox Simpson they escaped unmolested but the police are making a close search for them. The car and the driver, obtained from a garage, were traced

Lenox Simpson's status as customs commissioner has not been known since the Manchurian army of Chang Hsueh-Liang took over the city last week, supposedly to aid the nationalist government in the civil war.

AN AIRMAN LEAPED TO SAFETY WITH PARACHUTE

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Lieut. John M. Cross of Wichita, Kans., joined the Caterpillar club today, leaping to safety with a parachute after a collision between his army reserve corps plane and a fast mystery monoplane piloted by Lieut. James H Doolittle, former army pilot.

Cross' plane was demolished. Doolittle, one of the ablest fliers in the army until his retirement to enter commercial aviation, landed safely with only minor damage.

Airport attendants and the pilots agreed the crash was unavoidable. Doolittle, flying nearly vertically upward after a power dive, cut the tail off Cross' plane. Cross said he saw Doolittle approaching and had started to bank when Doolittle's faster plane hit his ship.

PLOT BY PRISONERS TO ESCAPE FROM COURT ROOM

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1.—(AP)—What was believed to have been a plot of five men sentenced to terms in state prison to escape from the prisoners' pen in criminal superior court, was frustrated through a tip from another prisoner, court room attaches said today.

The delivery, scheduled for yesterday, was to start when one of the prisoners asked for a drink of water, Chief Deputy John A. Hutt said.

As soon as word of the plot was received, however, the prisoners were removed to cells in the basement of the building

Triple Air Mail Link From Coast To Coast

New Service Should Meet All Demands For Any Development For Some Time

W[illegible]NGTON, Oct. 1—(AP)—Postma[illegible]eral Brown today complete[illegible]e airmail link between the [illegible]d west coasts of the United [illegible] by awarding a contract for a [illegible]al transcontinental route which [illegible] begin operation October 15.

It was said at the department that service now available or provided for would meet all demands for east-west air development anticipated for some time.

The Western Air Express, Incorporated, of Los Angeles, and the Transcontinental Air Transport, Incorporated of Delaware, were given the contract for the new route. They will receive 97 1-2 per cent of maximum rates allowed for flying this mail. Maximum rates provided vary from 40 cents to $1.25 a mile, depending on poundage and other variables in graduated schedule.

The Western Air Express, Incorporated, of Los Angeles and the Transcontinental Air Transport, Incorporated of Delaware, were given the contract for the new route.

A bid by the United Navitation Corporation of Pittsburgh, which complained recently about post office requirements in the advertisement for proposals, was rejected by the department with the explanation the company's bid did not meet specifications. The bid was for 64 per cent of the maximum rate.

The new route will operate across the middle of the continent from New York to Los Angeles, serving Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Ohio, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Amarillo and Albuquerque. From St. Louis west, the government is considering a route which would touch Tulsa and Amarillo, operating either or both of the proposed routes.

Establishments of the new route was considered to have met present needs, but the department looks toward future development of new north-south lines.

NEGRO WAS LYNCHED AT CARTERSVILLE, GA.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Oct. 1—(AP)—John Will Clark, a Negro, charged with the murder of Chief of Police Joe Ben Jenkins, was taken from the county jail here early today and hanged, by 45 or more men traveling in automobiles.

Clark was taken from the jail about one o'clock and several hours later policemen found his body hanging by a rope from a telephone pole. It was apparent, authorities said, that he died from strangulation. The body bore no other marks of violence.

A previous effort to lynch Clark was made two weeks ago and he was removed to the Fulton county jail in Atlanta for safe keeping, being returned here yesterday for trial.

When the previous effort was made to take him from the jail, national guardsmen were called to duty from Atlanta and Marietta and extra officers were employed.

A special term of superior court was convened here Monday and Clark was to have been tried at the session.

STATUS OF THE TEXTILE STRIKE AT DANVILLE, VA.

DANVILLE, Va., Oct. 1.—(AP)—While non-union workers passed in and out of the Danville textile mills protected by court injunctions from interference of striking pickets, strike leaders today announced an attempt would be made probably on Monday to dissolve the injunctions.

A single instance of violence occurred today, the third day since approximately 4,000 union workers in the Dan River and Riverside mills did not return to work Monday morning. Noel Henry a worker, charged George Pugh, a mill overseer, with pushing him in a rough manner near the mill.

Thirty non-union workers entered the mills today to complete work necessary to save certain goods from spoiling and to unload coal to prevent demurrage charges, there being no attempt actually to operate the mills. Except for oral persuasion no attempt was made by the pickets to interfere.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE OF BRITAIN OPENS IN LONDON

Assemblage of Statesmen Represents a Fourth of the Globe's Inhabitants—Ramsay MacDonald Outlined the Work Ahead Under the Classification of Inter-Imperial Relations, Foreign Policy and Economic Affairs—Most of the Work Will Be Done By Committees

LONDON, Oct. 1—(AP)—Statesmen representing a fourth of the globe's inhabitants assembled in the historic Locarno room at the foreign office today for the opening session of the British imperial conference.

The session, which lasted only two hours, was featured by talks of Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, who was chosen to preside, and the premiers or representatives of the various dominions.

Mr. MacDonald outlined the work ahead, saying it came under the classification of inter-imperial relations, foreign policy and economic affairs. With regard to the first, he said, the report of the legal committee which investigated the structure of the British commonwealth last autumn would have to be examined and decisions made as to its recommendations.

"While engaged in that work," said the British premier, "we shall not forget that behind it is the talk of building for the future. Whatever changes of form we may accept we should be guided by the truth that, although form is undoubtedly important, it is the spirit behind the form that matters."

After brief speeches were made by the others adjournment was taken until tomorrow. Most of the work will be done by committees with occasional plenary sessions for reports of progress.

Prince Arthur of Connaugh presided over a brilliant banquet for the delegates at the Guild hall tonight. He disclosed an "eminent architect" had been approached regarding the erection of a great empire building in London.

In a radio address tonight, sent on short waves for the United States, Mr. MacDonald said that he saw the imperial conference as "another turning point in the wonderful story of our people."

He mentioned that the conference was not a "super-cabinet with executive authority" or a "parliament with powers to legislate" and continued;

"Now that the old house of the empire based on government from London has proved too narrow for the process of constitutional development, we must build up our new house of the British commonwealth, based on the principle of free cooperation."

As to foreign policy, he said that the chief task of the delegates would be to consider what further contribution the British commonwealth could make toward the cause of disarmament and peace.

He made what is generally interpreted as a reference to Lord Beaverbrook's "empire free trade campaign" by stating:—

"Although we may find that a great deal of talk in which people indulge is sadly remote from practical reality and takes no account of costs and consequences, we shall strive to lay hold of every chance we can find for our common advantage."

At another point Mr. MacDonald remarked that "trade will not keep our affections vital, but vital affection will keep our trade ample."

RAP AT HIGH TARIFF AT L. OF N. ASSEMBLY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Oct. 1—(AP)—A rap at high tariff countries was taken before the league of nations assembly today by the French minister of commerce, Pierre Etienne Flandin.

M. Flandin was speaking on the report of the economic committee, which recommended various methods of concerted action to relieve the world economic depression. He expressed misgivings at the attitude of Canada and other overseas tariff countries in abstaining from collaborating with a concerted movement to lower trade barriers.

"I understand," said M. Flandin, "that you can conceive of economic life when each one struggles for himself, but if you complain of the position that arises and express your desire to remedy that position, then you are bound to discipline yourself.

"You cannot, for instance, advocate an open door while keeping your own door closed. It has been forgotten that in order to buy you have to sell. It would be disastrous if we substituted for military imperialism an economic imperialism which might be far worse."

$21,000,000 CONSTRUCTION PLAN BY CANADIAN RAILWAYS

OTTAWA, Ont. Oct. 1—(AP)—Senator G. D Robertson, minister of labor, announced today that the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways would launch at once a $21,000,000 program of construction and improvement, entailing the employment of 10,500 men.

The railways will place substantial orders for 100 pound steel rails, Senator Robertson said, which will necessitate the use of thousands of tons of coal in their manufacture. Canadian National has agreed to increase its purchases of coal by about 200,000 tons.

Of the $20,000,000 fund set up by the government for unemployment relief, $1,000,000 will be devoted to augmenting the grade separation fund for the removal of level crossings and $4,000,000 will be used for "direct relief" for those unable to secure work. About $12,000,000 will be available for the construction of public works by provincial governments and municipalities, aided by the Dominion government.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED OVER $1,000,000 ESTATE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—Charges that a New York lawyer conspired with a university professor's wife to obtain the $1,000,000 estate of the aged widow of an Italian marquis while she was on her death bed were made today.

The man who made the allegations is Dr. Harrison Lyons Hunt, of New York, who under the original will was to have inherited a considerable portion of the estate of Mrs. E. Juanita Stolte, also known as the Marchessa de Armendarez, wealthy widow of an Italian banker.

As a result of Dr. Hunt's statements, Surrogate O'Brien today signed an order framing the issues which will be presented to the jury in the will contest.

Dr. Hunt asserted Ramsey Clayton, attorney, "exercised improper and undue influence" to obtain Mrs. Stolte's signature to a codicil to the will by which "Clayton practically becomes the sole heir to the aged and rich recluse."

WILL GO TO JAIL RATHER THAN ANSWER QUESTIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—Mrs. Martin J. Healy, wife of a Tammany district leader, said today she would go to jail rather than answer questions put to her before the extraordinary grand jury which has been sifting charges that George F. Ewald paid her husband $10,000 for a seat on the magistrate's bench.

"But I just can't believe they will take me away from my children and send me to jail," she said. "You see how it is with me. I'm just a mother interested in my children. I don't know anything about business, and I don't really believe there's a law that will send me to jail. How can they make a woman talk if she doesn't want to?"

The supreme court yesterday gave Mrs. Healy until next Monday to decide whether she will answer a long list of questions.

MISS SUSAN POLLARD TO WED HERBERT L. BOATWRIGHT

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 1—(AP)—Virginia's first lady, Miss Suzanne Pollard, will be married this fall or winter to Herbert Lee Boatwright, Jr., of Danville, Va., and Washington, D. C.

A brief announcement of the engagement of the daughter of Governor and Mrs. John Garland Pollard came from the executive mansion today, two weeks after the return of Miss Pollard from Europe. Whether the wedding will be at the historic old mansion in Capitol Square they did not say.

Society in the old dominion, however, accepted the mansion as the place where the marriage will take place, and looked forward to it as the climax of the social year.

In January Miss Pollard, at the age of 23, became official hostess at the mansion, taking the place of her mother, who was ill. Since then she has entertained many notable visitors.

Mr. Boatwright is connected with a legal firm in Washington. He is a graduate of Princeton university and studied law at the University of Virginia.

RESOLUTIONS BY COUNCIL OF CATHOLIC WOMEN

DENVER, Oct. 1—(AP)—Resolutions opposing attempts to federalize education and legislation for sterilization of the mentally deficient, and urging intensive study of family education to counteract the teaching of birth control and companionate marriage were adopted by the National Council of Catholic Women here today.

Miss Mary G. Hawks of Summit, N. J., was re-elected president of the council, which will hold its 1931 convention in Washington.

The council went on record as disapproving and discouraging competitive events such as beauty and endurance contests, as injurious to the physique of women and "unworthy of the high dignity and noble functions of womanhood." It refused to approve any play or motion picture belittling religion.

GENERAL FENG YU-HSIANG TO RETIRE TO PRIVATE LIFE

NANKING, Oct. 2.—(Thursday)—(AP)—The decision of General Feng Yu-Hsiang of the northern alliance to retire to private life was reiterated today by the military headquarters of the Chinese nationalist government.

Headquarters asserted Chaing Kai-Shek, nationalist generalissimo, had telegraphed from his field headquarters in Honan province saying emissaries of the kuominchun, General Feng's "people's army," had arrived and were negotiating for surrender.

Independent news sources here felt it was likely General Feng was planning a peace move, however, and had no intention of agreeing to a precipitate surrender. They indicated they considered the present nationalist reports premature.

THERE HAVE BEEN NO NEW DISORDERS IN HAVANA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The American embassy at Havana informed the state department late today there had been no new disorders in the Cuban city and that extra police had been withdrawn except those guarding the university where students clashed yesterday with the police.

The message said press censorship was established by decree this morning, and that a special judge has been designated by the Cuban government to investigate.

The International Telephone & Telegraph Co announced later in New York that the press censorship had been lifted.

PRODDED BY CONSCIENCE CONFESSED $36,000 SHORTAGE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—Prodded by conscience, William J. Scheel, 28, of the Bronx, assistant manager of a branch of the Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust company, today walked into police headquarters and disclosed he was short $36,000 in his accounts.

He said, according to detectives, that he had been juggling the books for a long time, but added: "I've got no money left. Lost it all betting on the horses."

COLCHESTER

BOROUGH IS FORTUNATE— NO SEPTEMBER FIRE LOSS

There was no fire loss in the borough during September, the fire company not even being called out for a chimney fire during the month. Since the beginning of the year, there has been a borough fire loss of only $50, the firemen being called for only four chimney fires. During the first nine months of 1929 there were seven fires with a total borough fire loss of about $8,000.

A special series of services is being held at the synagogue in observance of Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, the most sacred of all Jewish holidays, which started at sun-down, Wednesday, and continues to sundown today (Thursday). The day is spent in fasting and chanting the Kol Nidre melody. Most of the Jewish places of business will be closed.

FUNERAL

Morris Segal

Morris Segal, 42, of Amston avenue, died at a Hartford hospital Tuesday morning, following a long illness, the secondary cause of death being pneumonia. Besides his wife, he leaves three daughters. A son, Abraham, died last May. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the local synagogue with burial in the Jewish cemetery on the old East Haddam turnpike. A large number of local and out-of-town friends and relatives were in attendance.

A number from here attended Durham fair Wednesday.

Brook Drying Up

People who motor from here to Hartford are commenting on the unusually small flow of water in Tawn brook, adjoining the highway just north of the Colchester-Marlborough town line. This brook, which winds through one of the most picturesque spots on the Hartford-New London road, is usually a fast-flowing stream, but due to the long spell of dry weather it is almost dry in places.

His many friends are encouraged to learn that William S. Curtis has recovered from several days' illness with stomach trouble.

A new 30-foot well has recently been dug at the Seger home on Hall Hill avenue.

Stafford Springs

The following have been nominated for officers of Strazza post, American Legion: Commander, Bernard C. Hanley; first vice-commander, Ephraim Mirza; second vice-commander, Edward Wormstedt; adjutant, William Labreche; treasurer, Arthur Gilman; sergeant-at-arms, Jacob Wytas.

Advanced to New York

Howard Learned, assistant superintendent of the Fabyan Woolen Co., Medway, Mass., has been assigned to duty at the New York office. Mr. Learned is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Learned, Jr., of this town.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Corsini, of Willington, were recent visitors with relatives in town.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Mabel W. Loughheed

Funeral services for Mrs. Mabel Whitcher Loughheed were held at her home Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. Charles H. Puffer, of Glastonbury, former pastor of the Universalist church of Stafford Hollow, assisted by Rev. Clifford D. Newton, officiated at the services. Burial was in the family plot at Flanders cemetery, East Lyme, Conn. Mrs. Loughheed had been a resident of Stafford for 25 years. She took a helpful part in the activities of the Universalist church, of which she was a member.

The Missionary society of the Baptist church is to hold a meeting at the home of Mrs Eva Bugbee.

Orlando Bressan, who is employed in Danielson, was a recent visitor at the home of his parents.

Mrs. John Sullivan, of Clinton, Mass., is spending a few days with her sister, Miss Agnes Shea.

Danny Haigh is enjoying several days' visit with his parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Haigh.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Agostini and daughter, Amelia, of Hartford, are guests of relatives in the borough.

William Sullivan, of Clinton, Mass., has been the guest of borough friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs Joseph Lantoka, of Rockville, were recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Theberge.

Mrs. Joseph Fontanella, of Meriden, has been spending several days with her son, Valentine Fontanella.

Miss Margaret Foley has returned to her duties at the office of the Johnson Memorial hospital, after a week's vacation.

M. J. Budd, of Hartford, was in Stafford Springs on business Wednesday.

Supper Hostesses

Mrs. Richard Pinney, Mrs. Charles H. Meyers and Mrs. Herbert G. Wightman were hostesses at the October supper held in the vestry of the Universalist church at Stafford Hollow Wednesday evening. The supper was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society.

Leonard Glazier, of Hartford, was a recent visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Renato Calchera.

Alfred Pochini has returned to Providence, after spending a few days with his family on West street.

HAMPTON

HALL-PEARL WEDDING AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Sunday, at two o'clock in Hampton Congregational church, the pastor, Rev. William L. Muttart, united in marriage Miss Eleanor Mary Pearl, daughter of William A. Pearl and Arthur M. Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Hall. Following the ceremony which was largely attended a reception was held and a luncheon served at the home of Mr. Pearl. The bride was gowned in white silk cut princess style, wore a veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. She was attended by Mrs. Beatrice Thayer, as matron of honor, who was gowned in pink silk and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Other attendants, Miss Elinor Hall, sister of the groom and Mrs. Dorothy Overbaugh, sister of the bride, wore blue silk and carried yellow roses. After a wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Hall will reside in Hampton where the groom is a member of the Hall Film company.

POETRY

The Red-Brown Road

The red-brown road is distant far
From turbid city streets;
Upon its cool sequestered aisle
No glaring moontide beats.
Begirt by slopes of pink and gold,
And arched by fronds of green,
It winds its way, then runs astray
To view the river's sheen.

It welcomes home the fretted soul
Of him who comes again
To find surcease from petty quests
Amid the hives of men.
The torture of a thousand cares
No more exists for him
Who wanders as a joyous boy
Beside the river's rim.

The red-brown road, the orchard lands,
The river, calm and free,
The daisy field of godly gold,
The warblers' minstrelsy.
They bring lost voices back to earth,
They make us dream anew;
But, ah! We lack the old-time grace
To make those dreams come true.

—Thomas Curtis Clark in Chicago Tribune.

Hail To The Chief

Hail to the chief, who in triumph advances!
Honored and blest be the evergreen pine!
Long may the tree in his banner that glances,
Flourish and shelter the grace of our line!
Heaven send it happy dew,
Earth lend it sap anew,
Gaily to bourgeon and broadly to grow
While every Highland glen Sends our shout back again
"Roderick Vich Alpine dhu, ho! i-e-roe!"

Ours is no sapling, chance-sown by the fountain,
Blooming at Beltane in Winter to fade;
When the whirlwind has stripped ev'ry leaf on the mountain,
The more shall Clan Alpine exult in her shade.
Moor'd in the rifted rock,
Proof to the tempest's shock,
Firmer he roots him the ruder it blows;
Monteith and Breadalbane, then
Echo his praise again,
"Roderick Vich Alpine dhu, ho! i-e-roe!"

—Sir Walter Scott (1771-1832).

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"You're no collar ad."

"Well, you're no Fisher body yourself, carling."—Boston Transcript.

"Chicago is a hundred years old"—who said wisdom comes with age?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hotdog—The short story seems to be very popular these days.

Ole Katz—Yeah. Nearly every man I meet stops to tell me how short he is.—The Pathfinder.

Ad in El Paso (Tex.) paper: We were fortunate in securing 500 more pairs of these wonderful stockings. Regular $1 value. We do not guarantee them to last all day.—Exchange.

"Is Bliggins a considerate man?"

"Not exactly. He is one of those people who think it is all right to tramp on your feet as often as they choose, provided they say 'Excuse me!' every time."—Kennebec Journal.

"How are you coming on with your new system of weather prediction?"

"Well," answered the prophet cheerily. "I can always get the kind of weather all right, but I haven't quite succeeded in hitting the dates exactly."—Washington Star.

A celebrated violinist was invited to play his fiddle at one of those affairs over on Park avenue.

"How much would you want?" the hostess asked him.

"Five hundred dollars is my price," he replied stiffly.

"Of course you understand that you will not mingle with the guests."

"Oh, in that case I'll do it for four hundred."—Illinois Central.

Jackson and his wife were doing a little fly-hunting about the house.

"How many have you caught?" she asked after a while.

"Six," replied her husband; "three males and three females."

"How absurd!" his wife sniffed. "How could you tell if they were males or females?"

"Easy, my dear," he retorted. "Three were on the sugar and three were on the mirror."—Answers.

HEBRON

From Paper of 1890

Here is some Hebron news copied from The Connecticut Sunday School Record, dated West Hartford, Ct., May 1890. Mr. E. Buell Porter found the paper in the attic of his house:

"Hebron, Sunday, April 13th, was a sort of Sunday school day for this town. In the morning C. S. Mungar, of Essex, a member of the State Association committee, and W. H. Hall, secretary, were present at the Sunday school at Turnerville. Secretary Hall taught the lesson for the day to the entire school as one class, and both gentlemen made brief addresses, as did also Rev. Mr. Alexander, of Wesleyan university, who labors here every Sabbath. In the afternoon, Messrs. Munger and Hall conducted a well attended service in the M. E. church at Hope Valley, and at the close assisted in the organization of a Sunday school, there having been none held here for more than a year. Francis G. Waldo was elected superintendent. Later a supply of lesson helps was obtained through the aid of the State association, and a quantity of library books were donated by the Federal Street M. E. Sunday school, New London. In the evening a service was held in the interests of Sunday school work at the Congregational church at Hebron. Messrs. Hall and Munger made brief addresses, advocating earnestness and faithfulness in the prosecution of the work and pointing out some of the sure rewards of all such labor. The arrangements for these meetings were made by B. W. Hart, of the School for Christian Workers at Springfield, who spent a few days in Connecticut during his vacation, and rendered Secretary Hall valuable assistance in the work.

Rev. G. E. Chapin, father of Mrs. John N. Hewitt, and pastor of Hebron Congregational church, also rendered very valuable assistance. The day was one of joy, and it is hoped profitable service."

Pipeline Saves Cattle

EAGLE PASS, Tex.—(AP)—A 19-mile gas main saved several thousand head of cattle near here during the drought, and permitted an oil company to continue drilling wells. With a water shortage facing farmers and threatening the drilling, the gas main leading to a river was converted into a water line and pumped the water here for distribution.

"THE SERIOUSNESS OF GUARDING THE DELICATE NOSE AND THROAT MEMBRANES"

Says

BRIG. GENERAL WALTER C. MONTGOMERY

Graduate of Columbia University, College of Physicians and Surgeons. Instructor and Assistant Professor Department of Nose and Throat, Cornell Medical School, Cornell University, for 28 years. Sanitary Inspector, with rank of Colonel, and later Divisional Surgeon in the 27th Division in the World War in France. Awarded Distinguished Service Medal (U.S.) and Croix de Guerre with Palms (Belgium) and other medals for war service in France.

"The greatest triumphs of medicine will be in the direction of public education on the importance of preventive measures. And in this connection I cannot lay enough emphasis on the seriousness of guarding the delicate nose and throat membranes and accessory sinuses. Your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of the LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos, I regard as a laudable effort on your part to give the great army of American smokers the benefit of recent scientific conclusions."

PUTMAN MAN JAILED FOR FRAUD WILL BE ARRESTED FOR THEFT OF AUTOMOBILES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 1.—According to a police report received from Hartford this morning by Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil, Leo J. Bousquet of this city was sentenced to serve a 30-day sentence in the county jail in Hartford, when found guilty of disposing of a radio which he purchased from a Hartford firm on a conditional bill of sale. The case was tried in Hartford police court, where Bousquet admitted selling the $119 radio. He said he did so because he was in need of money, but had intended to keep the installment payments up.

Captain Dubreuil was also informed by Hartford police that upon Bousquet's release from jail he will be rearrested and tried on charges growing out of his alleged thefts of automobiles said to have been stolen by him in Hartford. One of the complainants against the Putnam man is the Max Motor Co. of Hartford, which charges that Bousquet junked an automobile he stole from them in a junk yard near this city. Another Capitol city motor concern has also filed a car theft complaint against him and is asking for his arrest and prosecution.

Bousquet was arrested Monday by Putnam police and was turned over to the Hartford authorities.

DANIELSON

W. A. MUSGRAVE BECOMES MEMBER OF NEW YORK FIRM

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 1. — Announcement is made that Walter A. Musgrave of North Main street, a certified public accountant with offices in Hartford, has been admitted as a partner in the internationally known firm of Touche, Niven and company, whose New York offices are in Maiden Lane, New York. The business of W. A. Musgrave and Co., of Danielson and Hartford will be incorporated with that of Touche, Niven and company, whose Connecticut office will be in Hartford with Mr. Musgrave as resident partner.

Mr. Musgrave, a resident of Plainfield before coming to Danielson, has achieved an outstanding place for himself in the field of certified public accounting. He opened his first office in Danielson, where he continues to make his home. He was successful from the start, and his business quickly expanded until his clients were to be found in all parts of southern New England. For the convenience of the firm and the persons from which much of its business came an office later was opened in Hartford.

A recognized authority in his chosen field, Mr. Musgrave has frequently been called upon to speak before conventions of accounting organizations, and has presented highly praised papers dealing with the most abstruse accounting subjects. His many friends here and throughout the state are deeply gratified that his talents have won him the distinction of a partnership in the firm of Touche, Niven and company. This concern has offices in this country in New York, Chicago, Hartford, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Atlanta and Los Angeles. It is affiliated with George A. Touche and company of London, George A. Touche and company of Canada, where there are eight branches, and Touche, Niven and company of Paris. It is one of the high standing certified public accounting firms in the English-speaking world.

Mr. Musgrave's partnership in the firm dates from today, October 1.

SAYLES SAYS HE IS NOT RUNNING AGAINST TILLINGHAST

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON Oct. 1. — Selectman Alcott D. Sayles, running independently for selectman, having failed of renomination in his party caucus, made a very significant statement this afternoon. He said: "I am not running for first selectman against Charles A. Tillinghast." That clears the atmosphere considerably for many a voter, republican or democrat.

All of this came about because there are numbers of voters who are a bit confused over the manner in which they must mark their ballots if they want to vote for Mr. Tillinghast, republican, for first selectman and also for Mr. Sayles for a place on the board. This can be done very readily. As a matter of fact, it is possible to vote for any one of the five candidates for first selectman by putting the figure 1 opposite the selected candidate's name and the cross-mark X before one's second choice for selectman. The figure 1 (one) does the trick, as explained at the head of every specimen and official ballot.

It so happens also that it is not necessary to vote for Mr. Sayles for first selectman as many believe, because his name is to be written into the "blank" column by those who support him. It can be written into the second place for selectman in the blank column as can the name of any other voter.

In the tight race that is now on between all five candidates and of the forecast of wholesale splitting of tickets on the vote for selectmen considerable confusion has arisen among the voters, especially the younger ones, some of whom are to vote next Monday for the first time. Older voters, especially the leaders of both the republican and democratic parties, will gladly explain to any voter who is puzzled how to mark their ballots and mark them correctly. Getting the correct information these leaders point out, will save many a ballot from being thrown out because of improper marking or insufficient marking.

Drumming Sergeant Leaves

Sergeant S A. Moeller, colonial-clad Spanish war veteran, who is hiking over the roads from New York to Boston to attend the American Legion convention marched gallantly out of this town shortly before 8 o'clock this morning, headed for Providence, 36 miles away, and figuring to reach the Rhode Island capital sometime late this afternoon. His schedule calls for arrival in Boston on Friday.

WEDDING

Fulton—Spencer

A marriage of much interest here that took place at the Central Baptist church in Hartford last Saturday afternoon was that of Miss Marion Louise Spencer of Campfield avenue, that city, and Robert Theodore Fulton, son of Mrs. Margaret Fulton of Danielson. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. John N. Lackey, D. D., assisted by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church. The church was decorated with palms and hydrangeas.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, B. H. Spencer, wore a gown of eggshell moire made period style and with an uneven hemline. She wore an eggshell shade veil, which fell from a cap of old lace caught with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Gladys Arline Spencer, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Doris Dutton, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Esther Mortensen. Lois Gallup, also a cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

The maid of honor wore a flesh colored satin gown with a tulle skirt and hat of lace to match. She wore flesh colored satin slippers and carried a bouquet of briarcliff roses and delphinium. The bridesmaids wore green satin with tulle skirts and with hats of lace and slippers to match the gowns. Their bouquets were of tea roses and baby's breath. The flower girl wore a dress and hat to match that of the maid of honor and carried a bouquet of rose petals tied with maline to match her gown.

Denton T. Gallup, of Danielson, was best man. The ushers were Wendell Ferguson, James Burgess, Kenneth Varney and Noah Firdall. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents which was decorated with flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Fulton are now away on their wedding trip. After October 15, they are to be at home at 195 Collins street, Hartford. Mr. Fulton is a graduate of Killingly high school in the class of 1926.

Attending from Danielson were Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Allen, Miss Mae Bassett, Miss Saidie Fulton and Mrs. Marguerite Fulton, mother of the groom.

OBITUARY

Raoul Burnet

Raoul Burnet 58, died this morning at the home of his son, Ludger Burnet, on Prospect street. He had been in ill health for the past three months. Mr Burnet was a native of Canada but had spent much of his life in this town. Prior to his health failing he had been employed in a local mill.

In some sections hereabouts a light film of ice was reported this morning on small vessels of water left out of doors. The mercury touched 30 degrees.

A marriage at St. James' rectory yesterday was that of Miss Esther Benson and Dewey Tetreault, both employes at the Attawaugan hotel. The bride is of Fitchburg, the groom a former resident of Putnam.

Radio sets held scores of baseball fans spellbound here this afternoon as the story of the first game of the World Series in Philadelphia, was reeled off.

Your borough taxes must be paid by Oct. 8. See Collector Sidney H. Perry.—adv.

The case of the state against Russell Neal, of Ballouville, was again continued today, this time until Thursday. Neal's place in an open field near Ballouville, was raided by state officers last Saturday night, when 58 persons, blacks and whites, were found congregated there.

Duck hunters were out on this opening day of the shooting season for that variety of wild game bird. A number of ducks were taken about the ponds at East Killingly, it was reported.

Intensive canvassing is now being done by candidates for selectmen in Killingly. There is unusual activity in the second voting district, which includes Dayville, Goodyear, Attawaugan and Ballouville.

Later in the month Dana Shippee, of East Killingly, is to leave for a month's fox hunting in Vermont. Mr. Shippee is one of the most skilled and successful hunters of foxes in eastern Connecticut.

John C. Weisman, of Springfield, was a visitor today with friends in Danielson.

NO. GROSVENORDALE

A fleet of fourteen airships passed over the town Tuesday in a northerly direction, apparently on the course to Boston, in a triangular formation the fleet of planes was likened to an excessively noisy flock of wild geese. The airways were unusually busy during the day, 22 airplanes going over between 10 o'clock in the morning until 5:30 in the afternoon.

Miss Mary Lavallee is away on a brief vacation.

SOMERS

The dedication exercises of the soldiers' and sailors' memorial were held Sunday afternoon. The first part of the program was held in Piedmont hall; First Selectman Louis A. Goudy announced the program and gave a brief history of the work done in securing the monument. He stated but for the efforts of Dr. Ralph B. Thayer it would not have been gotten. The money for it was raised by public subscription; the cost was about $2,500 Prayers, Scripture reading and four-minute talks were given by the local clergy, Rev. Edwin T. Jones, Rev. Joseph H. Seiferneau and Rev. Elmer J Cook. Seventh and eighth grade pupils of the town sang several selections under direction of Mrs. Hazel Clough, principal of Somers school; solos were sung by Percy Cooley, of Rockville, and Mrs. Willard Finney, of Somerville, E. Newmaker, of Rockville, commander of the American Legion of Connecticut, gave an interesting talk. After singing America the Beautiful, the dedication exercises were continued on the lawn around the memorial and were in charge of the American Legion posts of Rockville and Ellington. Dr. Ralph B Thayer, of this town, made the dedication address. The recently organized bugle corps of about 45 members provided music. There was a large attendance at the exercises.

Sunday school services were omitted Sunday morning to give the children time to attend the dedication exercises.

Next Sunday is to be observed as Rally day in the local church and church school.

The Choral society met Monday evening with Judge and Mrs. Ernest S. Fuller.

The Visiting Nurse association held its annual meeting Monday evening at the town hall.

The Ladies' Aid society is to serve a community supper at Piedmont hall. The hostesses are Mrs. Harold Cook, Mrs. Fred C Davis and Mrs. Ernest S. Newcomb.

William D. Pardee, of Orange, Conn., and E. C. Prettyman, of New Haven, representing the Connecticut Temperance and Anti-Saloon league, gave a dramatic debate, "Can the Prohibition Law be Enforced?" at the local church Sunday evening. The debate proved most entertaining and instructive.

Miss Eleanor Percival, of the nurses' training school in Hartford hospital, is spending three weeks' vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Dwight Percival.

Ralph Carpenter, of Willimantic, was a week-end guest at Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Percival's.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Webster have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Slocum, of Wakefield, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Prior, of Worcester, Mass., and Arthur Prior, of South Orrington, Maine, were recent guests of Mrs. Emma K. Prior.

Mrs. C. S Williams, of Williamsville, N. Y., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Walter B. Whitlock.

Miss Adella Doane, of Wallingford, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Beebe, of North Dana, Mass., have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Loomis.

NEAR EAST FARM BELT HIT BY LOCUSTS, MICE

DAMASCUS —(AP)—Conditions are desperately hard for agriculture all over the Near East this year.

Locusts and field mice, combined with low wheat prices, have reduced the farmers to a sad plight.

In Iraq, the ancient Mesopotamia, renowned for its fertility, the fellaheen have started to refuse payment of taxes in cash. They are prepared to pay in kind only.

In some places there were collisions between the farmers and the troops owing to the former's refusal to pay.

In Syria, one of Rome's granaries, the farmers informed the government of their inability to pay taxes.

After investigating the situation of the fellaheen the Palestine government is this year remitting 30 per cent of the agricultural taxes.

Bulgars to Grow Tobacco

SOFIA, Bulgaria—(AP)—This country is seeking relief from its agricultural crisis by intensive growth of tobacco. Formerly grain was first in exports, but now tobacco has taken its place. It formed 43 per cent of 1929 exports with 200 000 families engaged in its production.

Police cameramen in Vienna have been assigned to take pictures of all public events in which policemen take part.

PUTNAM

DR. DEAN NAMED AS LOCAL SCHOOL PHYSICIAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 1.—Dr. Florence F. Dean, well known Putnam physician, by an act of the town school committee has been appointed to succeed the late Dr. George T. Lamarche, as head of the school health department. Dr. Dean has already begun her duties as school physician and is now conducting examinations of pupils.

Dr. Dean is a graduate of Cornell university medical school. After passing the Connecticut state board of medical examiners, she came to Putnam to succeed Dr. Margaurite J. Bullard, who died in 1929.

This part of Windham county got its first real taste of autumn this morning as thermometers dropped to a new low of 31 degrees at 5:15 o'clock. Frost nipped flowers and other late garden products and began its first work in the coloring of the countryside with the fall hues. At the Andem greenhouses on Farrows street it was reported that ice formed on the glass panes when the mercury slipped to its almost record-breaking mark for Oct. 1. In many homes and business blocks throughout the city today fires in furnaces and stoves were kindled to drive off the chills created by the arrival of winter's vanguard.

Rev. Joseph Vasey, former pastor of a church in Terre Haute, Ind., arrived in this city this afternoon to assume his new ecclesiastical duties as pastor of the Congregational church of Putnam. Rev. Mr Vasey succeeds Rev. James F. English, who resigned in June to become pastor of a Congregational church in Manchester, N. H. The new pastor is to occupy the church parsonage on Grove street, which has recently been renovated preparatory to his coming. On Sunday he will deliver his first sermon of his new pastorate. Rev. Mr Vasey is married and has two children.

Yom Kippur, or day of atonement, the most solemn of fast days in the Jewish calendar, came to a close tonight at sunset and likewise brought to a close the penitential period of ten days which began last week with Rosh-Hashanah. Local Hebrews attended services at the Sons of Zion synagogue on Main street last evening at which Rabbi Morris Solibusky officiated. Many members of the faith attended the Yom Kippur services, which were held at the temples in the nearby cities.

In a golfing sense, the nurses' home fund which has taken many hundreds of dollars into its coffers during the past week, today stands $20,000 up with $5,000 to go. With the campaign so near the goal line, it is safe to say that the community teams are now in the home stretch and will in all probability complete their work this month. At a meeting of the campaign workers held this afternoon in Thompson it was said that the fund had gone well over the $20,000 mark and there are still a number of events to be heard from. All towns aiding in the fund campaign have exceeded their quotas, with the exception of this city and Danielson.

There was too much zip and zest and other cold weather characteristics in the air this morning for Capt. A. J. Dubreuil and Patrolman Page of the local police to venture out in their comfortable summer uniforms, so the garments were restored to the moth bags without ceremony, to await the return of the robins next April. Spick and span in the familiar "blues," the captain and his trusty subordinate went about their duties today quite in keeping with the edicts of the weatherman.

Bread Truck Wrecked

Bread, the staff of life, so-called, was late in getting around to Putnam stores this morning when a truck of the General Baking Co. of Providence met with accident while rounding an intersection at the four corners in West Thompson a few hundred yards north of the Mechanicsville schoolhouse. The mishap occurred when a car operated by Mary A. Minarik of Webster collided with the bread truck as both cars were entering the state highway from different intersections. The truck was hurled over on its side and badly damaged, while considerable damage was caused to the private car. Neither the truckman nor occupants of the other vehicle were injured. In checking up the accident, State Officer Lionel Poirier of Danielson barracks placed Miss Minarik under arrest on a charge of failing to keep to the right of an intersection. She will appear this evening in justice court in North Grosvenordale.

Word has been received here of the death of Rev. M. J. O'Connor, pastor of St. Peter's church in Danbury. Father O'Connor for four years served as pastor of the Church of the Most Holy Trinity at Pomfret and of the Church of the Sacred Heart in West Thompson. Father O'Connor was succeeded by the late Rev. John J. Elty whose death occurred in 1924.

It is expected that about 100 members of the American Legion representing this city and nearby communities will be in Boston on Oct. 7 to take part in the "Big Parade," in which 75,000 people will march. Boston day, as Oct. 7 is being called, will also attract great numbers of civilians to the New England metropolis to attend the mammoth American Legion spectacle. G. Stanley Shaw, past commander of the Anslem Mayotte post, is in charge of local arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Averill of Pleasant street are to spend the late fall and winter months in Florida. Mr. Averill, for a number of years, conducted the Putnam Music shop.

At a meeting of the Putnam chamber of commerce held Monday evening plans for the reception of members of the Brunswick Fox club, which is to hold its annual meeting and field trials in Putnam this month, were discussed.

Workmen are setting up stagings on the north front side of the Putnam Inn building in Union square, preparatory to the re-inforcing of the foundation.

Members of the junior class at Putnam high school are now making preparations for their annual Halloween festival to be given on Oct. 31.

BAYER

FIND OF WILD HONEY REWARDS CLEVERNESS OF AL. RANDALL

From a great dead chestnut tree over three feet through at the butt, Al. Randall, a local hunter and trapper secured, Monday, 67 pounds of wild honey. This forest delicacy is something that the sharpest eyes are seldom able to locate. The tree, when split open several feet below the knot-hole through which the bees gained entrance to the great trunk, gave evidence of having been in use as a honey store-house for three years. During the first and second winters the supply which the workers had laid up had not all been consumed, so that the comb at the bottom had been there since the summer of 1927. When strained and held against the sun, it is the color of old port, with a peculiar tang and woodsy flavor to be found only in wild honey aged in the wood. Mr. Randall, while cruising through the big timber off to the north of the town one day in the late summer, came upon a colony of wild bees busy among the asters and golden rod. The next day he returned to the place with a small box in which he had placed a small quantity of honey then he caught three bees and put them into the box. The tactics he used were the same that Sam Lowell adopted in Rowland E. Robinson's Vermont story of "Uncle Lisha's Shop. After the prisoners in the box had loaded up with the honey Mr. Randall let one out, carefully noting the direction in which he flew. Following on a half mile, another was liberated. Then, after covering nearly a mile he sighted the chestnut stump The last bee was allowed to go and the hunter saw the insect fly like a shot from a gun, straight to the knot-hole and disappear. Watching a minute more, a long line of workers came out and flew down the valley in a straight line. The next day, the securing of the stored wild honey right from the purple asters, golden rod and white button brush, was an easy matter. No hived colony of prize Italian bees ever can produce wild honey, and in the city markets this product of the forest bees commands a fancy figure.

DR. J. H. McLAUGHLIN NAMED HEALTH OFFICER OF TOWN

Dr. J. H. McLaughlin, a native of Norwich, succeeds Dr. G. H. Jennings as health officer for the town of Griswold, the appointment being made by Hilbert R. Norman of Norwich, health officer for New London county. At a meeting of the board of borough government to be held Oct. 6th, Dr. Jennings will tender his resignation as health officer for the borough of Jewett City. Following its acceptance the warden and burgesses will name his successor.

Have your eyes examined by Dr C. A. Spear, optometrist; hours 7 to 9. Friday evening, Anthony block.—adv.

Miss Regina V. Gutnecht, who is spending a week with relatives in Lowell, Mass has just completed a three-year course in nursing at the Backus hospital, Norwich.

H. N. S. Manager A Winner

Local ball fans were all tuned in on Philadelphia Wednesday afternoon. Terry McGovern, the booking manager of the H. N. S. team, shot over a fast one on the boys, for he picked the winner and Grimes and Grove to start on the slab, all this to a substantial pocketing of long green. Some say he got his dope direct from Connie, with others inclined to doubt it. Anyhow, he produced the goods.

The second meeting of the Happy-go-Lucky club, held at the home of Miss Eva Shorey, was opened with the club song followed by the Lord's prayer. Springtime in the Rockies was sung and the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read. An honest-to-goodness ghost story told by Miss Goodenough proved too realistic for Estelle Shorey, so that she hid in the corner to keep clear of the goblins. Games and refreshments were other features of the very pleasant evening.

Pachaug grange meeting is to be held this (Thursday) evening. The program has been arranged by Pomona Mrs. Bertha Warren. The New London county Pomona officers have been invited as special guests.

Warden E J. Jodoin, following slight ptomaine poisoning which kept him at home two days, is on duty again in his market.

Farewell Party For Nurse

At Camp Ency-Nous on the Quinebaug, Tuesday evening the R. D. club gave a farewell bridge party in honor of Miss Bertha Ruszenas who is leaving for Boston where she is to take a post-graduate course in nursing at Boston Lying-In hospital. Bridge prizes were awarded Misses Mary Freeman and Josephine Ambot. Miss Ruzenas was presented a fine box leather handbag.

The evening proved most enjoyable with a weenie roast and marshmallows toasted over the camp fire. There were ten of Miss Ruszenas' girl friends present

STATE OFFICERS GUESTS OF LOCAL REBEKAH LODGE

Rutilie Rebekah lodge observed the 79th anniversary of the Rebekah degree at a special meeting on Tuesday evening. A supper of baked ham, potato and cabbage salads, biscuit, cake and coffee was served at half past six. The guests of honor were the president of the Rebekah assembly of Connecticut, Mrs. Harriett M. Wilson, of Bridgeport; the vice president, Mrs. Mildred J. West, of Hamden, who were overnight guests of Miss Ruby Thornton, also Mrs. Mary E. Green, of Norwich. These officers spoke briefly concerning the order. On behalf of the members Mrs. Louise Holmes presented a picture to Mrs. Wilson. An entertaining program was given by Mrs. Alice Davis, Mrs. Alice Anthony, Mrs. Nellie Gray, Mrs Martha Mell, Miss Ethel Fiske, Mrs. Nellie Wharton, Mrs. Bessie Medick and Mrs. Irene Benjamin. Mrs. Wilson gave an address on Rebekah Odd Fellowship. The arrangements for this observance were in charge of Mrs. Lillian Spicer, Mrs. Ida Benjamin and Mrs. Esther Hyde.

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Ferguson, of Goffstown, N H., are visiting Mrs. Ferguson's niece, Mrs. Earle Palmer, in Lisbon.

An evening school for non-English speaking people is to open at Riverside grammar school October 6, being in session from 7 to 9.

WEDDING

Green—Walker

Ray Green manager at Ashland Cotton Co., and Miss Marjorie H. Walker were married at Newman Congregational church in Rumford, R. I., Saturday afternoon; Harry Baldwin of this place was an usher at the wedding. Among those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Austin Harris and Miss Julia Sayles, Mr. and Mrs. Green are to live in one of the Gilbert cottages on Pachaug road.

Rev. G. F. Coodenough, Mrs. Walter Marshall, Miss M. A. Burdick and Mrs. F. E. Robinson attended the six-church conference in Preston City Wednesday.

EAST WOODSTOCK

Mrs. Flora Alton has returned from a visit of several weeks in Hartford.

Mrs. Carl Danielson and daughter Jane, of Hartford, spent the week-end with J. E. Child and family.

Mrs. Josephine Steere and Mrs. Flora Alton are spending several days with Mr. Rich and family in Worcester.

Mrs. Charles Hopkins, regent of Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R, attended the state meeting of regents held at the Ellsworth homestead, Windsor, last week Thursday.

Raymond Hibbard, of North Woodstock, was organist at the Congregational church Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Morse motored to Burlington, Vt., last Friday, taking their eldest son, Stewart, who takes another year of study at University of Vermont. They returned by way of the White Mountains, stopping over one night.

Joseph Morse spent the week-end with Paul Gifford and family, at Weekapaug, R. I.

FUNERAL

Joseph Spencer

The funeral of Joseph Spencer was held at his home last Thursday afternoon, Rev. H D. Baker conducting the service. Three nieces of Mrs. Spencer from Springfield sang three selections. The bearers were Edgar Trask, Olin Chaffee, M. L. Dartt and George Phillips. Burial was in Dudley, Mass. Among out-of-town relatives attending was a granddaughter, Miss Helen Spencer, from New York.

A social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society was held Friday evening. The committee in charge was Mrs. Albert Hibbard, Mrs. John Child, Mrs. Mary Williams, Miss Bertha Dodge. A cafeteria supper was provided. There were amusements for children. Outdoor sports included pony rides.

Mr. and Mrs. William Smith have returned from their wedding trip and are occupying the tenement in the double house owned by the Stillwater Worsted Co

HAY IS PROFITABLE CROP IN TOBACCO BELT'S HEART

WINSTON SALEM, N. C. — (AP) — Charles Goslin lives in the center of the bright-leaf tobacco belt of North Carolina, but he does not depend upon the "weed" for his cash crop.

He raises hay instead of tobacco. For six years he has been planting clover and soy beans, followed in the spring with a mixture of timothy, redtop and alsike. This year, according to County Agent R. C. Poux, Goslin harvested 25 tons of hay from 13 acres.

The hay was sold at the farm for $30 a ton, a return of almost $80 per acre. Goslin will still get another clipping of lespedeza and carpet grass.

GETTING SAFETY RESULTS

While there are times when it may seem as if the efforts to increase safety and prevent accidents fell far short of the desired results, there are occasional reports which indicate the contrary. Such are furnished at the safety congress which is now in session at Pittsburgh.

It is impossible to overlook the fact that the chairman of the grade crossing committee of the National Safety council reports that the 2,485 deaths at grade crossings in 1929 was a de- [illegible] of 3.2 per cent from the 1928 [illegible] while during the first six [illegible] of this year there was a de- [illegible] of 2/8 highway crossing accidents, with 158 less fatalities and 356 less injured.

That showing may be no more than ought to be expected in view of the danger and the warnings that are provided, but the significant point is that it shows a decrease where the tendency has been in the other direction. It indicates that the users of highways are giving more thought [to] their responsibility and showing [mo]re respect for their lives.

[B]ut it is not solely among the auto [dri]vers that increased recognition of [sa]fety efforts are noted. At the same [co]ngress, attention was directed to [th]e fine results that are being obtained from the education of school [ch]ildren as to the perils of traffic and [th]e ways to be careful. So effective has this been that, while there has been an increase of 36 per cent in traffic accidents among adults and 15 per cent among children under school age, there has been a decrease of 24 per cent among children of school age.

This showing among school children is attributed to the training in the schools to prevent traffic and street accidents, a training which has to do with conduct on the street and in street crossing. So effective has this been that Dr. Stack, superintendent of child safety in the New York school system, claims the children "frequently display more intelligence in coping with dangerous situations [tha]n do their parents."

[T]hese reports certainly indicate re[sults] in the right direction. Striving [for] increased safety is an endless [tas]k, but it is one in which there [shou]ld be a general participation. It [is a] matter in which all, rather than [a fe]w, are vitally interested.

THE OIL LANDS

[In] view of the statement which has [bee]n made by R. S. Kelley, chief in [the] field division of the general land [offi]ce at Denver, that oil companies are obtaining shale land to which they are not entitled, and the reply to the same by Secretary Wilbur of the department of the interior, it is quite evident that all the facts in the case will be brought to light.

Secretary Wilbur has called upon the department of justice to make a complete investigation and the chairman of the public lands committee of congress has asked for the presentation of all the facts by Mr. Kelley. This should mean that there will be an unveiling of any conditions which may have prompted the charges by the division chief. It should disclose just what his claims are based upon and why they exist. Secretary Wilbur clearly indicates that there is nothing to clear up in connection with the disposition of shale lands, for there have been no leases and no giving of titles except such as have been carried out in compliance with the rulings of the United States supreme court. Court orders have somewhat interfered with the programme formulated by the department against leasing the oil reserves, but conservation policies of the department have been adhered to as far as possible under such conditions.

In refusing to accept the resignation of Mr. Kelley, Secretary Wilbur took the proper course. He is demanding the facts and it is proper that they should be had. There is no disposition to have them hidden. If there are wrong conditions it is time to know it. If there are not it is time to learn what prompted the charges, and steps have been taken to find out.

EMPHATIC DENIAL

Not so many days ago the campaign in Illinois was enlivened by a question from Mrs. McCormick, candidate for United States senator, asking "What is he going to do about it?" or words to that effect. The question followed the announcement that she had hired sleuths to keep tabs on the congressional committee engaged in conducting the inquiry concerning campaign expenditures.

Since then there has been an exchange of statements between the candidate and the committee, or the committee's chairman. Mrs. McCormick has continued to make charges against the committee and its agents with the result that four members of the committee have signed a statement in which they have declared that they have not at any time spied on her, have not tapped her telephone wires, have not read her correspondence, have not rifled her files and have not had themselves or through their agents any knowledge of any such acts. Having set forth that definite statement, and indicating that they had grown tired of having incorrect charges made against them, the committee gives warning that any further publicity concerning such baseless charges will result in recourse to prosecution under the libel law.

Just what effect this will have upon Mrs. McCormick's campaign efforts remains to be seen. It is a denial by the committee that seems to leave no loophole for escape. That being so, it calls for the presentation of facts to justify such claims as Mrs. McCormick has been making. It has gotten to the point where mere assertion hardly covers the situation. Just why the committee hasn't been more definite in its denials in the past is not disclosed. Possibly it was engaged in making sure that there was no question about what their agents had been doing. If that was the case, it has apparently cleared up any possibility of doubt and will stand such attacks no longer.

The committee has made no statement to that effect, but the setting forth of its complete denial and its declared intentions may be interpreted as one answer, at least, to the question Mrs. McCormick was asking a short time ago, or its reaction to the present phase of the situation in Illinois.

CHEERING THE ENEMY

How ready some individuals and organizations are to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery is amply indicated by the action of Eben S. Draper in a right-about face about supporting the successful candidate in the republican primary in Massachusetts and the representatives of dry organizations in New York state in announcing a third party and their intention "to beat the republican leaders so badly that they never again will dare to nominate a wet candidate."

Mr. Draper, a wet, is disappointed because he lost and because the party platform doesn't coincide with his views in every respect.

The dry organizations in New York, or so many of their members as are backing a third party, are much disturbed because the republican convention responded to what it believed to be the sentiment of the state.

The result is that the wets in one instance and the drys in the other are determined to defeat the republican ticket and in each instance to elect a democratic ticket, the candidates of which are as wet, if not wetter, than the republicans. In other words, it is all right for the democrats to nominate wet candidates, but the republicans are not expected to act in accord with popular demands.

The situation is one which must be pleasing to the democrats. They can appreciate the indirect endorsement which such attitudes imply and they will not be averse to accepting the assistance which comes from disgruntled candidates who are bad losers or from the drys, who claim to be for prohibition enforcement but are making all possible efforts to elect those who are committed to the repeal of the 18th amendment.

In both of the instances there is an apparent case of bad losers. It is not the first time it has happened and it will not be the last. There is enough in the experience of the past, through similar cases, to cause them to see the folly of any such acts and to recognize that they are cutting off their nose to spite their face. They are working determinedly in direct opposition to what they believe and desire.

RURAL HIGHWAYS

Convinced that it is entitled to greater consideration than it has been getting, the state organization for better rural roads is determined to place a bill before the next legislature calling for the expenditure of an increased sum on country roads during the next ten years, the suggested amounts being $5,000,000 yearly.

This is a problem that has been getting less attention than it has deserved in past years. Evidently the association is disposed to put in a claim for a sufficiently large sum so that if it is necessary to accept a lesser sum it can be done with the assurance that a good start can be made on the job.

Connecticut is making rapid headway on the system of state roads, making important additions, doing much reconstruction and taking care of the upkeep out of the receipts from the gasoline tax. Much has been done in the provision of better main highways. It is not to be supposed that there can be a complete halt in such work while giving attention to the betterment of the country roads, but there is a chance for letting up on some of the main road construction and turning part of the funds toward the betterment of the rural roads.

The rural residents of Connecticut have a claim for some attention in this direction which cannot be overlooked. They have been contributing their share to the permanent highways of the state the same as the city residents have. They have the same right to use those improved roads, if they can get to them, but their difficulty lies in not having a decent highway to such thoroughfares for their own use or for the use of those who have to get to their homes. They want relief and they are entitled to it. They are asking for a larger part of the highway funds and it is only just that they should get it. There can be a different distribution of highway funds, without boosting taxation.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Once again the clocks that stand and strike in public places mean something.

The man on the corner says: It is impossible to expect everyone to be satisfied at the outcome of a world series game.

A road in Maine has sunk out of sight, but that's not the only thing that has disappeared in the past several weeks. Boston is seeking a Garret and New York a Crater.

If we can judge by the attendance and enthusiasm, the gathering of New London county republicans at Red Top was a success, prophetic of the outcome on election day in November.

SESQUICENTENNIAL OF ANDRE'S DEATH IS MARKED BY NEW LIFE OF ARNOLD

PART 1

Today marks the sesquicentennial of the execution of Maj. John Andre, British adjutant general, whom the Americans shot as a spy on Oct. 2, 1780, for the part he took in Maj-Gen. Benedict Arnold's attempt to betray the patriot cause.

The story is fully told in a new account of Arnold's career, published under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies as part of the Dictionary of American Biography. In view of the fact that the council, through constituent member bodies, is associated with the Smithsonian institute, a government organization, the account which it sponsors is more nearly an official government report than any other can be held to be.

The council's biography of Benedict Arnold in its relation to the Andre tragedy may be regarded as falling naturally into three parts, and will so be republished here. The first and second parts tell how, by his services in invading Canada and repelling the British counter invasion, Arnold became a figure of sufficient importance to make it worth while for Andre to win him over from the patriot side. These parts will be printed today and Saturday.

The third part records the dealings which Andre had with Arnold, and the result of those dealings upon both of them. This will appear next Tuesday.

Part one of the Arnold biography, as published by the American Council of Learned Societies, is as follows.

Arnold, Benedict (Jan. 14, 1741-June 14, 1801), revolutionary patriot and traitor, was born at Norwich, Conn., the son of Benedict and Hannah King (nee Waterman) Arnold. The Arnolds had for several generations been a family of education and position in New England, an ancestor of the same having been several times governor of Rhode Island in the 17th century (American Historical Association Report, 1906, vol. II, pp. 831-32).

Arnold's training was under the influence of the strictest kind of New England religious thought, against which he displayed a distinct spirit of revolt. Biographers have extolled the fine qualities of his mother, but in the light of modern psychology it seems likely that her unwise efforts at restraint may have been responsible for much in his later character.

Saw Service in His Teens

At the age of 14 he ran away from home to join the colonial troops then starting out for the French and Indian war. At the instance of his mother he was brought back, but he ran away a second time for the same purpose, joined the provincial troops, and saw service on Lakes George and Champlain. When the charm of the soldier's life had vanished, Arnold deserted and returned home, alone, through the wilderness. Only his youth saved him from the serious consequences of his act.

At the age of 21 he moved to New Haven and became a druggist and bookseller. As he grew more prosperous, he invested money in the West India trade, and traveled himself between Quebec and the West Indies, selling horses and mules to the plantations in the sugar islands.

On Feb. 22, 1767, he married Margaret Mansfield of New Haven, by whom he had three sons, Benedict (1768), Richard (1769), and Henry (1772). He was soon a person of some consequence in New Haven and became a captain in the Connecticut militia.

His personality made a lasting impression upon observers. His black hair and dark complexion were remarked by all who tried to describe him, although his eyes were light. Thick set and well proportioned, he possessed unusual physical strength and agility and was capable of great endurance.

Volunteered After Lexington

When the news of the fight at Lexington reached New Haven, Arnold called his company together and asked for volunteers to aid the patriot cause. With the approval of Gov. Trumbull the company started out and reached Cambridge on April 29, 1775.

Since the great problem was how to fight a war without either gunpowder or artillery, Arnold told the committee of safety of Massachusetts that Fort Ticonderoga, on Lake Champlain, held 80 cannons left over from the French and Indian war, and he volunteered to go and get them (Force, American Archives, 4th ser., vol. II, p. 450). The committee promptly gave him a colonel's commission, power to enlist troops, and an order to go and take Fort Ticonderoga (Ibid., p. 485).

At the same time this idea occurred to some other Connecticut people, and Arnold found himself en route to Fort Ticonderoga in company with another expedition led by Ethan Allen of Vermont. Neither was the type of man to yield precedence to the other but the importance of their joint expedition seems to have impressed them with the necessity for some compromise.

It was agreed that Allen should issue commands jointly with Arnold (J. H. Smith, Our Struggle for the Fourteenth Colony, I. 132). Together they assaulted and captured the fort on May 10, 1775, Allen reporting to the Albany committee, "Col. Arnold entered the fortress side by side with me." The controversy over who was really in command continued after the victory, which tradition has usually assigned to Allen.

Shortly Arnold's own troops, whom his subordinates had enlisted, joined him. He promptly left Allen at Fort Ticonderoga and sailed to the extreme northern end of the lake and captured the fort at St. Johns. Having destroyed that post and the boats with which British reinforcements might pursue him, he returned to the south, where he was reinforced with more troops under Col. Hinman.

There were now quarrels among Hinman, Allen, and Arnold as to the chief command, complicated by the conflicting jurisdictions and authority of four governments, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and the continental congress. Arnold had the mortification of seeing his signal services rewarded only by his being "investigated" and superseded, whereupon in July, 1775, he returned to Connecticut, decidedly disgruntled.

Victor Is Shabbily Treated

In spite of the fact that he had drawn upon his personal savings and his credit for the public service, he was so badly treated by the Massachusetts authorities, in their failure to reimburse him, that even the continental congress, with all its poverty, voted him $800. To add to his distress, his wife died on June 19, 1775, while he was absent at the lakes.

His misfortunes, however, did not prevent him from laying before congress an even more ambitious scheme for securing supplies for the continental armies. He proposed an attack on Canada. In furtherance of this he went to Cambridge, where Washington had now taken command of the armies.

In the new commander-in-chief he found a sympathetic listener and one who was already thinking of a new route for an attack on Quebec. The usual course of warlike expeditions in past campaigns had been by way of Lake George and Lake Champlain. Washington had news of a newer route by way of the Kennebec river (Maine) and the Chaudiere river, leading straight to Quebec itself (Maine Historical Society Collections, ser. I, vol. I, p. 447).

With the cooperation of Schuyler, who was now in command at Ticonderoga, two expeditions to Canada were planned. One under Schuyler was to follow the old route of the lakes and capture Montreal, while the other under Arnold was to take the new route through the lakes, forests and rivers of Maine, and secure Quebec.

Sets Out for Canada

On Sept. 19 Arnold's command left Newburyport, Mass., for Maine. Going up the Kennebec they found waiting the 200 bateaux which had been ordered ahead of time. The journey through the Maine woods is a classic in American military history; for perserverance under the utmost hardships, it is almost unparalleled. About a fourth of the army turned back for which their leader, Enos, was promptly court-martialed on his return to Cambridge.

Arnold struggled on through snow storms and ice water, and the vanguard of his party reached the St. Lawrence opposite Quebec on Nov. 8. He found the garrison weak, but he was even weaker.

It would have been madness to attempt an assault with his force decimated by disease and starvation. He therefore withdrew his troops 20 miles up the river and waited.

Meantime, Montgomery, who on Schuyler's illness had taken the command, had followed the lake route and captured Montreal. He joined Arnold on Dec. 2. Quebec had a garrison of about 1200 men by this time, while the combined forces of Arnold and Montgomery were less than 1000.

In a blinding snow storm, they made the assault on the night of Dec. 31, 1775. Despite the most heroic conduct the attack failed utterly, Montgomery being killed and Arnold wounded.

While still badly injured, Arnold took command of the shattered remnants of the army and placed them so as to blockade Quebec on the west side, while the ice blocked it on the east until spring came. On Jan. 10, 1776, congress made him a brigadier-general.

British, Re-enforced, Compel Retreat

(Journals of the Continental Congress, L. C. ed. IV, 47).

As spring came the British obtained reenforcements by sea, and it was apparent that Gen. Carleton and the British commander would soon be in a position to drive the Americans from Canada. In June Arnold sent his army back to Crown Point from Montreal, and followed in the last boat, just as the advance guard of the British army came in sight.

At Crown Point he immediately set to work to prepare for the contest for the control of the lakes which was bound to come. Carleton left Quebec in pursuit of Arnold and mobilized his forces at St. Johns. Schuyler was now in command of the northern department, but Arnold was entrusted with building a fleet to resist Carleton's armament.

The British plan of campaign for 1776 was that Howe should capture New York while the army under Carleton or Burgoyne were to move south from Canada and join Howe, thus cutting the New England states from the middle colonies. This plan might well have been fatal to the American cause, and had far better chances of success in 1776 than in the following summer.

Only one thing prevented its execution, and that was the work of Benedict Arnold. His extraordinary foresight and industry in building a fleet made it necessary for Carleton to delay and prepare a more ambitious expedition than he had originally planned, including the knocking down of war vessels in the St. Lawrence and transporting them in parts overland to be reerected on Lake Champlain.

Checks Enemy on Lake Champlain.

At St. Johns Carleton gathered a force of 12,000. Arnold met him with a fleet which was a curious assortment of schooners, galleys and gondolas, which were open boats mounting but single gun each. The two fleets met on Oct. 11, 1776, on Lake Champlain. Arnold had drawn his force up behind Valcour Island in such fashion that the British got between him and Fort Ticonderoga. The first day's contest was exceedingly hard fought and was a drawn battle when evening fell.

Arnold realized he must get away, for another such fight would probably ruin him. With remarkable daring and skill he sailed the remains of his fleet straight through the British lines at night and was out of sight when Carleton realized what had happened.

The British pursued, and on Oct. 13 another desperate battle occurred just below Crown Point. Arnold's fleet was worsted, but he managed to run his own schooner and five gondolas ashore and burn them to prevent their falling into the hands of the British. He then withdrew his force overland to Crown Point and thence to Ticonderoga.

The effect of Arnold's fierce resistance completely upset Carleton's calculations, so that the British commander realized it was impossible to go on and attack, not to say capture, Fort Ticonderoga that summer. His force retreated to Canada. The principal naval authority has said: "The little American navy on Champlain was wiped out; but never had any force, big or small, lived to better purpose or died more gloriously, for it had saved the lake for that year" (A. T. Mahan, p. 25).

(Part two of Arnold's life story, ending with the execution of Maj. Andre, will appear next Saturday.)

YOUR HEALTH

Helping The College Student Mentally

By J. Howard Beard, M. D., Urbana.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The means to be employed in promoting mental health in college students consist of the teaching of hygiene, provision of an adequate environment, a sustained effort to insure effective instruction, and the opportunity for consultation with a psychiatrist.

The better the teaching, the more wholesome the environment and the greater their practical and constructive value, the fewer the students who will need psychiatry to rescue them from the danger of psychoneurosis or to treat them for mental abnormality.

Loss of sleep, malnutrition, overwork, improper methods of study, insufficient exercise, insanitary surroundings, and lack of recreation predispose to mental disturbances. Toxaemia from infectious diseases, too early resumption of studies in convalescence, and dysfunction of endocrine glands are responsible for certain cases of depression and mental abnormality. The knowledge and practice of hygiene will not only do much to prevent mental disorders, but will make it possible for the individual to escape the neurasthenia and psychasthenia commonly called by college men "nervous breakdown."

The monotony of daily routine, disappointments, fears and conflicts are not removed by telling the student not to worry but they are amendable to recreation, encouragement and actual help from the proper individual and organization. Once he makes his difficulties known they are not only cut in two but they rarely escape solution. For the "shut in" personality, a friend "redoubleth joys, and cutteth griefs in half." Sleep and rest often give a new outlook and time taken to think things through frequently proves a balm to a drooping spirit.

Mental hygiene in college students is a cooperative enterprise of the faculty, administrative officers, director of extra-curricular activities, religious organizations, lodging house keepers and students. With these agencies working together, the student who has survived the eliminative action of twelve years education in the public schools will rarely fail in college because of mental conflicts, complexes or maladjustment.

It is not practical, certainly not desirable, that adjustment should be continuous nor standardized. The mind like the teeth requires roughage to be vigorous. The attempt at production of "die cut" individuals ignores the Aristotelian observation, "No excellent soul is exempt from a mixture of madness." Thought, feeling and behaviour must have latitude to escape standard patterns which would rob many delightful personalities of the splendor and charm of the various hues of their many sides.

Adjustment is dynamic, not static; a process, not a state. Development is a series of compromises between the needs and desires of an individual and the demands of his environment. Youth must be surrounded by encouragement. The college and the church must recognize and supply its needs for an interpretation of life, science, social theory, ethics, philosophy and religion. It must be given such an understanding of sex and human behavior as will enable it to face its own inferiorities without developing personal or social handicaps. It must have safe freedom to develop, to discuss, to think and to make mistakes.

For only from such liberty, hope and kindly help will it find the truth and the way which leads to the abundant life.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Whatever may happen in November to Ruth Hanna McCormick's senatorial hopes, she certainly ought to have had a lot of fun badgering young Gerald Nye and his campaign costs investigating committee. That nickname, "Ruthless Ruth," which you sometimes hear, seems to have some point to it.

And should Mrs. McCormick win out in November, adding another to the imposing string of political defeats the Hon. Jim Ham Lewis already has collected she still will be far from over the last hurdle.

She will have to face a very hard-boiled attitude in the senate on large expenditures by those seeking to join that particular club. There is no doubt about that.

Strong Comeback

Yet assuming that Mrs. McCormick did make the grade as the first elected woman senator, reports of the private investigators she set to sniffing at the heels of Nye and his committee fellows might well have textbook value for her on "How to Stay in the Senate"—particularly reports of Committeeman Clarence Dill of Washington state.

For Dill's career in national politics is remarkable. He is a comebacker who has made good with a vengeance.

Having slipped into the house in the wake of the democratic flood of 1912, he sat two terms only to get washed out again in 1918 when the series of republican tidal waves, still unchecked in 1928 started.

Dill voted against the war resolution in 1917. That could not have caused his defeat in 1918, however, for he had taken care to inform himself about opinion in his district. He always has done that on important votes both in house and senate.

And quite a lot more of the 50 house members who voted against the war resolution survived. Look at Fred Britten of Illinois. He's still coming back, without opposition this year.

Defeat Was Boon

Dill's habit of doing chores in Washington for the home folks, regardless of their party affiliations, made him mighty strong. Probably only the beginning of the republican surge of 1918 could have unseated him. But it did, and things must have been rather unhappy for him for a few years.

Yet actually his defeat was a boon to him. When Washington's one-time Roosevelt progressives decided to take vengeance on Senator Miles Poindexter in 1922 for his flat return to the ranks of standpat republicanism, there is no doubt that they recalled Dill's useful chores service as a house member.

There is no other explanation for his being drafted to beat Poindexter, and six years later he repeated by a solid margin when Washington state was going Hoover awhooping.

Senatorial aspirants would do well to study the methods of Dill.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Skyscrapers Pierce Oriental And Spanish Skies

Twenty-one stories in Shanghai, 15 stories in Madrid, 16 stories for Athens, 29 stories for Toronto. Building news from the world's great cities reveals that the American skyscraper is spreading.

New heights in office structures in New York set the pace for new highs in London, Montreal, Berlin, Rio de Janeiro, and Singapore.

"In cities where the height of buildings is restricted by ordinance the battle rages at the cornice line with one body of citizens striving to keep the municipal lid on while another group labors to make the sky the limit," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"All Australia took sides in the recent Melbourne controversy over a petition to build a 40-story building. Melbourne, like Washington, has, thus far, kept within the 13-story limit. Toronto, therefore, can claim that its new 20-story hotel is the tallest building in the British Empire.

"Madrid's new highest, a telephone building with a Spanish tower, overtops the former record holder of the Spanish capital, which was a structure built and occupied by an American automobile company.

"New York, although it sees skyscraper architecture carried to new triumphs yearly, is neither the mother of skyscrapers nor was it, for 40 years, the possessor of the world's tallest structure. The Chrysler building's lead-pencil tower, recently pushed into place, surpasses, although only by 46 feet, the 984-foot peak of the Eiffel tower which was erected in Paris in 1889.

"Even today Manhattan does not have the world's largest building, although one under construction may set that record. The new Furniture Mart in Chicago claims the world's largest area under one roof. Its total rentable floor space of 1,514,000 square feet is equivalent to a farm of 35 acres.

"Since history began man has striven to express his chief interest in life with the largest possible structure he could build. When religion was uppermost in his mind he built the Tower of Babel, in what now is Iraq, Sancta Sophia in Constantinople, the petal-roofed pagodas of China, the pointed stupas of Burma, St. Peter's in Rome, St. Paul's in London, and 512 feet of astonishing beauty in the Cathedral of Cologne. When immortality swayed his thoughts he built the Great Pyramid at Giza. When military strength became the essential the walls and towers of Carcassonne and the Tower of London rose and when the preservation of the family was the prime necessity men built their own castles with high watch towers that still survive in San Gimignano and other hill towns of Italy.

"Overtopping churches, overtopping state capitol domes, overtopping the Washington monument, modern office buildings and hotels have soared skyward in rapid succession. Today there are nearly 400 buildings more than 20 stories high in the United States. Half of these stand in New York city.

"The first skyscraper, if that term is limited to a building with a steel frame veneered with stone, brick or other material, was the Home Insurance building constructed in Chicago in 1883. Modern skyscrapers could not have been built without the development of structural steel and they could not be used without elevators, the first of which was invented in New York about 1850. Newest, high-speed elevators travel about 900 feet per minute, or about 10 miles an hour."

The bulletin lists some of history's tallest structures:

	Height in feet	Equivalent Stories (13 feet to a story)
Tower of Babel	(unknown)
Great Pyramid, Giza	451	34
Tungchow Pagoda	about 200	13
Cathedral of St. Peter, Rome	333	25
Tallest Cairo Minaret	280	21
Campanile, Cremona	396	31
Cathedral of Cologne	512	40
Cathedral of St. Paul, London	365	28
Washington Monument	555½	42
Eiffel Tower Paris	984	75
Woolworth Bldg.	792	58
Chrysler Bldg.	1030	77
Empire State Building	about 1100	**

Ragweed

Mr. Editor: In a recent issue you mentioned goldenrod, which is not to be blamed for the prevalence of hayfever, and asked the readers to point out the plant that causes the malady. It is the ragweed that causes 99 per cent of hayfever. This weed has no flower—but has an abundance of pollen containers that release the pollen late in August and through the whole month of September. It is a weed that should not be tolerated anywhere just for that reason, and it also gives a place a neglected appearance.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Wiremold Company, Hartford.

In far-off Japan the dainty bamboo houses and other doll-like structures—with which most of us are mainly familiar through pictures on Japanese fans and prints—are being electrified. This electrification has been made possible largely through the use of a surface wiring system called "Wiremold" manufactured in Hartford, by The Wiremold company.

The Wiremold company, which is carrying the names "Hartford" and "Connecticut" on its products to the far ends of the earth and also into every city, town and hamlet in America, was originally a Pennsylvania corporation which in 1919 moved to this city.

The main offices of the company, together with one of its factory units, were recently moved into their new plant in the Elmwood district. Another unit is located on Woodbine street, Hartford. The plan is to put up other units at Elmwood and have all departments at one location. There is a most complete and efficient installation of Wiremold in their own new factory which is attracting the attention of manufacturers who are interested in the best lighting equipment.

The Wiremold company has established a place for itself in the electrical industry and in the structural trades as headquarters for surface wiring.

"Surface wiring" as the phrase implies means that wires for electric lighting and other electrical service are installed on the surface of wall or ceiling, instead of being buried in or behind the plaster or woodwork, or stone, brick, concrete, or other structural material. Wiremold is a neat metal tubing or conduit, finished in a neutral color tone, which fits snugly and inconspicuously against wall or ceiling. Wiremold is the accepted standard for surface wiring throughout the United States, because its use makes it possible to locate or relocate electric outlets and to revise obsolete lighting layouts in stores, offices and factories without digging into walls or ceilings or marring their surfaces.

The Wiremold company also manufactures Wirecuct, commonly known as loom in the electrical trade, and Wireflex, non-metallic sheathed cable.

D. Hayes Murphy, president and treasurer of The Wiremold company, is the active operating head, and has built up about him a strong executive family.

Brownell & Company, Moodus.

In 1825, J. M. and E. P. Brownell conducted a wool carding and cloth dressing establishment on the site of the present mill of Brownell & Co. This clothiery was afterward utilized for the manufacture of satinet, and for various other purposes. In 1841, E. P. Brownell purchased his brother's interest, and entered into a partnership with Stanton S. Card and Elijah Spencer. They enlarged the mill to its present capacity, and commenced the manufacture of seine twine.

Several changes in the firm were made, and in 1852 it was dissolved, and a new one formed under the same name, consisting of E. P. Brownell, Richard S. Pratt, and Charles E. Brownell, a son of the senior partner. In 1872, Charles E. Brownell purchased the interest of Mr. Pratt, and under the old firm name of Brownell & Co. he and his father conducted a prosperous business. In 1875, Edward P. Brownell, the senior partner, died; and Charles E. Brownell conducted the business until his death in 1906, when his daughter, Blanche I. Brownell took charge of the business for a period of about a year. Her brother, Crary Brownell and her husband, Harry I. Cross took over the management of the business in 1908 and conducted it as a partnership until January 1, 1929. At this time the business was incorporated with Crary Brownell, president, Harry I. Cross, secretary and treasurer.

The products of the company are seine twine, maitre cord, etc., which have been sold under the "Brownis" and "Condor" brands in this country and abroad for many years.

SPEECH UNDERSTOOD WHEN 25 PER CENT INARTICULATE

LOS ANGELES —(AP)— Even when he fails to hear correctly 25 per cent of the sounds in speech a normal person understands the conversation. Experiments showing this are reported to the Acoustical society of America by Vern O. Knudsen of the University of California.

"Actual tests," he says, "in a quiet open space have indicated that with average speakers and listeners the articulation will be about 96 per cent. A rating of 100 per cent, that is, perfect articulation, can never be attained.

"A few of the consonantal sounds are sometimes mistaken even under ideal hearing conditions. We are ordinarily unaware of this when we listen to speech, because the connotation facilitates correct interpretations of those words not heard distinctly. Even when speech articulation is as low as 75 per cent the hearing will be regarded as acceptable."

The experiments indicated that speakers should give special attention to the sounds ng, d, v, f and th.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Philip Dugas

The death of Caroline L. Dupont, 36, wife of Philip Dugas of No. 2 South A street, Taftville, occurred at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday morning at the W. W. Backus hospital, after a week's illness. She was born in Canada, July 27, 1894, the daughter of Mrs. Leonard Dupont and the late Mr. Dupont, and as a young woman she came to Taftville with her parents, following her graduation from a high school in Canada. At Sacred Heart church, Taftville, Aug. 22, 1922, she was united in marriage with Philip Dugas, who survives her with her mother, who lives in Taftville; four brothers, Telesphore, Albert, August and Charles, and two sisters, Mrs. Ernest Bolduc and Mrs. Francis Beique, all of Taftville. Mrs. Dugas was affiliated with the Ladies of St. Ann and Third Order of St. Francis of Sacred Heart church, Taftville, of which she is a member. She had been a resident of the village for the past 20 years and was well liked by all who held her acquaintance.

Daniel J. Clifford

As the result of a paralytic stroke suffered three weeks ago, Daniel J. Clifford, formerly of this city, died Wednesday at his home on East Eaton street, Bridgeport. He was president of the American Specialty Co., and was 53 years of age.

Mr. Clifford was born in this city but for a number of years had been one of the outstanding manufacturers in Bridgeport. He took an active interest in civic affairs in Bridgeport, was long a member of the city board of apportionment in Bridgeport and was a past exalted ruler of the Elks.

Mr. Clifford was one of the first producers of radio sets in the country, and was widely known in manufacturing circles. Surviving him are his widow, four brothers and four sisters.

Mrs. Paul Brumme

Following a two weeks' illness Mrs. Bertha E. Bartch Brumme of 75 Oneco street, widow of Paul Brumme, died in this city early Tuesday morning. She was born in Germany, Sept. 5, 1865, and was educated there. She came to the United States when a young woman and in Worcester, Mass., in 1898 was united in marriage with Paul Brumme. Mrs. Brumme was a member of the First Evangelical Lutheran church.

Surviving are a son, Paul Brumme, a daughter, Mrs. Whitney Vergason, both of this city; four grand children, Ruth, Ethel, Daniel and Paul Vergason in Norwich and several nieces and nephews in Germany. Mrs. Brumme was a loving mother, a kind neighbor, and was deeply interested in the welfare of her family. The sympathy of her numerous friends and acquaintances is extended those left to mourn her loss.

FUNERALS.

Mrs. Angelina Desmarais.

With many relatives and friends present the funeral of Mrs. Angelina Desmarais was held Wednesday morning at 8.30 o'clock at her home, No. 161 Talbot street, Moosup, and at 9 o'clock there was a solemn high mass at All Hallow's church. Rev. Philip L. Massicot, was the celebrant, the deacon was Rev. John H. Quinn and the sub-deacon was Rev. Henri Chagnon. The children's choir sang.

The interment was in St. Joseph's cemetery, Plainfield, Rev. John Landry conducting the committal service. The bearers were Patrick Durocher, Alfred Champeigne, Edmund Marchesseault, Wilfred Desjordys, Leo Dessaulmer, and George Despathy. Members of the St. Anne society were honorary bearers and there was a wealth of beautiful floral tributes. Mourners were present from Canada, Holyoke, Crompton, R. I., and Plainfield. Undertakers Dougherty Bros., of Moosup, were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Miss Julia H. Hoffman.

The funeral of Miss Julia H. Hoffman, formerly of this city, who died at Washington, D. C., was held Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at the home of her brother, John H. Hoffman, No. 16 Winchester street. Rev. Thomas Richey, rector of Christ Episcopal church, conducted the service, and the burial was in Yantic cemetery. Rev. Mr. Richey had charge of the committal service. The bearers were George Zimmerman, Charles E. Ellis, Charles and Edward Carpenter, Dwight L. Underwood, and Walter E. Gilbert. There were many relatives and friends present and there were a number of floral forms. The Henry Allen & Son Co., had charge of the funeral arrangements.

CHILD STUDY GROUP OPENS CITY CLUB SEASON

The opening meeting of the Woman's City club was held at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when a group of women interested in child study gathered in their club room at the Wauregan hotel to listen to an informal talk by Miss Nancy Tomlinson on Recreational Problems, and to discuss methods of dealing with difficulties which may arise in guiding the lives of children.

Preliminary to the regular subject, Mrs. Hawk spoke of the current events class which will open on Monday, October 20, and continue until April under the leadership of Prof. Henry Lawrence.

The speaker of the afternoon, Miss Tomlinson, having been introduced by Mrs. Willis P. Austin, then took the chair and called attention to the word "recreation" which really means "re-creation," "the act of creating anew," and is applicable to both adults and children. To many people recreation simply means entertainment and what is recreation for one may prove the opposite for another. Recreation must be adapted to the natural desires and needs of a person.

Recreation should not be planned and carried out according to a formal schedule, but will vary greatly, outdoor exercise being the necessity for some, detective stories furnishing rest and renewed vigor for others, while a third class may recuperate in bridge, or just leisure.

Consider the needs of the child in providing recreation, and remember that whatever may be provided it is not recreation without enjoyment. Medical authorities are now beginning to recognize this theory. Place yourself in the position of a child, and find out what that child enjoys. Set recreation programmes are for the group and not for the individual. A danger to be avoided in the matter of recreation consists in doing too much for the child. Too many toys are provided, too many festivities are planned. Let the child use his imagination, teach him to enjoy commonplace things, and to carry out his own original ideas.

Several questions and some discussion followed this resume, and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to Miss Tomlinson.

SEEKING HEAVY DAMAGES IN AUTOMOBILE SUITS

Suits in the superior court for damages sustained through automobiles have been filed with Clerk John H. Walker as follows:

Paul Calick of Brooklyn, N. Y., is made defendant in several suits brought by members of the family of Frederick Schwab of New London, whose sedan was in collision with Calick's machine on Sept. 15, 1930, in Old Lyme on the Boston Post road. Frederick Schwab sues for $550, his daughter, Hazel Schwab, for $2,000, and Annie L. Schwab for $10,000. David A. Merson of Brooklyn sues Calick for $2,000.

William P. Durgin, 69, a New London real estate agent, sues Florence R. and Harriet Topham of Waterford for $10,000 for injuries he claims he received when struck by the Topham machine on July 23, 1930, after alighting from a trolley car on Williams street in New London.

Another $10,000 damage suit is that of Katherine L. Nordenhold of New London against Jeremiah J. Donovan of that city. The plaintiff alleges she was struck by Donovan's machine in New London on March 26, 1930.

REMAIN IN HOSPITAL WITH AUTO CRASH INJURIES

Dr. George E. Bitgood, veterinarian, of 244 Willetts avenue, New London, and his housekeeper, Mrs. Dorothy K. Parkhurst, were still confined in St. Francis' hospital, Hartford, Wednesday, as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident at Hartford Monday. Dr Bitgood was reported to be greatly improved. Mrs. Parkhurst's condition was said to be unchanged.

The doctor suffered a severe cut of the face near the eye and Mrs. Parkhurst suffered a fractured arm and lacerations. Dr. Bitgood and Mrs. Parkhurst were said to have been starting on a vacation trip.

HAGBERG AND BABCOCK WITHDRAW FROM RACE

Announcement Wednesday of the withdrawal of Charles A. Hagberg and Attorney Telley E. Babcock as candidates for nomination as representatives to the state legislature from Norwich indicates that the expected contest over the nominations will not materialize at the republican town caucus next week. Attorney Josiah Greenstein of No. 30 Warren street, and Fred Knowles of No. 48 Norwich avenue, Taftville, have been endorsed as candidates for the nominations by the republican town committee. Eben Learned, Jr., had been mentioned as a possible candidate but declined to run, it was said Wednesday.

VERDICT FOR $4,000 FOR DEATH OF BOY

A jury in the superior court at New London Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict of $4,000 in favor of Francis H. Perkins of Waterford, administrator for the estate of his son, Francis J. Perkins, 12. The boy was fatally injured last December when struck on the Jordan road in Waterford by an automobile driven by Thomas Connell of New London against whom the verdict is rendered.

It is probable that motion to set aside the verdict and for new trial will be made by Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, who is counsel for Mr. Connell.

At Republican Rally

Among those from this city attending the republican rally at Gales Ferry Wednesday afternoon were Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, Compensation Commissioner A. J. Bailey, Mrs. Frank A. Mitchell, Charles W. Cassidy, Telley E. Babcock, Harry Schwartz, Josiah Greenstein, George Gilman, Nathan Gilman, John R. Bowman, Jr., George M. Charbonneau, Arthur M. Brown, William G. Park, F. Russell Smith and Joseph C. Worth.

Put Out Bonfire.

At 10.00 o'clock Wednesday morning an oral alarm was answered by the fire department to extinguish a bonfire in the rear of No. 218 West Main street. Tenants in a house owned by David Sadinsky started a bonfire in the yard and becoming alarmed when the wind scattered the fire, requested the fire department to extinguish it. Engine No. 5 and Squad A responded.

COUNTY REPUBLICANS ENDORSE STATE TICKET AT ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY

Republican leaders from all parts of the state, backed up by a great gathering of party men from New London county, close to 600 in all, started the fall campaign Wednesday afternoon at Red Top, Harvard headquarters Gales Ferry, with an enthusiastic endorsement meeting for Ernest E. Rogers of New London, republican nominee for governor, and for all the rest of the ticket.

The gathering was held at 1 o'clock with a clambake under the auspices of the New London County Republican club, at which the chief speakers were Lieut. Governor Rogers and Former Congressman J. H. MacLafferty of California, an assistant secretary of commerce, who delivered a ringing message in which he styled the reputed democratic conversion to a protective tariff as a sham and a fraud, and declared that the democrats for 50 years had been laying cuckoo eggs in republican nests and leaving them for the republicans to hatch.

The clambake was served in a big tent, which was decorated with the American and state flags, but for an hour before the dinner call, there was an informal reception for the notable guests in the room in the main training quarters.

Among those seated at the head table were Judge Daniel M. Cronin of New London, president of the county club, was toastmaster, were the following:

Lieutenant Governor Rogers and Mrs. Rogers, Former Congressman MacLafferty, J. Henry Roraback, Hartford, chairman of the republican state central committee, State Treasurer Samuel R. Spencer, Suffield, nominee for lieutenant governor, Federal Judge W. B. Burrows, nominee for attorney general, Secretary of State William Higgins, Coventry, Sheriff George H. Bradford, Montville, Congressman Richard P. Freeman, New London, P. LeRoy Harwood, chairman of the town committee, New London, Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, William L. Apley, and John M. Mallon, Jr., all of New London, State Athletic Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, New London, Labor Commissioner Harry McKenzie, Bethel, Col. Robert O. Eaton, collector of internal revenue, North Haven, Miss Katherine Byrne, Putnam, vice chairman of the republican state central committee, Senate Clerk J. Fred Baker, New Haven, State Police Commissioner Robert T. Hurley, Hartford, Theodore Bodenwein, former secretary of state, A. J. Bailey, this city, compensation commissioner, Mrs. F. A. Mitchell, this city, Miss Charlotte M. Holloway, New London.

Other prominent republicans present included Samuel Eddy of Canaan, speaker in the house, and Raymond A. Johnson of Manchester, floor leader in the last house of representatives.

An orchestra played while the clambake was served by James P. Hayes and there was music by the orchestra interspersed with the speaking programme.

In opening this part of the afternoon, Toastmaster Cronin stated that he had received letters of regret from Governor Trumbull, Roy Wilcox, nominee for state treasurer, Senators Bingham and Walcott, all of whom were out of the state today and unable to be here.

Roraback Predicts Victory

In introducing Mr. Roraback as the first speaker, Judge Cronin referred to him as one to whom the party owes a great debt of gratitude for his successful leadership, but which has invited criticism from the jealous and those who are fearful of his outstanding ability.

Mr. Roraback responded by saying that he was pleased to come here at the request of Lieut. Governor Rogers and he was more amused than worried by some of the things that had been said about him. We're headed for another success this year and don't you forget it, he declared.

Referring to the democratic choice of Prof. Cross of Yale as nominee for governor, Mr. Roraback said he didn't know how that party got him anyway, for there was no record in New Haven of his affiliation with republican, democrat or prohibition ranks. Such a candidate wouldn't be picked by the republican party, for there has been too much gone on in the world that he doesn't know about and won't have time to find out about before election day. The republican choice would fall upon such a man as Lieut. Governor Rogers, who had gained experience in the service of the state and for whom, with the state ticket, Mr. Roraback predicted an overwhelming victory in the coming election.

Say It With Votes

If you want a continuance of good government in Connecticut, say it with votes in November, was the advice of Miss Katherine Byrne, of Putnam, vice chairman of the state central committee, who was the next speaker. She added her tribute to Lieut. Governor Rogers, whose work as state treasurer had been part of an economic set-up in the state government which was the envy of sister states and she warned that it would be an economic crime to do anything else than continue the republican party in power.

Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, of New London, who had asked the blessing before the clambake was served, was called upon by Toastmaster Cronin to give "Clergyman's Impressions of a 100 Per Cent Old-Time Republican Rally," which the New London pastor did in his inimitable graceful and witty way.

Congressman Freeman Speaks

Congressman Richard P. Freeman, who has been 14 years in congress, was the following speaker in brief remarks in which he spoke of the wonderfully fine send-off this rally was for the candidates on the state ticket. Never before, he said, has there been a ticket of men of finer character or greater experience than is now presented to the voters of the state and he predicted they would receive the overwhelming support of the people of the state.

Greeting To Lieut. Gov. Rogers

The entire gathering rose in greeting to Lieut. Governor Rogers when he was introduced as the next speaker and the orchestra struck up "Hail to The Chief."

When the applause had subsided the republican nominee for governor went on to speak in an informing way of the fine record along financial lines which the republican party had made while in control of the state government, when it succeeded to a heritage of a debt of about $11,000,000 left by a democratic administration.

In part the lieutenant governor spoke as follows:

"When the last democratic administration went out of office in January, 1915, the debt of the state was over $11,000,000, most of which was accumulated during the four years that party was in power. When republican administration again took charge in Connecticut in 1915, they not only were faced with this indebtedness but their predecessors had made no provisions of any kind for liquidating it. Added to this was the fact that in each fiscal year under their administration they had spent more money than they collected.

"The records will show what succeeding republican administrations did to establish the solvency of the state and keep its expenditures well within its income. To liquidate the indebtedness a sinking fund was immediately established and has been added to out of current income until today there is in the fund an amount which will be more than sufficient to pay the bonded indebtedness at its maturity. Persistent and painstaking effort on the part of each republican administration since 1915 has made this impressive financial achievement possible. The achievement is even more striking when in looking over the records we find that the establishment and strict adherence to the "pay as you go" policy has resulted in a surplus each year instead of the old system of deficits. During all this time we have built one of the best modern highway systems in the union and have entered into a program of construction at state institutions and with state buildings which has run into hundreds of thousands, all of which has been paid for out of current income.

"In Connecticut we do not believe in handing our debts down to our children. Many other states do. Records of the federal department of commerce show that in the last five years where figures are available up to 1927, in the United States as a whole state indebtedness has increased about 45 per cent., while in Connecticut in the same period due to the steady accumulation in the sinking fund, the actual debt reduction during that period was almost 55 per cent.

"While many states in this country collect from 25 per cent to 50 per cent of their incomes from direct property tax, Connecticut is one of four states in the union which imposes a minimum general property tax on its people. Less than 6 per cent of Connecticut's revenues come from this source. Unlike many other states, we have no state income tax. The collection of state revenues present no burden to the public or to any particular group. We make our income sufficient to take care of every item of legitimate expense, and we find each year a reasonable balance after we pay every bill contracted by the state. Few, if any, states can point to a similar record over a comparable space of time. Our democratic friends had an opportunity to demonstrate their abilities and the comparison is such that no thinking citizen of the state would desire to go back to the democratic system. On Connecticut's financial record alone, the republican party will be overwhelmingly victorious in the next month."

California Congressman Speaks

Another enthusiastic greeting was given Congressman MacLafferty when he was introduced to speak. The orchestra greeted him with "California Here I Come."

His opening words were straight from the shoulder when he said that never in a political campaign had there been given to the republicans so many political clubs with which to hammer democratic heads.

He went on to speak of Congressman Freeman whose seniority will make him chairman of the important rivers and harbors committee and he urged that the second district return Mr. Freeman to congress with the compliment of a great big vote. The republicans of the state can perform no greater service to the national government, said Mr. MacLafferty, than by electing Mr Rogers governor by the greatest majority.

The California congressman continued his address in part as follows:

I am glad always to speak in the state of Connecticut. Although I am a Californian my ancestors came from this state. California and Connecticut are accounted a great distance apart but they are not. This latter statement is true because not only California and Connecticut but all the states in the union have everything pertaining to governmental matters in common.

I have come here today to talk with you concerning some of these things that concern the interest and welfare of our country and that therefore concerns us very vitally as individuals. These things are many in number and cannot be covered in the time at my disposal but some of them can be considered to the advantage of all of us.

Asked To Do Foolish Thing.

You are being asked by the democrats to do a very foolish thing. They admit that two years ago President Hoover was elected by the largest vote ever given to anyone for the presidency but now they are asking you, in the middle of his term, to tie his hands at his side, tie his feet together, put a gag in his mouth and then to join them in a good hearty laugh because, for the coming two years, all his efforts for the benefit of our country will be paralyzed. They are asking you to give him the captain of our ship of state, a mutinous crew in the midst of a storm that is raging, not only in this country, but in all the countries of the earth.

They are asking you to discard the leadership of the best trained man who ever held the office of president of the United States and to give the democratic party the rare joy of wrecking an administration for which the people of our country ought to thank God at this particular time of world-wide distress. In their childlike way some democrats think the American people are going to do this very thing. But the better informed members of the democratic party do not expect any such thing to happen. They know that conditions that may exist today are not blameable on any political party. They know they are world-wide and the thing they fear most is that in the midst of such conditions they might be called to undertake the government of the country.

The democrats are relying on two things to help them win the November elections. The first of these is what they call "hard times" and the second is the Hawley-Smoot tariff law enacted by the recent congress.

The democrats are preaching hard times. Many of them are devoutly hoping we will have hard times until after election. You read the papers and you know this is true. They ignore world conditions and in chorus insist that whatever is wrong is the fault of President Hoover and the republican party. They ask you, therefore, to elect a democratic congress as if you believed a republican president and a democratic congress out of all sympathy with the president could do anything but make matters worse. But the American people will do no such thing and much less will the people of Connecticut help in doing it.

False Stand on Tariff.

As to the tariff, the whole democratic stand is false and calculated to decieve. A democratic congress would take away every shred of protection the state of Connecticut has. Have you listened to any of their speeches on the radio? Have you heard them shout and roar about our wicked and iniquitous robber tariff bill? Of course you have. They have done this same think when every republican tariff bill has been enacted. They are willing that this country should be flooded with goods made in other lands where the workers receive from a third to a half the wages paid in the United States. And, think of it, they are this minute asking the working men and women of Connecticut to put them in power so that they can do this very thing.

Why, my friends, this state of yours is one vast workshop. You are utterly dependent on the protection given you by the tariff; can you think of putting the government of our country in the hands of the party that denounces the protection you have as being wicked, unjust, unfair, iniquitous and everything else that is vile. Go into the south and see the condition of the southern labor with their long hours, low wages and child labor. They know right now that you cannot compete with them. Already they have taken one-third of the textile industry from New England. And do not forget that if the democrats capture congress it means that every committee in congress of any importance will have a southern democrat for its chairman.

Democratic control of congress means southern control pure and simple and industrially the south is jealous of New England. It was New England's influence that eventually freed the slaves and "damn Yankee" is one word in the south.

Campaign Pledges Kept.

You must decide if Herbert Hoover, the greatest humanitarian that we have ever produce, is to be thwarted in his effort for all the people of our country in the middle of this term as president. His campaign pledges have been kept and he is leading us toward normal times. It is for you to say. It is your country just as it is my country. Its welfare depends on the wisdom of your votes. Remember that southern democratic orators are assailing and scoffing at your own senator from Connecticut because of his sturdy fight to protect Connecticut industries on which the welfare of your families depends.

See that Connecticut rolls up a great republican majority. That will help us now and help us in what is ahead of us.

The rally adjourned shortly before 5 o'clock with a verse of the Star Spangled Banner.

NO CRIMINAL BLAME IN MISS ROGERS' DEATH

Coroner Edward G. McKay of this city has exonerated Joseph E. Rondeau of Baltic from criminal liability in causing the death of Miss Mary E. Rogers, 67, late of this city. Miss Rogers was fatally injured September 8th when hit by a machine operated by Rondeau at the corner of Broad street and Broadway. In his finding, issued Wednesday, Coroner McKay says:

On Sept. 8th, 1930, at about 9:20 p. m., standard time, the said Joseph E. Rondeau was operating a Chevrolet sedan northerly on Broadway. He was accompanied by his brother and two friends. They had been at the theatre and were returning to Baltic.

As the said Rondeau approached the intersection of Broad street he was driving his car about 12 feet from the easterly curve of Broadway. Cars were parked on the west side of the road and a car was parked on the east side of the road about 70 feet south of the intersection. There were no cars approaching him in the immediate foreground and no cars immediately behind. Broad street was clear of moving vehicles as he approached.

When the front end of his car was in the southerly part of the intersection he saw the form of a woman dressed in dark clothes moving from the northeast corner on the crosswalk in the highway toward the west side of the road. The woman was the deceased, Miss Rogers. At that time she was about in line with his right front fender and she appeared to be hurrying to cross in front of the car. Rondeau turned his car quickly to the left and tried to pass in front of Miss Rogers. She continued to hurry and the car continued to turn towards the left.

When the car was near the northwest corner of the intersection it struck Miss Rogers and threw her to the ground. She was struck by the rear of the right side of the car near the rear side window. After reaching the west side of the road Rondeau turned his car sharply to the right and came to a stop a short distance away on the east side of the road. He returned to the scene and assisted in putting Miss Rogers in a car which came along and took her to the hospital. Miss Rogers was so seriously injured that she expired a few moments after reaching the hospital.

The question to be decided in this investigation is whether or not the death of Miss Rogers was caused by the criminal act of any other person or persons. Whatever civil liability may arise out of the events leading up to and culminating in the said death is entirely apart from this investigation.

The statute which fixes the penalty for misconduct of operators of motor vehicles causing death provides in part, that every person operating a motor vehicle upon the higways of this state who shall, in consequence of his intoxication or of any gross or wilfull misconduct or negligence cause any loss of life or the breaking of a limb shall be fined or imprisoned. In the case at hand the element of intoxication was not present. Consequently consideration is given to the presence or absence of gross or wilfull misconduct or negligence.

In arriving at a conclusion that the said death was caused by the criminal act of another it is necessary to prove that the operator of the automobile at the time and place in question was consequently of criminal negligence. This type of negligence is recklessness of conduct, gross or wanton carelessness or negligence; gross negligence imports a thoughtless disregard of consequences; wantonness in respect to human conduct is doing a thing recklessly, without regard to property or rights of others.

The conditions and circumstances of this case do not establish beyond a reasonable doubt a degree of carelessness amounting in itself to a culpable disregard of the right and safety of others. When Rondeau was approaching the intersection he was not operating his car at an excessive rate of speed under the circumstances. The manner in which the car was being operated was testified to by a disinterested witness who was walking northerly on Broadway less than 100 feet south of the intersection. This testimony tended to prove that the car was going at a moderate rate of speed in its proper lane on the highway. His automobile was in good mechanical condition; the brakes were accurately adjusted and locked the wheels in tests made shortly afterwards. There is no evidence to prove gross negligence of operation before the intersection was reached.

As Rondeau came to the intersection he had no knowledge that there was any pedestrians there, and as the corners were dark and Miss Rogers was dressed in dark clothes I cannot find that Rondeau ought to have seen her before he did. Furthermore the intersection is not a place where motor vehicles or pedestrians are constantly crossing at that time of the night.

When Rondeau entered the intersection he then saw the perilous position of Miss Rogers. He elected to try to avoid Miss Rogers by passing in front of her She continued in her course hurrying across the street and the result was that the car struck her near the west side of the street. If he had applied his brakes when he first saw her he might have stopped the car without striking her; however, this is problematical. His judgment in continuing might have been faulty but his actions then do not form a basis for concluding that he operated his car with reckless or wanton disregard for the safety of Miss Rogers.

I am satisfied and find that the death of Mary E. Rogers was not caused by the criminal act, carelessness or omission or any other person or persons.

Witnesses who testified at the coroner's hearing were Michael J. Curran and John R. Spotten of this city, Maurice W. Hanna, of Willimantic, Philip A., and Roland A. Maurice, of Occum, George and Joseph Rondeau of Baltic.

FATHER SUES SON FOR SHARE IN REAL ESTATE

In a suit brought in the superior court by Louis Strongin of this city against his son, Sydney F. Strongin of Brooklyn, N. Y., the father asks the court to order the son to convey to father certain interest in real estate at Gardner lake which the father claims.

The senior Strongin alleges that on or about Aug. 23, 1920 he agreed to furnish $1,800, or one-fifth of the $9,000 to buy 30 acres at Gardner lake from Casper K. Bailey, administrator of the estate of Alfred A. Adam. Title was taken in the name of the son, who later refused to grant the father a one-fifth interest, the father claims.

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The long range guns of the Philadelphia Athletics were much more effective today than the cannonball delivery of Robert Moses Grove as the world's champions began the defense of their baseball crown triumphantly against the challenge of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Before a record-breaking home town baseball crowd of 32,295 fans, with President Hoover and a distinguished official party among the onlookers, the Athletics trained their heavy howitzers on the fences and other distant places to beat down the stout pitching of the veteran Burleigh Grimes and whip the Cardinals by the score of 5 to 2 in the world's series opener.

Grove, southpaw ace of Connie Mack's staff, was nowhere the terror that the Cardinals and the experts had expected but the heavy hitters, led by Al Simmons, batting king of the American league, and the redoubtable Mickey Cochrane, struck severe damage and disaster to the cause of the National league pennant winners.

Grimes Allows Only Five Hits

The Athletics made only five hits off the spitball delivery of the 37-year-old Grimes, returning to the championship fray after a lapse of ten years, but every one of the five was for extra bases and every one counted for a run as the A's attack created a remarkable world's series batting record.

While the Cardinals were wasting most of the nine safe blows they collected off the southpaw shoots of Grove, the mauling Mackmen pounded their way to victory on home runs by Simmons and Cochrane, triples by George (Mule) Haas and Jimmy Foxx, plus a booming double against the centerfield stands by Jimmy Dykes.

Grimes, who pitched masterful ball otherwise and struck out six of the A's as compared to only five strikeout victims for Grove, simply could not spike the big guns.

Athletics Open Scoring

When Foxx tripled for the first hit off Grimes in the second inning, Bing Miller was ready with a sacrifice fly to bring him home. Simmons cleared the right field barrier with a homer in the fourth to tie the score, after the Cardinals had landed heavily on Grove in the second frame. When Bishop walked in the sixth, Dykes was on hand with a two-bagger to the outskirts that scored the second-sacker.

After Haas tripled to the right field limits in the seventh, the A's upset the Cardinals with a perfectly executed squeeze play, Boley's neat bunt to Grimes tallying the centerfielder. As a final flourish, Cochrane crashed the ball over the right field wall in the eighth inning.

Grove Gets Sparkling Support

Meanwhile Grove needed and obtained sensational defensive work by his mates in the task of checking the gallant Red Birds, who fought desperately right down to the finish, and threatened to score in almost every inning as they hit the southpaw star much harder than the partisans of the A's had expected them to do.

This sparkling defense of the world's champions reached its climax in the seventh inning, when the Cardinals, only one run behind at the time, were stopped by some spectacular work by the keystone pair, Joe Boley and Max Bishop.

In this frame, Grimes singled with one out and Taylor Douthit followed with a hard smash between short and third that Boley just managed to grab. He fell in doing so, but from a prone and awkward position managed to get the ball to Bishop ahead of Grimes for a force play at second base. It was a brilliant effort and possibly the turning point of the game, for Sparky Adams followed with a single that might have meant one run, tied the score and given fresh impetus to the Cardinal drive.

As it was, two were out, runners on first and second, as Bishop closed the inning by running over near second, leaping high and spearing a vicious line smash from the bat of Frank Frisch, whose fine all-around play indicated he was under no handicap from his late attack of lumbago.

Cards Take Lead

The only time the Cardinals broke through the smart defense of the A's was in the second inning. Then it took four hits and two sacrifice flies to produce a brace of runs and put St. Louis in the lead for the first and only time of the game.

In this chukker, the supposedly weak end of the Cardinal batting order began an attack on Grove after the southpaw had retired the first six men in order, striking out three. Singles by Mancuso and Gelbert, youthful stars of the Cardinals, were followed by a bunt that Grimes converted into a scratch hit, filling the bases.

Douthit's long fly to Haas sent Mancuso scampering home and Gelbert galloped across the plate on another sacrifice hoist by Sparky Adams, to Miller. Grimes held first meanwhile and advanced to second on Frisch's single but Bottomley was retired on a foul to Foxx, closing the rally.

Cards Hit Frequently

Thereafter the Cards persistently pasted the offerings of Grove but got nowhere, either because they had the misfortune to send their drives directly at the A's or because of the stellar fielding of the champions.

Grove bore down himself as the game went on but he was far from being as effective as usual. His control was good but there was not the customary deception and hop to the Grove fire balls that enabled the southpaw to score 28 victories in the American league this year.

Frisch's two-bagger was wasted in the fifth after a pass to Blades and a single by Gelbert proved unproductive in the fourth. Two more hits were wasted in the seventh, due to the aforementioned defensive work of Boley and Bishop, while Hafey's double in the eighth was so much lost motion. With victory in his grasp, Grove set down the last three Cardinals in order in the ninth, including a pinch hitter for Grimes—Puccinelli.

Cochrane Is Brilliant

Cochrane, whose backstopping was one of the high spots of the Mackian play, contributed a spectacular catch in the eighth when he raced over to the very edge of the A's dugout to grab a high foul hoist by Mancuso.

The A's ability to connect when it counted furnished the answer to the outcome of the game, which marked the 13th victory for the American league forces in the last 14 games against National league opposition in the world's series.

The Mackmen had only two men left on bases both in the sixth, when Dykes, whose double had tallied Bishop, was left stranded with Al Simmons, the latter purposely passed by Grimes. This strategy was good, for Grimes then struck out Foxx for the second straight time to close the inning.

The Cardinals, on the other hand, had eight left on bases. They were game right up to the finish but they could not connect with the punches that would put Grove on the floor, even though they had the redoubtable Robert Moses somewhat groggy at times.

Earnshaw and Rhem Today

With the first game safely stowed away, Connie Mack is expected to continue his orthodox schedule, a contrast to last year's strategy, and shoot big George Earnshaw, star righthander, against the Cardinals tomorrow in the second game. His opponent is slated to be Flint Rhem, fast righthander of the Cardinals.

The official attendance for today's opener, 32,295, was nearly 2,500 in excess of the previous series high mark for Shibe park. The gate receipts, amounting to $152,735, exceeded by more than $12,000 the previous local record set last year. The score:

WORLD'S SERIES NOTES

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Oct. 1—(AP)—President Hoover was among the few onlookers at the opening world's series battle who did not consider the weather severe enough to wear a topcoat. The chief executive, attired in brown business suit, sat calmly throughout the game with arms folded, not displaying the enthusiasm he showed during the last game of the 1929 series here.

Coats, furs and even blankets were used by the fans to keep warm during an afternoon in which chilly blasts swirled in and out of the big park, kicking up dust around the infield and perhaps contributing to the failure of Lefty Grove to warm properly up to expectations as strikeout king of the American league.

Burleigh Grimes had the heavy hitters of the A's constantly "in the hole" with fine control but he suffered disastrous lapses in throwing "extra base balls" at Cochrane, Simmons, Foxx, Haas and Dykes. This was Burleigh's first series appearance since he twirled for Brooklyn in 1920 against Cleveland. The spitballer won one and lost two in that battle. He has been with five National league clubs in the course of a checkered career.

Grimes, a hard fighter on the mound, had only one squawk to make during the game. This was in the sixth, when he kicked on a decision behind the plate by Umpire George Moriarty, old Detroit infielder. Burleigh then fanned the A's great catcher.

Bing Miller contributed to the superlative defense of the A's with a bare hand, running stop of Frisch's double down the right field foul line in the fifth. On similarly hard blows, Haas and Foxx of the A's got triples. Haas was aided, however, in going to third base by the fact that his drive caromed into the bullpen among Cardinal pitchers, who were no help whatever to Ray Blades in retrieving the ball.

Grimes had the best batting average of the day, anyway. He hit safely twice in his three times at bat, for a percentage of .667, and could have done no worse than the pinch hitter who replaced him in the ninth, Puccinelli.

Sunny Jim Bottomley, rangy first sacker of the Cardinals failed to meet expectations at bat and was one of the few completely baffled by Grove. Jim fanned and fouled out twice, failing to get the ball out of the infield on his fourth attempt.

The press box had a full quota of experts drawn from the ranks of present and former stars. Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and John McGraw were in this impressive company, in addition to the literature contributed by the members of the contending clubs.

When Connie was asked what the argument was about between Grimes and Cochrane when the latter struck out in the sixth he said:

"Oh, you know how it is in a tight ball game. Things are said that are not meant."

Simmons missed getting an automobile when he poled his homer in the fourth. The drive missed by a few feet a sign on a house outside the grounds, which promised a sport model to any ball player hitting it.

Old time fans who lament the passing of base running and smartness on the path, enjoyed the duel of wits in the first inning between the Cards' battery and Cochrane on first. Grimes and Mancuso finally outwitted the peppy A's catcher and he was nailed trying to steal.

The only "near casualty" of the day was when one of Grove's "fire balls" shot past Cochrane and struck Umpire Moriarty square on the chest protector. The "ump" took off the pad, walked in a circle, and then resumed his position. Of course the unfeeling fans laughed.

The amplifiers high above the center field wall screeched out "hail to the chief" as the president walked along the left side of the field to his seat near the A's dugout, but few heard it in the din that greeted Mr. Hoover.

FRISCH TIES RECORD FOR WORLD'S SERIES HITS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1—(AP)—Frank Frisch, St. Louis Cardinal second baseman, equalled the record for total hits in world's series play, by getting two safeties in the opening contest today. A double and a single ran Frisch's total to 42 to tie the number made by Eddie Collins in six series. This is the sixth series for Frisch. Collins now non-playing captain of the Athletics, sat on the Philadelphia bench and saw Frisch pull up level with him. As Frisch will have at least three more games in which to get a hit, he should break the record before the series is concluded.

MAC FARLANE WINS TOP PLACE IN WESTCHESTER OPEN

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 1—(AP)—Willie Mac Farlane, metropolitan open champion from Tuckahoe, N. Y. today added the Westchester open championship to his 1930 victories turning in a 72-hole score of 298 over the Fenimore Country club course.

After leading the field yesterday with a card of 148, Mac Farlane today turned in two rounds of 75 each, which was good enough to defeat Tom Creavy, also of Tuckahoe, by one stroke. The remainder of the field trailed far behind, Bobby Cruickshank, the defending champion, finishing in third place with a score of 306. Then followed Joe Turnesa with a 307 and Johnny Farrell with a card of 308.

CARDS CONFIDENT THAT THEY CAN BEAT ATHLETICS; MACK IS PLEASED

By EDWARD J. NEIL

Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1—(AP)—It seemed almost as though the St. Louis Cardinals must have really won that world series ball game today—the way they slammed down the concrete runway into their dressing room when it was all over, mouthing healthy expressions of disgust, breathing defiance, confidently predicting for the morrow.

There was nothing sullen and beaten about the Red Bird flock. Old "Ironheart" Burleigh Grimes trotted along in the van, a big grin on his face, his teeth clamping on a wad of gum. Behind him pounded grizzled Gabby Street, his manager, swinging his arms, arguing, eager, sorry it was over for the day. And the Cardinals, with the natty scarlet ornithological embroidery across their chests, chattering like a flock of black birds in the spring.

"Listen" said Street, "if thats' the best they've got we'll beat them. We'll beat Grove the next time. Five hits, five runs. Why man you've got to be the luckiest team in the world to win like that.

"What breaks they got. Look at that ball Douthit hit and Boley got in the seventh to catch Grimes at second and bust up a rally. Look at the smash Frisch hit and Bishop got. Say . ."

Gabby almost lost his voice in the excitement. His gang raced into the dressing room, patting Grimes on the shoulder, telling him what a fine game he pitched, what tough luck he had. The 37 year old veteran, the wanderer of the baseball wastelands, just shrugged and offered no alibis. He said Simmons and Cochrane got their homers off low curves.

"We'll not only beat Grove the next time but we will show them a real left hander before we get through. Bill Hallanan is a better southpaw than Grove. He's faster and he has more stuff. Grimes will be back at them and he'll beat them. I tell you we'll win this series."

Mack Is Satisfied

Up in Connie Mack's famous tower room with its flat topped business desk, swivel chair and divan upholstered in red leather, the old master, with one victory notched toward the Athletic's second straight world championship, leaned back contentedly and discussed the proceedings.

Like all the other members of his ball club, the tall, slender 67 year old gentleman seems to be taking things more easily than last year when the victory drought of 15 years first was broken. The tenseness and depth of feeling of a year ago was missing. He is riding a winner today rather than fighting to establish one.

Like a successful business man discussing a satisfying deal the kindly old man settled back behind his desk, touched his finger tips together before him, and discussed the issues contentedly.

"It was a great thing to win," he said, "and of course I am glad. St. Louis has a splendid team, a grand team. I think it will be a fine series between two clean playing ball clubs.

"Grove was not worried at any time. You cannot worry Grove. He was good but not as good as I have seen him. Make no mistake he was good. He put them where he wanted them and when he wanted them. Only two or three balls really got away from him during the game.

"In my opinion Boley's stop and throw on Douthit in the seventh was the turning point of the game. After that it seemed all over. It was one of the greatest fielding plays I have ever seen in an important series. Bishop's catch of Frisch's line drive also was important and Cochrane made a magnificent catch of Mancuso's foul in the eighth.

"St. Louis not only has a good team but a smart one. This series will be a corker, long and hard fought. Grimes pitched splendid ball for the Cards. It was a hard game for him to lose."

While Gabby Street announced immediately that Flint Rhem would pitch for the Cardinals tomorrow, Connie refused to disclose his selection.

"I'd hate to tell you and then change my mind overnight" he said. "Right now I have only an idea who will pitch. Maybe I'm superstitious about announcing it beforehand. I started keeping it to myself last year and it was successful. Perhaps it will be again."

At any rate, Connie Mack has one superstition and it happens to be the president of the United States. Connie considers Herbert Hoover his own particular good luck charm.

President Hoover has seen the Athletics in two world series games and they won both. He saw the club open the season with a victory over Washington last spring. Connie was on hand to greet the presidential party today.

"I'm glad to see you here," he told President Hoover, "because we always win with you."

McCARTHY ALMOST CERTAIN TO GET BERTH WITH AMERICAN LEAGUE CLUB

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1—(AP)—Joe McCarthy, recently relieved as manager of the Chicago Cubs after five years service, seems certain to shift his allegiance to an American league club, possibly the Boston Red Sox but probably the New York Yankees.

Tonight McCarthy and Robert Quinn, president of the Boston American league club, were closeted for several hours in a hotel room. It was certain that they were not discussing the first world's series game played this afternoon.

It was known that as early as last July President Quinn told McCarthy, then the full fledged manager of the Cubs that when, and if, he was "through" in Chicago, a conference would be welcome. McCarthy promised Quinn that in such an eventuality he would meet him for a possible discussion of terms. That conference was held tonight, with no announcement following it.

President Quinn said before the conversation with McCarthy that when he signed a manager, the news would be made public in Boston. A master of publicity, Quinn does not compete with world's series games in giving out his news. The former manager of the Cubs is one of the silent McCarthy's when his own affairs are concerned.

The New York angle was expected to develop later. It was understood that overtures have been made by the Ruppert organization and that if McCarthy refuses Quinn's offer, they will be pursued to the point of signing the genial Joe to a contract at least two years in length.

Stories were published today that McCarthy actually had signed a two-year contract with the Yankees, that he would be accompanied to New York by Jimmy Burke, his first lieutenant in Chicago, and that Arthur Fletcher, now a New York coach, would transfer his activities to the Cubs.

They were not confirmed, however and shortly afterward, McCarthy met Quinn in an extended conference, indicating the Red Sox had first call. This was the understanding of well-informed baseball men.

Enthusiastic Boston supporters insisted the Red Sox president would prove a worthy rival to the Yankees management in the bidding for the services of the manager of the National league champions of last year. However, to those who knew the Ruppert resources and were familiar with some of the sums the Yankees have paid for playing talent, this suggestion seemed unlikely.

Should he go to New York, McCarthy would succeed Bob Shawkey, who took over the management of the Yankees this year, following the death of Miller Huggins. Boston already has a vacancy, Heinie Wagner having resigned recently after a year at the Red Sox helm.

McCARTHY SAYS HE WILL PROBABLY GO TO YANKEES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1. — (AP) — Joe McCarthy, deposed manager of the Chicago Cubs, told the Associated Press tonight that while negotiations were strictly in the preliminary stage, he had virtually discarded an offer to manage the Red Sox in preference to accepting a chance to pilot the New York Yankees in 1931.

McCarthy made it plain he had reached no definite agreements or signed any contracts but clearly indicated the New York club wanted his services and that he was in a receptive mood to undertaking the job of trying to put the Yankees back on top of the American league heap. The ex-Cub boss admitted having a telephone chat today with E. G. Barrow, secretary of the Yankees, and added that he expected later in the week to go to New York for perhaps a final conference with Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the club.

"However, I have talked positive terms with no one," McCarthy said, despite the fact that he had been closeted earlier and for some time with Bob Quinn, president of the Red Sox who was understood to have first call on McCarthy's services.

It was inferred that the prospect of trying to uplift a tail-ender was much less attractive to McCarthy than the chance to take over a first division outfit, such as New York, with assets that helped capture six pennants in recent years.

"It's not always a question of money," McCarthy said, in answer to a question as to whether financial considerations would not prompt his decision to accept a New York offer. "I want to go where there is the most opportunity. You know, when they break your heart, you want to have something to come back with."

LEFTY DUGAS FINDS LEAGUE GAME NOT SO TOUGH

Lefty Dugas came back from the baseball wars yesterday to the quiet and peacefulness of Taftville village to remain until next February when he joins the Pirates at their spring training camp. After the customary hand shaking and congratulations on his showing in the majors the first question we asked was: "Is big league baseball much different from the sandlots and the minors?"

"Oh, yes, a little different," replied Lefty. "You know its like stepping from a trolley into a Pullman car—just a little smoother and faster. But it's baseball just the same."

"How did you feel when you went to bat the first time against big league pitching?" we asked Lefty.

"Well, it wasn't so bad after the first ball but the suspense before your turn came was the worst. You know we hear so much about the big league pitching that the rookie is a little timid. When I first got up there I expected to see that ball come down the alley looking like a pea and wiggling like a snake. But instead it wasn't any different than in the Western league; you know we had some mighty good pitchers out there. After that first ball I was O. K."

Lefty said that he had been ordered to report for spring training and hoped to make the grade although he knew he had a tough time breaking into an outfield made up of Comorosky and the Waner boys. He said he might get a chance as Comorosky had fallen off in his hitting and that Lloyd Waner had not fully recovered from his operation.

Lefty is to be guest of honor at the Dugas day celebration on Saturday plans for which have been completed.

LYONS PROVES TO BE MASTER OF THE CUBS

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Ted Lyons completely mastered the Cubs today and sent the White Sox ahead in the battle for the Chicago city championship by defeating the former National league champions 5 to 1 in the opening game of the series.

Lyons permitted the Cubs but seven scattered blows and would have blanked them but for an error by Kamm in the ninth inning which subsequently resulted in the Cubs' lone run.

The White Sox won the ball game in the first inning when they bunched three hits and a walk for three runs. Pat Malone, ace of the Cubs' moundsmen, allowed but one hit thereafter until the eighth inning when Lyons started another scoring splurge that netted two more runs and put the ball game in the White Sox bat bag. BROUILLARD GETS CHANCE TO SHOW WARES AT GARDEN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Oct. 1.—Dynamite Lou Brouillard, the Danielson youth that appears to be headed for the heights of fistic fame sat down in the office at Madison Square Garden in New York this afternoon to talk over the matter of a contract to do some battling in that glittering center of the fistic world. He gets his chance to batter his way into the big time as a result of the remarkable showing he made in his bout against Billy Eskowitz at the state armory here last Friday night.

Eskowitz, never before off his feet in several years of ring experience, spent much of his time on the floor in the first round, actually beaten from the first minute of the bout, and going on with the affair would have been just too bad.

Frank Flournoy, matchmaker at the Garden, and Joe Humphrey, the famous announcer, both saw that affair, and were quick to make proposals to Brouillard to come over to New York and talk business. Eskowitz is a good man, but he just didn't look so against Dynamite Lou. Flournoy is quoted as having stated here that he regards Brouillard as one of the best men in his class (welter) in the country.

URBAN RESIGNS AS COACH AT CANISIUS

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Luke Urban, for nine years head football and basketball coach at Canisius college, resigned today, giving as his only reason the statement:

"I think it is for the best interests of Canisius and for myself." His resignation was to take effect at the close of the coming basketball season.

Urban is also widely known in baseball circles, having played between football seasons with the Boston Braves, the New York Yankees, Toledo, Columbus and the Buffalo Bisons. He was forced off the diamond this season by a broken leg, suffered while in training in Florida last spring.

His football career started as an All-American end at Boston college from which he was graduated in 1924. He is credited in athletic circles with having placed Canisius college in the front ranks of smaller colleges as regards football and basketball. His greatest team probably was that of 1923 when the Blue and Gold eleven lost only one game, to Boston college.

JOHNNY GREENE TO PITCH FOR CITIZENS ON SUNDAY

Johnny Greene, Polish Citizens speedball king, will be sent to the mound by Manager George Bizinski on Sunday in the city series against J. B. Martin at Martin park in an attempt to even things up. Last Sunday the Velvetmen copped the opener 11 to 4, when they scored four runs in each of the seventh and eighth frames, aided and abetted by Cits errors.

Greene, with his fire-ball, showed wonderful form in the recent five-game series with the New London Kaceys, which ended successfully for the Cits in four tilts. He let the Whalers down with only two runs in 27 1-3 innings and may cause the Martins trouble. Last Sunday his brother, Boots, went along for six innings, allowing but one earned run until his mates proceeded to mess things up. The remainder of the two lineups are expected to be practically the same as the first game.

ST. LOUIS FANS GET THEIR GAME BY RADIO

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Thousands of St. Louis fans forgot all about business duties today to listen to the radio reports of the first world series game in Philadelphia between the Cardinals and Athletics. They were clustered in front of radio shops downtown, at street corners, every where where a loud speaker had been set up.

While practically every fan who listened to the radio reports was disappointed at the outcome of the first game, there was no gloom in the Cardinal office. Club officials pointed out the Yankees won the first game of the 1926 series but the Cardinals came from behind to win the deciding game. They also pointed out the Cardinals have been most dangerous all season when they were trailing.

"There're six more games to this series," they kept telling one another around Sportsman's park today.

ACADEMY CLASHES WITH BULKELEY ON SATURDAY

The Academy football team will open its home season Saturday afternoon at the campus, opposing Bulkeley high of Hartford, regarded as one of the best teams in the state. The Wildcats started the 1930 campaign last Saturday at New London and defeated Chapman Tech, 13 to 7.

In the Hartford team, however, they will meet a much stiffer proposition, if all reports are correct. Whereas the locals had a fairly good weight advantage over Tech, on Saturday, local fans who have seen Bulkeley in action, say they will have a heavier line to buck and bigger and faster backs to stop.

REDS TO STRENGTHEN BY TRADING LUCAS AND STRIPP

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The Enquirer says it has information that negotiations are practically completed for a deal between the Reds and Cardinals whereby "Red" Lucas and Joe Stripp, of the Reds are to be traded to the St. Louis Cardinals for Jim Bottomley and Taylor Douthit. The paper says its information comes from a person identified with the St. Louis management adding the deal will be completed after the world series.

WESTERLY

ENTIRE FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT FOR BRUSH BLAZE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 1—Fire alarm whistle No 47, Beach street near River Bend cemetery was sounded about 1:30 p. m. Wednesday for a brush and grass fire in the land lying between East avenue and Beach street. All the fire-fighting apparatus of the Westerly department responded to put out the most threatening blaze which started south of Juniper lane and went easterly as far as the stone wall in the open lots of the Pickering farm on East avenue.

The fire was checked from reaching the home of Alexander McColl when a change of wind assisted the fire fighters. A dog chained to a kennel in the path of the advancing flames was saved when Stanley Senior and Luther Dock adopted the simple means of carrying out of the flames path, dog, chain and kennel. Their efforts were apparently not much appreciated for the dog later slipped his leash and ran into the woods.

Harry R. Milner, residing on East avenue, had a large force of employes and helpers engaged in keeping the blaze back from the rear walls of his property.

Drunken Driving Case Continued

On Wednesday morning P. L. Brundage pleaded not guilty to a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor when arraigned before Clerk H. P. Across the street or across the Atlantic

From your telephone you can talk with people in far-off Europe—across three thousand miles of ocean. That is one of the wonderful achievements of modern science.

Scarcely less wonderful is it that this same unpretentious telephone will also carry your words across the street, or to the other end of town. For the telephone is, after all, the servant of your everyday needs. To enable you to talk with your friends, to transact your business, to save your time and steps—that is the real function of your telephone. Not its spectacular uses, but its daily usefulness, makes it one of the greatest conveniences that our present civilization knows.

Yet without developing its ability to span continents and oceans we would never be able to reach our objective:

"THE MOST TELEPHONE SERVICE, AND THE BEST, AT THE LEAST COST TO THE PUBLIC."

MATE HAROLD SWEET HAS UNPLEASANT EXPERIENCE

Capt. Elbert Palmer, Mate Harold Sweet also Cook George Reid, of Boat Rowell P., were out to the fishing ground recently after flat fish. It was rought and the wind was blowing from off Watch Hill, so rough that Cook Reid could not hold the corn beef and cabbage on the stove. Capt. Palmer said, "We will try a drag line; if it gets too bad, we will beat it back to Noank."

"The two fishermen raised their right hands and said, "O. K. captain!" "After leaving the net in the water for about two hours they had about two barrels of fish it was getting rougher all the time, so once more the $100 net went overboard, as the waves were breaking high.

Again, after the usual course, it was hauled on deck but held only three fish. For the last time they thought they would try it again. In some manner the board on the net hit Mate Sweet in the back, knocking him into the salt water, rubber boots and oilers on and unable to swim much.

The waves would carry him away from the boat, but Capt. Palmer got the good ship around and Cook Reid, who can throw a rope good as Hoot Gibson, let it go, with an Indian war cry, on the end and it went around Sweet's neck and both fishermen pulled him on deck, safe from Davey Jones' locker.

Mate Sweet said, "Gee, that water was some cold! And when I went under the second time a big fish, must been a Block Island cod fish, pulled me under! That fish sure did spoil a $6 pair of boots and cut my toe! But I never had such a feeling in the water. My oilers were heavy, the waves high and that held me back. But I am here to tell it!"

Capt. Palmer smelled something burning from the kitchen. Down rushed the cook and found out it was his Dinty Moore Special going up in smoke—burned black as a coon's neck. But that was nothing as long as Mate Sweet was safe.

Sweet went down into the cabin to dry his clothes, as the boat got under way for the village after a rough day at sea and with only four barrels of fish. The fish are giving the fishermen a race all right! Fish mean money to the hard working fishermen, but where are the fish? It is like betting on the brown horse that will come in last. But, a true fisherman is like Sir Thomas Lipton trying to win a cup—got to be a good loser and a good sportsman, and smile no matter what hard luck comes up.

It was late when the boat Rowell P. tied up at the North dock after a hard luck day on the water with a real storm kicking up the waves.

PENDLETON HILL

Miss Juliet Palmer Boardman, of Montclair, N. J., and Pendleton Hill and Miss Amelia Palmer North, of Montclair and Haversham, R. I., have matriculated at Wheaton college, Norton, Mass.

Harris Boardman leaves for his junior year in the engineering course at University of Pennsylvania. Miss Jean Palmer North commences her junior year at Vassar college this week.

Miss Kathrine Thompson is a junior at Wheeler, George M. Cottrell a sophomore and Charles H. Cottrell, Jr., is in the preparatory department of the same school of this district.

Only Nine Pupils

Children residing in the town of Voluntown, and up to the present time attending the Hill school, are now transported to the village school in that town, leaving but nine children in four grades in the local school. Five of the nine children belong to one family.

Kenneth John and Birdsey G. Palmer, Jr., are sophomores at Plainfield high school.

Miss Amelia N. Palmer is again in charge of the Birch Mountain school in the town of Manchester.

In Alabama School

Mr. and Mrs John Rae, and sons, Walter John Jr. and Robin, are in Mrs. Johnson's famous Fairhope school in Fairhope, Alabama. This is a school of international reputation. Mrs. Johnson is an exponent of the so-called progressive school, branches of which are conducted in a number of states in the union. Mrs. Johnson conducted a summer school at Tufts college last year and this year at Yale university. Mrs. Rae will have charge of English dramatics and folk dancing. Mr. Rae will conduct his own studio. Walter Rae attends Fairhope high school as also does John Jr. Robin will enter the grades.

Dr. C. Wesley Hale, of Springfield, was the guest last week of William Maine and daughter, Emma. Dr. Hale spent two days at North Stonington fair, renewing and enjoying acquaintances. Dr. Hale's maternal ancestors were the Mains of North Stonington and for many years Dr. Hale kept his ancestral home here until it became impossible to keep any furnishings in the house, since thieves repeatedly broke in and carried away truck-loads of valuable contents. This place is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Otis Morgan. For ten years Dr. Hale has represented his district either as representative or as senator in the Massachusetts legislature. He was urged again to stand for nomination for senator this year or for nomination to congress, both of which he resigned. Dr. Hale is a graduate from the law school of Boston university and an authority in certain fields of law in which field he has been chairman of his committee in the senate. He helped organize the first Prohibition society in this state and spoke throughout the state in its interest.

Mrs. Fiona Hale Cook, daughter of Dr. Hale and well known here, where she spent considerable time as a child, was graduated in June from Boston University Law school.

Among those attending the Eastern States Exposition, Springfield, were Charles H. Cottrell and family, Mrs. Henry Johnson, Miss Lucy Lester, Harry Pierce and Raymond Briggs.

Herbert Billings and sister, Miss Harriet Billings of Natick, R. I., were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cottrell and family. The Billings took a number of boys for a long hike Sunday afternoon.

Captain and Mrs. Byron Dawley, of Pensacola, Fla., and Pendleton Hill, have returned to Pensacola. Capt. Dawley had been here for a month, and Mrs. Dawley has been caring for her mother, Mrs. Annie Cook since the first of April. Mrs. Cook will spend the winter in Florida where friends hope she will recover from her long illness.

STONINGTON

The warden and burgesses of the borough will hold a meeting Friday evening in Borough hall.

Dr. and Mrs. Hartford Gongawan, of Hope Valley, were visitors here Monday.

Dwight W. Avery and H. L. Yerrington, of Norwich, were callers here Monday.

Dr. James H. Weeks, Robert L. Burtch and Paul Schepis attended the republican dinner at Red Top Wednesday.

Patrolman Benjamin Adams has moved from the Moniz house on Elm street to the Ledward house.

Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Back are spending the week in Vermont.

Mrs. J. Morley and family of Santa Barbara, Calif., are guests of Mrs. A. L. Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Judson returned to New York Monday after spending the summer here.

Sparks from a passing engine set fire to a plot of grass on Cutler street Monday afternoon and an alarm was rung in from Box No. 4. Stonington Fire District Co. responded. Traffic was sent down through the borough due to the fierce manner in which the dry grass burned.

Mrs. W. A. Kopp and Miss Marguerite B. Slinsy, R. N., attended the meeting of the American Red Cross held in New London Wednesday.

PRESTON

Mrs. Nathan Hall entertained members of her Sunday school class Saturday afternoon. There was a business meeting for the purpose of organizing. Officers elected were: President, Janis Crary; vice president, Barbara Geisthardt; secretary, Ellen Abrahamson; treasurer, Morgan Dawley; social committee, Ruth Abrahamson, Lillian Green and Ruth Drake. A social time of games was enjoyed. Lemonade and wafers were served by the hostess.

There is to be a meeting of the Rural Road Improvement society at the town hall this (Thursday) evening.

At the C. E. meeting Sunday evening the leader was Mrs. C. C. Zabriskie.

Mrs. Charles Pendleton is spending some time at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frederick Dowdell.

Mrs. Walter McClimon spent the week-end with her sister, Miss Ina Muttart at New Haven.

Mrs. W. L. Muttart of Hampton is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Walter McClimon.

NORTH STONINGTON

Miss Bertha Lyon has returned to Pennsylvania after passing the summer here.

Mrs. Glentwood R. Butler has returned to her home in Brooklyn, N. Y., after a stay of several weeks in this village.

Mrs. Brower Hewitt and children, Cornelius, Lydia, Nina and Glentwood have left for their home in New Haven after spending the summer at the Hewitt farm.

The Dr. F. P. Rouse family has gone to New York after occupying the Williams house for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Stone, Mrs. Grace L. Thompson and Miss Lila Thompson attended the convention at Norwich Saturday as delegates from this town. Each woman delegate was presented a box of chocolate. Verily the rewards of politics are sweet!

FUNERAL

Mrs. Elmer E. Maine.

Funeral services for Minnie Davis Maine, 58, wife of Elmer E. Maine, were conducted at her home Monday afternoon by Rev. C. A. Burdick, D. D., of Westerly, assisted by Rev. Inor Partington of North Stonington. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and there were beautiful flowers. Burial was in Wheeler cemetery.

To Recover On Note.

In an action brought in the superior court, Levine Bros., Inc., of this city ask damages of $2,000 from Nathan Wein, alias N. Wein, of Westerly, R. I. Plaintiffs are seeking to recover on a three months promissory note they claim Wein gave them August 10, 1928.

MONTVILLE

Workmen in the employ of the landscape department of the state are filling in the land which the state owns, from the Norwich-New London highway, a distance of about 25 feet, with loam and grading the same to meet the improvements being made by members of Uncasville Methodist Episcopal church, under the supervision of the pastor, Rev. Otis Lee Monson.

Mrs. L. A. Bogue, of Norwich, and her sister from Clinton, Conn., were callers on Mr. and Mrs. Milton Bogue, of Montville Center Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Everetts have moved from Palmertown to Chapel street, New London.

Gladys Boske, of Palmertown, who has been a surgical patient at a private hospital in New London, is greatly improved in health and is expected to return to her home at the end of this week.

Plans are being made for a home cooked food sale under the auspices of the Union Baptist church.

Report of Visiting Nurse

Following is the report of the Montville visiting nurse, Mrs. Alice R. Dart, R. N., for the year 1929-30: Patients under care during year, 105; 6 patients died and all of the rest were cured or improved; nurse visits, 661; advisory visits, 190; pre-natal visits, 14; visits in behalf of patients, 50; social service visits, 21; total visits, 936; patients taken to doctor's office, 15; number of children weighed, 725; number of eye tests, 660; number of teeth, throat and head inspections, 705; total inspections, 2,090; number of children normal weight, 424; number 7 per cent to 30 per cent underweight, 168; number 7 per cent to 85 per cent overweight, 133; number with defective vision, 56; number with defective hearing, 1; number with spinal defects, 2; number with speech defects, 8; number lame or other deformities, 6; total defects, 73; number of children over 4 and under 16 that were enumerated September, 1929, 1,016; number of children taken to dentist, 34; number taken to doctor's office, 17; number securing glasses, 3; number having tonsils removed, 8; number in hospital for auto accidents, 3; number having fractured arm, 1; number taken to New York for operation, 1; number taken to Seaside sanatorium, 1; number who received town antitoxin, 4; number who received whooping cough vaccine, 3.

First aid boxes were refilled and placed in schools; paper towels, soap, etc., were distributed to rural schools. Health talks were given and posters and health books given to teachers. Children were excluded and reported to Dr. Fox when having symptoms of communicable disease.

The children seemed to be quite free from communicable diseases except for some cases of whooping cough, chicken pox and measles.

Home visits were made to children when possible when children were absent. The school children sold the Christmas seals at Christmas time for the T. B. association. Thanksgiving baskets donated by the Girl Scouts were given to two needy families. Clothing was given to five families. Food given one family from turkey supper, M. E. church; Christmas basket from M. E. church Epworth league given one family. Twelve meetings were attended during the year, including Red Cross meetings, graduate nurse meeting, Visiting Nurse association meetings, school nurse meeting and League of Women Voters meetings.

Lunch Followed Rehearsal

Miss Emma Gauthier entertained the members of Maple camp, Royal Neighbors, who are to produce the comedy, Always in Trouble, at the home of her sister, Mrs. M. J. Pont, at Pequot. Following the rehearsal, lunch was served by the hostess. Those in attendance were Misses Sally Monahan, Mary Conasavage, Mary and Pauline Step, also Emma Gauthier and John Lynch, Jack Daniels, Frank and Stephen Tisky and Edward Sckozgles.

The Ladies' Aid society of Uncasville M. E. church will meet this (Thursday) afternoon in the church parlors.

Collier Campbell has moved from one of the Keye's Products Mfg. Co. houses, to the Adams tenement, Palmertown.

Miss Mary Conasavage, of Gay Hill, has left for New York, for a vacation with relatives.

FIVE DRIVERS FAIL TO HAVE LICENSES RESTORED

Five of the motor vehicle operators who appeared here Tuesday morning in the common pleas court room before Inspector Philip E. Devnew of the state motor vehicle department failed to have their driving licenses restored.

The inspector reserved decision in the case of Nelson D. Theroux of 51 Fourteenth street and indicated that there was a possibility the license suspension might be for two years. When Theroux asked on what ground this action would be taken the inspector said it was for one year for drunken driving and another year for driving while his license was suspended. But the inspector said he would not now definitely state how long the suspension would be.

Another case in which decision was reserved was that of Miss M. Evelyn Whitehead of 8 Rogers avenue, who was driving her car on Main street, when it struck and fatally injured Nicholas Peterson, 50, of 20 Blossom street, Worcester. Attorney V. P. A. Quinn appeared as counsel with Miss Whitehead who was questioned by the inspector. City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, who had presented a charge of reckless driving against Miss Whitehead when she was presented in the city court, appeared at the inspector's hearing and registered a protest against the restoration of a driver's license to Miss Whitehead. He said that he considered the careless way in which she drove showed she shouldn't have her license restored, at least not for some time to come.

According to the finding of Coroner Edward G. McKay, Miss Whitehead was exonerated of criminal liability in the fatal accident and when a reckless driving charge was made against her in the city court, Judge A. F. Libby directed a dismissal on this charge after hearing the case presented by the city attorney. According to statements made at the time of the accident, Miss Whitehead had neither her driver's license nor her car registration with her, but no action in relation to this was taken by the authorities.

In the case of other operators at the hearing action was taken as follows:

William H. Kendall, R. F. D., No. 4, Norwich, operating under influence; not returned.

Armand Harnois, 53 West Thames street, Norwich, overloading; hein stated.

Raymond J. Willett, 31 Fifth street, Norwich, operating under influence; re-instated.

Donald W. Poole, 55 Franklin street, Danielson, operating under influence; allowed to obtain a limited license and must take out Class C insurance.

James E. Sweeney, New Boston road, Webster, Mass., operating under influence; decision reserved.

Bert Shorey, 4 Hill street, Jewett City, reckless driving; officer's testimony taken only.

George J. Parenteau, Box 26, Plainfield, operating under influence; reinstated, but must take out Class C insurance.

Arsene P. Lavallee, 31 Maple street, Danielson, misstatement on public service operator's application; decision reserved.

Miles M. Rogers of R. F. D. No. 2, Uncasville, was ordered to furnish proof of financial responsibility. He with Frank J. Davis of Uncasville were summoned in as the result of an accident. Davis was not held by the inspector.

ACCEPTANCES RECEIVED FOR ARMISTICE DAY PARADE

Acceptances from local organizations to participate in the Norwich Armistice day celebration and parade are being received by Fletcher post, No. 4 American Legion, which is sponsoring the event. It was planned to have as a guest speaker, Department Commander W. S. Alexander of Meriden, but owing to a previous engagement it will be impossible for him to attend. A letter to this effect has been received by Charles B. Gilbert, chairman of the local celebration committee, from Commander Alexander. In answer to invitations mailed by Chairman Gilbert, the following replies have been received to date:

Sebeuonash Council, No. 11, Degree of Pocahontas—We will be very happy to cooperate with your order and will help to make it a day of all days. Please keep us posted on your plans—Rose M. Quinn, K. of R.

Eastern Connecticut Council, Boy Scouts of America—I have been instructed by the president of the council and the Scout commissioner to state in answer to your general letter of September 20, 1930, that the Boy Scouts will be glad to cooperate with the American Legion in marching on Armistice day and that the Boy Scout Drum and Bugle corps of Troop 5 will play should their membership be not entirely absorbed by the other bands, such as Rotary, etc.—John L. Sellman, Scout executive.

Richard E. Hourigan Post, No. 594, Veterans of Foreign Wars—In reply to your letter of September 20, in regard to taking part in the parade Armistice day, I wish to inform you that this post voted to accept your invitation and as many as possible will march.—Harry Richmond, adjt.

Sedgwick Corps, No. 16, G. A. R.—Sedgwick Corps has voted to have a float to represent the corps. Mrs. Grace Fowler is the chairman in charge. Thank you for your kind invitation and hope other organizations will cooperate.—Lillian E. Brewster, secretary.

Sedgwick Camp, No. 4, S. of V.—Sedgwick Camp, No. 4, are greatly in favor of the observance of Armistice day and will gladly cooperate. The organization does not parade and so regret that we cannot help you in that manner.—Arthur L. Peale, secretary

CIRCLE B RANCH PONIES AND HORSES DO STUNTS

Naturalists claim that animals never forget anything that they have once learned; but Prince, with his mate Buster one of the trick ponies at Circle B Ranch, East Great Plain, wanted to forget Saturday morning, when his owner, Arthur Brailsford, Jr., was putting him through his paces. For some time Prince absolutely would not remember how to lie down and "die"; but eventually he went through his stunt as his trainer ordered, and very cunning he was at it, too.

Prince and Buster were all saddled and bridled, to be ridden by Masters Richmond and Holman Smith, sons of Mr. and Mrs. F. Russell Smith, of Carroll avenue, Norwich.

Marjorie, 8, and Dorothy, 7, small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Brailsford ride these ponies gracefully and fearlessly, speeding around the field in great shape.

The two ponies are the pets of the ranch, but there are also some very petted horses which visitors always admire. Of the dozen or more fine sleek animals, Jack o' Diamonds and Tony get special attention, being dancing horses, which are as vain and proud as they show off to music when the field is lighted at night as could be any prize beauties among the Follies girls. Jack and Tony are beauties in their own lines and they know it.

Mr. Brailsford came from Providence with his handsome steeds and has been at East Great Plain since May. It was his Jack o' Diamonds which Miss Hart from New York, rode in the events on Labor day, her skilled horsemanship making such a sensation and winning such plaudits from the Norwich gallery.

Another choice piece of horseflesh is the knowing animal which answers to the name of "Tish." This fine sorrel is ridden side-saddle by Princess Ethel Alferoff Alferieff social hostess at Norwich Inn. Among other graceful riders are Miss Deborah Parker and Miss Letitia Parker, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Parker, of McKinley avenue. Grosvenor Ely and his daughter, Miss Larned Ely and Miss Frances Dana Coit have also tried out the high-grade mounts from Circle B Ranch.

Among the juniors, others riding well are Master Eliot A. Payson, also Fanny L. and Charlotte M. LaPierre and Arnaud J. LaPierre, Jr., children of Dr. and Mrs. Arnaud J. LaPierre, of Elm avenue, Norwich Town.

A number of Norwich society women frequently take a bracing canter along the highway from the ranch, or over the soft turf.

The younger riders are all excitement now over a "prairie schooner," which Mr. Brailsford is fitting up, a big, red wagon to be equipped with bows in western style and designed for use in that rollicking form of diversion, straw rides. It will be a jaunty looking vehicle in regulation "Covered Wagon" model.

Already a start has been made on laying out a bridle-path from Circle B Ranch to the entrance door of Norwich Inn.

WOMEN'S CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL TO STUDY CHILD DELINQUENCY

A dozen or more experts on child care and guidance will be speakers at the League of Women Voters' citizenship school, Oct. 21-22, at Connecticut College for Women, New London. The title of the group of two-day conferences to be staged by the League of Women Voters is "Child Delinquency—What Our Schools and Our Courts can do Toward its Prevention." The morning session on Oct. 21 will be devoted to a consideration of the child's adjustment to school life. Speakers are to be Miss Margaret Danehey, school nurse in Willimantic, Miss Margaret Bridgers, visiting teacher in Norwich, and Miss Maud Keator, director of the division of special education and standards of the state board of education.

Frank E. Morris, professor of psychology and philosophy at Connecticut college and Dr. Bessie Bloom Wessell of the department of economics and sociology, will be on the afternoon programme. A dinner at the Hotel Mohican will be followed by general addresses on "The Child and His School" and "The Child and His Leisure."

Probation and prevention is the keynote of the second day's program. Speakers for Wednesday, Oct. 22, include Bernard Fagan, state parole commissioner for New York, Kenneth Messenger, state child welfare commissioner and chief probation officer of Connecticut, and Richard K. Godwin, deputy on probation. The school will close its sessions with a luncheon at the State Farm for Women at Niantic. Miss Elizabeth Munger, superintendent of the institution, will speak on "Probation in the Field of Social Hygiene."

Increase and regularity in family prayer is the general intention recommended for October to the hundreds of thousands of members of the League of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, in the Catholic churches throughout the world.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Trees and Their Tenants.

When the young leaves on the maple,
Shape and size of infant's hand,
Spread their palms to sunny breezes
Then 'tis springtime in the land.

Baby-leaves so small and perfect
Yellow-green and shining new
Faintly blush like autumn colors,
Fresh and delicate in hue.

These the days of Nature's magic;
Time and innocence and youth,
Growing things, so shy-appealing,
Promise Beauty's perfect truth.

Decked in leaves for our protection
From the summer's sultry rays;
Trees, like parasols, gigantic,
Foil the Sun's too ardent gaze.

Not alone their shelter lending
But like giant fans they stand,
Waving in the breezes for us,
Wafting comfort o'er the land.

Trees—the symbols of God's mercy,
Housing bird-life in their arms;
Palaces for morning music
Waken first, in groves and farms.

Caroling away our sorrows;
Warbling choirs of early morn,
Myriad foes of men, devouring;
Birds—our friends since Time was born.

On each other's life depending,
Trees, their feathered tenants need
And in payment give them shelter;
Plainly men should see and heed.

Men so blind to human welfare
Need to pause and face the truth:
Sparing birds and trees is wisdom
To be taught from early youth.

—Elizabeth Glenn Archer.

Squirrels.

I have two little tenants who pay me no rent,
And yet are quite saucy and bold.
They raise a great rumpus right over my head,
No matter how often I scold.

Once I heard, late at night, a terrible fight,
Things went crashing and dashing about.
Some daring intruder had entered the roof,
But the tenants soon put him to rout.

Now these two little tenants who pay me no rent,
When they tire of their hoarded up fare,
Run up to my windows; and when I appear
Demand that my larder I share.

I cannot say no, so I always come forth
And I laugh as they scurry around;
Or sit on their haunches to eat up my nuts
And scatter the shells on the ground.

The names of these tenants who pay me no rent,
Are "Frisky" and "Bright Eyes," his wife.
I have given them notice many a time,
But I know they're my tenants for life.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

The starfish, such as may be picked up on nearly any beach, is closely allied to the animal kingdom. Starfish are hatched from eggs deposited in the water. Their development is very interesting, especially when it is watched under a microscope. Eggs for experimental purposes may be secured by drawing a fine cloth net through an ocean wave. They will continue growing for sometime if they are kept under water. At first the egg seems nothing but a tiny round globule of jelly, but soon a dent or depression appears on one side. This becomes deeper and deeper until it extends to the center of the egg mass. After this there follows a marvelous succession of changes.

Each day adds to the complexity of the little animal, long tentacles grow and many other larval stages are passed through before the starfish shape is discernable within this curious changing egg. Then the entire mass is absorbed and the little baby starfish sinks to the bottom to start on its new life, crawling over and around whatever happens to be in its path.

The starfish has a way, all its own, for opening oysters. Oysters can withstand a strong, sudden tug, but not a slow steady pull. The starfish wraps its rays about the shell of the oyster and exerts a strong, even pull which eventually wears out the unfortunate oyster.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

An Imaginary Trip.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to the Wide Awake Circle and enjoy writing. This time I am going to tell you about my imaginary trip to Alaska.

As my father had some business to attend in Alaska my mother and I were going with him. We went on the yacht Atlanta. There were about 35 people including the captain and the crew when we started. We started in the early part of the summer from San Francisco.

The last glimpse we had of San Francisco was that of dazzling sunlight glinting from tapering points of tall buildings. Soon this was all left behind and we were on our way to Alaska.

The few days sail between San Francisco and Seattle was most enjoyable. We stopped at Seattle and then continued on our way. The captain decided that the Atlanta should cut away from the usual course from Seattle to seaward cross the gulf, to Cape Resurrection by the short course. Being the beginning of the open summer season, it was probable that icebergs would be met during the sail; but the short cut would save several days.

On the trip to Seattle we had a glimpse of California's shores on one side and the great Pacific on the other, but when we started from Seattle we saw nothing but water views until we sighted Resurrection Bay now renamed Harding Gateway, in honor of our late president's visit there.

Just as we passed Resurrection Bay the temperature changed, and the captain told us that quite often at this time of the summer masses of ice break away from the far northern points, and come down into the gulf carried by the swift currents which sweep around the cape and the many straits near the peninsula. Then too, there are great ice floes which come crashing from the towering glaciers and are washed out into the gulf by the rapid waters.

The Atlanta skirted the outside coast of Vancouver Island, then sailed close to the west coast of Queen Charlotte Island. After this the vessel turned her back to Prince of Wales island and Baranoff islands in order to follow the northwesterly course.

Thus far we had had very good weather. But one morning brought a change in the weather. As the day advanced the gale did not calm down and before sunset a fierce north wind was blowing from Resurrection Point. That night the cold became so intense that the younger set danced and ran races to keep warm. The older passengers sat huddled in fur coats and shivered.

All of the people had gone to their berths and I was about half asleep when all of a sudden I heard a frightful grating along the sides of the vessel. At the same time everything seemed to turn bottomside up and I was actually rolled out of my bunk.

Bells were ringing, shouts were heard from officers, cries from adjoining cabins, and then I regained my balance enough to get dressed. I was just going out when my mother came in and told me that the vessel struck a section of a submerged iceberg and I should get dressed warmly and be ready for any emergencies. All the female passengers and children sat in one room while all the men went out on the deck. The captain's wife was just explaining how the boat might have collided with a floe and be frozen or wedged against it, when suddenly it felt as though the vessel had dropped through a space. Then there came a deafening report of crackling and crumbling ice.

One of the men came rushing in the room where all the women and children were sitting shouting that the berg had let go its clutches on us.

All the people started questioning what the noise was and how we got free. He told us that a rope was fastened under one of the mate's arms to pull him up in case he slipped into the water and then he managed to get off from the boat and landed upon the peak of ice. He had clamped ice creepers to the soles of his boots and slowly he crept along the icy ledge where he planted a stick of dynamite. He lighted the fuse and then he hurried back on deck before the explosion took place.

We had many other exciting adventures before our journey's end.

THELMA GOLDBERG.

A Trip to Hammonasset.

Dear Uncle Jed: I had a very pleasant surprise this summer. It was a trip to Hammonasset. We went out past Gardner Lake, Salem, North Plains, Saybrook, Westbrook, Clinton, Madison to Hammonasset. It is a state park. There was a nice pavilion. There were nice tables and benches where we ate our lunch and looked off on the water. At one place on the pavilion was a blind girl selling things the blind people made. There were nice drinking fountains along the board walk. All the buildings were made of bark. It was a nice beach there.

There was a life saver's hut built in the sand, where a man sat and watched that nobody got hurt. I should think the beach is about a mile and a half long. There were a lot of tents pitched there. There were mounds of dirt for automobiles to back up against, making a nice parking place for a great many automobiles. On our way back we came over the Connecticut river bridge which was open for a tug boat and barge. Part of it stood straight up in the air. We had to wait until it closed. We came through Lyme, Black Hall and Niantic. We stopped at the Niantic depot and looked off on Niantic bay watching the train coming. It came so fast and went right close by us. We came to Waterford, New London across the bridge to Groton up the Military highway. I had a very nice time.

The Magnet.

Dear Uncle Jed: The magnet can lift several tons. Giant magnets in iron and steel mills can pick up hot as well as cold billets, and a single of this character will displace half a hundred workmen. The "skull-cracker" is a huge pear-shaped ball or iron suspended by a chain to a hook and steel ropes. This "skull cracker" is dropped with great force on scrap metal to be broken up for re-melting. It breaks the metal into convenient small pieces, and is lifted up and down by the magnet until the scrap is reduced to proper size. Then the invisible fingers of the magnet gather up the small pieces and carry them to the melting furnace. The entire operation is accomplished in one-hundredth of the time formerly required by manual labor. Magnets have been employed in the milling industry to pick out small particles of metal that frequently into flour and cause explosions through friction when they come into contact with the big rollers. Not a particle of metal can escape the powerful magnets suspended over the chute through which the grain passes. In mining and metallurgical work the magnet has become an indispensable labor-saving agent. The magnetic separation of ores has saved thousands of dollars to mining companies.

Autumn.

Dear Uncle Jed: I'm going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about autumn. One beautiful day in autumn while picking nuts I stopped to notice the background of the sky. The leaves on the trees Mother Nature had turned or tinted with golden and red, the fleecy clouds went sailing across the blue sky like ships and the large crimson sun was just sinking below the horizon. On the bank of a large stream sat a small boy fishing, for the season was nearly over. Farmer Reed was harvesting his crop of corn; others were raking leaves for bonfires and above all sitting on the branch of an old oak tree Mr. Nutcracker was busily gathering acorns for the winter. Everything seemed like a dream on this beautiful autumn day.

The Pilgrims.

Dear Uncle Jed: The Pilgrims lived in England. They did not like the way they worshipped, so they said that they would ask the king for religious liberty.

The king did not give them permission for over a year. Then they decided to go to Holland. So they took a ship called the Speed-Well.

As many as could piled in and went. When they got to Holland they did not stay long, because their children would become Dutch.

The ship they had come to Holland in was old and leaky. So they took the Mayflower, crossed the Atlantic and landed at Plymouth Rock. The day was stormy. The man had to hunt for a place to build. They found a place and called it Plymouth. First they built a long house for all of them to live together. Later they built each family a house.

The Six Blindmen.

Dear Wide Awakes: Once there were six blind men who had never seen an elephant. They wanted to see one, but they were blind and could only touch it.

One day a man was driving one through the town. A friend told the blind men about it. When it came near them one of the men asked the driver if they could touch it.

He said, "Yes."

One of the men felt the elephant's side and said: "It is like a wall."

The next one felt its trunk and said, "It is like a snake."

Another felt its ear and said, "It is like a fan."

Another felt its leg and said, "It is like a tree."

The fifth felt its tusk and said, "It is like a spear."

The last felt its tail and said, "It is like a piece of rope."

The elephant went on and left them guessing. It could not be decided which one was right.

Tree That Stores Water.

Wide Awakes: One of the most curious trees is the gigantic baobab which flourishes in Central Africa, the trunk of which sometimes attains a diameter of forty feet. This trunk serves as a natural cistern, retaining rain water in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top. The Arabs artificially hollow out the trunks of large baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains as a provision against the dry season. These cisterns are in many cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter.

Wolf! Wolf!

Dear Uncle Jed: A boy, who watched his father's sheep, would for sport sometimes cry out "A wolf! A wolf!"

When the men came from their work to help him, the boy would laugh at them for their trouble. But one day a wolf really came. The boy cried out in earnest: "A wolf! A wolf! Do come and help me!"

The men thought he was only trying to deceive them again, so they paid no attention to his cries, and the wolf killed nearly all the sheep.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Buster and Impy Become Friends

The wise will never boast at all,
Lest doing so they get a fall.
—Buster Bear.

Buster Bear looked long and hard at Impy the black Chipmunk. Then very slowly he began to grin. The grin grew. Presently it became a chuckle. "Don't be afraid, young fellow," said he. "I'm not going to hurt you. I'm very fond of Chipmunks. In fact, I can eat a Chipmunk for lunch any time. A Chipmunk makes one of the best lunchcons I know of. It gives one an appetite. I've eaten many a Chipmunk in my day. But I'm not going to eat you unless you want me to."

"I don't!" cried Impy.

"You see you are the first black Chipmunk I've ever laid my eyes on or that I've ever heard of; and it would be too bad to eat the only black Chipmunk," continued Buster. "What do you say if you and I become friends? You've got a black coat and I've got a black coat; and no one else around here has a black coat."

"You forget Black Pussy the Cat," spoke up Striped Chipmunk, who had been listening.

"Black Pussy doesn't count," declared Buster. "She isn't one of us here in the Green Forest, so she doesn't count. What's your name, young fellow?"

Impy was beginning to gather a little courage. "If you please, my name is Impy," said he.

Buster chuckled right out loud. "It's a good name," said he. "Now what are you doing over here? Don't you know that these nuts belong to me?"

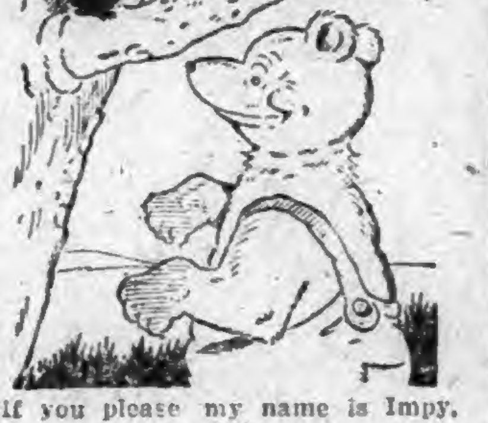
"No, sir," replied Impy promptly. "I've been told that they belong to whoever can get them."

"And do you think anybody can get them if I want them?" demanded Buster. "Do you think any one would dare take them away from me?"

"Yes, sir. No, Sir," replied Impy, answering both questions at once.

"What do you mean by 'yes, sir; no, sir?'" inquired Buster.

"I mean I think that some of us could get some of these nuts in spite of you, but that no one would dare take them away from you if you once had them," explained Impy.



"If you please my name is Impy," said he

"Oh!" said Buster Bear, and grinned. "Who do you think would dare take any of these nuts while I am here?"

"I think my father would," replied Impy, looking down at Striped Chipmunk. "And I think Chatterer the Red Squirrel would. And perhaps Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. I am beginning to think that I might myself, for I don't believe you could catch me after all."

"Watch out! Watch out! Don't be boastful," replied Buster. "Folks who boast are almost certain to get into trouble."

It was Impy's turn to grin. "That's what my father says," he replied. "I guess it is true, too. I'm not boasting. You are too big to climb where I can go, so that is why I feel sure you cannot catch me."

Buster turned and looked around. "I guess it isn't necessary to discuss that," said he. "It looks to me as if there would be nuts enough to go around. Did you get your father's thrifty habits with that black coat?"

"Of course he did!" spoke up Striped Chipmunk.

NIANTIC

The balloon, Neponsett, of Bird & Son, dropped into the Niantic camp ground a few nights ago for an overnight stop, coming here from Danbury on its way to its home port at Neponsett, Mass. The blimp arrived over the field about 5 p. m., and flew around for nearly two hours waiting for its ground crew to arrive and its small mooring mast. The blimp came in on one motor and it is understood its other motor was disabled along the route. Earlier in the week the navy blimp ZM-2 passed over here flying at a low altitude and not traveling very fast.

Fred Prothero and family of Norwich spent the week end at their Pine Grove cottage.

Mrs. Annie Brown is entertaining a house party at her Pine Grove summer home. Miss M. Janie Manwaring of the Point road has been for a week at the Brown cottage.

Mrs. Byron Eddy and family who have been at the Eddy cottage for several weeks left Sunday for their homes in Bridgeport.

Mrs. Josephine Cate who has been a week's guest of Mrs. Eddy, has returned to Bridgeport.

Turner Harding has returned from a few days' trip to several towns along the Connecticut river.

Mrs. Arthur Curtiss, of Hartford, has been visiting with her mother, Mrs. Lucy Johnson at Lake View Heights. Mr. Curtiss came down for the week end.

Mrs. Charles Keeney of the Golden Spur district was a recent business caller in Pine Grove.

Major and Mrs. Arthur D. MacIntyre of Putnam were week end guests of Mrs. Robert MacIntyre and family in the Grove.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank A. Fuller who have been passing a week with Miss Marion Payne at Black Point have returned to Central Village. They formerly lived in Niantic. About 20 years ago. Rev. Mr. Fuller was pastor of the Congregational church here.

Alterations are being made to the Gitson property on Pennsylvania avenue recently acquired by Mrs. Ernest L. Spencer.

Charles Banta and family of New London, former local residents, were in the village Sunday, renewing acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Stetson K. Ryan have returned to Middletown concluding a week's vacation spent at Whip-poor-will cottage, Pine Grove.

BOZRAH

Sixty-seven were present at morning service at the Center church. The pastor, Rev. G. H. Strouse, gave a splendid sermon on the theme, "The Pathway to Joy," using as his text, Luke 12:15, "For a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." The C. E. service was led by Orrin Banning, the topic considered was "How I Would Spend a Million Dollars on Missions."

The Bible study class is to meet Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Abel of Bashan Hill.

Mrs. Waterman of Hartford has been visiting her niece, Mrs. Alfred Abel.

Noted 80th Birthday.

Mrs. Lucretia Lathrop entertained on her eightieth birthday Monday. She had as guests, Mrs. Gardner Avery, Mrs. Albert Avery and daughter, Miss Lillie Gager, Rev. G. H. Strouse and Mrs. Strouse, Mrs. O. A. Bishop and daughter.

FITCHVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Armond Dibble and family spent Sunday with relatives in Plainville.

Mr. and Mrs. Stilson and son and Mrs Jerry Allyn and son, Paul, spent Thursday in Waterbury.

Mr. and Mrs. John Beswick and children, Mrs. Carrie Kelley and Miss Frances Kelley were Hartford visitors Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Winchester and family visited at the home of Mr. Thomas in Goshen Sunday.

Dredged for Oysters

Jerry Allyn, Paul Allyn and Harry Laputz were oyster fishing at Charlestown, R. I., Saturday.

Miss Mary Brooks of Norwich has been spending a week with her aunt, Mrs. Francis Gribbin.

Miss Dorothea Perkins spent the week end in Hartford.

Mrs. Lina Turner left Thursday for New York where she has a position.

David Schwartz completed filling his silo Wednesday.

Schools Without Water

Rain is badly needed. The schools in the village are without water, the reservoir being too low to supply the demand.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Perkins and Miss Margaret McGrath spent Sunday with Hartford relatives.

Miss Helen Lewitz is enrolled as a student at Columbia university this year.

MANSFIELD DEPOT

Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Howell spent several days recently with their son Rev. John Howell of Waterbury.

Mrs. Garry Demmarest, of Belchertown, Mass., called on her uncle William Cowitt, Friday.

Mrs. Minnie McCollum has returned from visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hans Volteitch, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cosgrove and son George spent Sunday with Holyoke relatives.

Going to Vermont

Arthur Cushman has purchased a place at Enochburg Falls, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bowers, Helen Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowers and children called on Mrs. Alice Whitehouse, of Broad Brook Sunday.

Nineteen biplanes passed over here Monday going toward Boston. Fourteen were in formation.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hansen and daughter Lucy have returned from Fishers Island.

Mrs. A. J. Bowers, Mrs. Minnie McCollum and Mrs. E. B. Thompson and Helen Bower attended the meeting of Ashford Baptist Sunday School association held at Spring Hill Tuesday.

RALLY IN STOCK MARKET RESULTED IN ITS LARGEST ADVANCE SINCE MID-JUNE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—The long delayed rally in stock prices came today with a vigor that gave the market its largest advance since mid-June. Gains averaged 2.6 points, putting the composite back to the level of last Friday.

Although short covering was doubtless the primary impetus behind the broad upturn, buying from outside sources appeared to be an important factor. Brokerage houses had received a reasonably large overnight accumulation of purchasing orders whose execution at the opening got the market off to a good start. Professionals who had been selling heavily for six consecutive days quickly sensed a change in sentiment and began protecting themselves.

Leading speculative commodities—corn, wheat and cotton—were strong. The two grains advanced more than 2 cents a bushel net, while cotton's gains ranged from 90 cents to $1.40 a bale. Investment bonds strengthened on reduced activity. The tone of the money markets was somewhat easier, although no concession was made from the 2 per cent renewal rate, due to the temporary demands on the market incident to the turn of the month.

News, however, was none too cheerful. Car loadings for the week ended Sept. 20 dropped 13,201 to a total of 952,512 cars, the lowest for that week in nine years. The steel reviews said that although the industry was holding its recent gains, little or nothing was being added to them, and the "Iron Age" estimate on ingot production remained stationary at 61 per cent of rated capacity. "Steel" said demand showed improvement, but that the upward trend had "lost some impetus."

Although Wall street was not inclined to overlook the fact that the rebound was hardly more than was to have been expected in view of the sustained selling over the past three weeks, speculative sentiment was decidedly brighter and the market was relieved from pressure for the first time in many a day. There was impressive buying in U. S. Steel, General Electric, General Motors, American Can, American Telephone, Westinghouse and Consolidated Gas. Rails and oils, which had been treated roughly, came back briskly. Gains of 3 to 6 points in leaders throughout the list were the rule.

Conspicuous weak spots were Missouri Pacific preferred and International Telephone, both of which made new lows.

Oils were helped by another reduction in crude oil output. Large sales of copper for domestic delivery led to a hope that prices were at last on bottom. Anaconda rallied nearly 4 points and Kennecott, 2 1-2, but there was still some unsettlement in other members of the group and Magma and Cerro De Pasco touched new lows on small declines.

The strength of leading industrials and utilities was a feature of the day. American Can's net advance was 6 points. U. S. Steel gained 4 1-4, Westinghouse 4 3-4, General Electric 3 3-4, Allied Chemical 7, International Harvester and Johns Manville 4. In the utility list, there were 4-point gains in American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, American & Foreign Power, Columbia Gas and American Water Works.

Large rises in some specialties tended to urgent bidding by retreating shorts. J. I. Case soared nearly 12 points. Among the rails, Atchison and Baltimore & Ohio rallied 5, New York Central and Union Pacific 2, Canadian Pacific 10, and Southern Railway 3. Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Motors and Radio were up 2 to 3.

Net gains in wheat slightly exceeded 2 cents. Buying was credited to an eastern pool as well as to rumors that the farm board was purchasing. Corn averaged 2 1-2 cents higher on a bullish private crop estimate and a better cash demand.

Foreign currency rates eased. The French franc again sagged, yielding 3-32 under continuance of the pressure evident this week. The German mark was steady, reflecting reports in Wall street that the reich government was arranging a $100,000,000 short term credit with New York and British bankers.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 1—(AP)—Grain values marched right up the hill today hand in hand with quotations on stocks. Houses with eastern connections were active as buyers of Chicago wheat future deliveries, and there was much talk that important speculative interests were entering the grain market on a large scale. Meanwhile, too, domestic milling demand for wheat was said to be the largest in some time, and unofficial estimates issued today put the probable use of wheat as feed for livestock in the United States this season as high as 170,000,000 bushels.

Closing prices for wheat were firm at nearly the day's top level, 2ca2 3-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 2 1-4a3c up, oats 3-4a1c advanced and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 27c.

In the last part of the day, provisions went sharply higher with grain.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Sept. 29 were $6,968,976.53; expenditures 7,900,000.40, balance $330,024,379.44.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—Along with stocks on the big board, curb market shares were carried sharply higher today in the inevitable reaction which comes after a prolonged selling movement.

Transactions aggregated 720,100 shares as compared to more than 1,000,000 yesterday, but leading stocks were carried up 1 to 7 points, cancelling most of the decline of the past two days.

Several of the stocks which were heavily sold on announcement of the Sisto failure yesterday made substantial recovery. Cuneo Press gained more than 4 points, and National Rubber Machinery more than 3. Hygrade Food, however, after selling up about a point lost its rise. Cosden Oil advanced about 2 points to 10 1-2, but closed at 9 7-8.

Utilities made marked recovery under the influence of extensive short covering. American Gas and Electric gained 7. American and Foreign Power warrants and Electric Bond and Share about 4, United Light A, 3, and American Super Power, Middle West Utilities, Brazilian Traction and Niagara Hudson about 2. In the natural gas group, United Gas rose a point in a large turnover. Appalachian and Missouri Kansas Pipe Line gained as much, and Lone Star mounted 3.

Oils gave the best account of themselves in some time, reflecting report of further curtailment of crude output last week, and the upholding of the Oklahoma probation program in the federal courts. Some uncertainty was felt, however, over the fact that the rate of reduction of stocks of gasoline in storage had slackened. Vacuum gained 4 points, Humble nearly as much, and Gulf, 2. Cities Service, Standard of Indiana, and Imperial were among issues selling up a point or more. Among the low priced issues Venezuelan Petroleum, a subsidiary of Sinclair, developed considerable activity, rising half a point to 2 1-2, accompanied by rumors of pending developments.

In the industrials, Deere and Driver Harris advanced 7 points. Aviation shares were firm. Fokker gained 2 points. Detroit sold up about a point, then lost most of its gain. Transcontinental Air Transport and Western Air Express were firm on news of the granting of air mail contracts. A few comparatively inactive issues crashed to new lows, owing to virtual lack of any market for them. Jefferson Electric sold at 19 1-2 points, or more than 30 points under the previous sale.

Newmont Mining was a soft spot, dropping 7 to a new low at 67, then recovering to 69 5-8. This stock has been slow in responding to the latest drop in copper metal prices.

In the investment company group, United Founders rose more than a point in a large turnover.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The improved sentiment in financial circles reflected in the rally of share prices influenced a better general tone in the bond market today.

The liquidation among foreign loans and speculative industrials subsided and some buying appeared to force an irregular upturn. For the first time this week, the averages for 30 bonds showed an advance. Among legal and second grade railroads and utilities the price movement was a repetition of former sessions, many establishing new highs for the year.

Profit taking influenced a lower trend among United States governments after pushing forward for several days. An exception were Liberty 1st 4 1-4s, which closed at 102 12-32, a new 1930 high.

Considerable interest was manifested in bond circles in the reduction of interest rates by many New York savings banks to 4 per cent. One of the principal factors influencing the reduction was the rise in prices of legal bonds causing shrinkage in the yields, and made it difficult for savings banks to make profitable investments with money on which they were paying 4 1-2 per cent. It is presumed that the bond market will be one of the principal beneficiaries from any diversion of savings banks deposits.

A reverberation from the failure of the stock exchange house of J. A. Sisto and company was heard in the bond group when Parmalee Transfer 6s dropped 13 1-4 points to a new year's low at 53. The concern was one of those in which Sisto and company was at one time interested. The recent drop of sugar futures to a new all time low was followed by a 10 point drop in Cespedes Sugar 7 1-2s and American Beet Sugar 6s yielded 12.

Among the rails there was a particularly strong inquiry for St. Paul adjustment 5s, up more than 2 points, Big Four 6 1-2s, Denver, Rio Grande and Western 5s Kansas City Terminal 4s, St. Louis, San Francisco 5 1-2s, Union Pacific 4 1-2s, Southern Pacific 4 1-2s, Oregon Line and many others. The feature of utilities was the strong demand for bonds of New York traction companies, particularly the Interborough Rapid Transit company. Refunding 5s and stamped 5s soared 3 points. Postal Telegraph 5s reached a new year's low, on a 2 1-2 point loss.

Stock privilege issues staged a moderate comeback. Texas Corporation 5s, Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s, American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s, General Theatres 6s, moved upward. International Telephone 4 1-2s continued downward, to another new 1930 minimum price.

For the first time in several sessions a majority of the changes in foreign bonds were on the constructive side and improvement was most marked among German issues. The 7s were firm and the 5 1-2s gained 1-2, Italy 7s rose 1. South Americans were irregular and some Argentine, Bolivian and Chilean issues were at new lows.

Offerings tomorrow will include $9,000,000 Minneapolis Gas Light company 4 1-2s, which will retire the six per cent notes. The National City company has sold privately $20,000,000 Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line company bonds.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox Film corporation in a tentative statement of earnings for the 39 weeks ended September 27, reported a balance for common stock dividends of $10,104,194, against $8,337,296 for the like period last year. The amortization of inventory of films, including participations, increased $3,710,360. The statement said that if the same rate of amortization of film cost as used in 1929 had been maintained, the net earnings would have been $2,890,692 greater. The statement did not take into calculation the earnings of Loew's, Inc., common stock owned by the corporation other than the actual dividends received, amounting to $991,360.

Operation of Teletype corporation recently acquired for the Bell System through exchange of 150,000 shares of American Telephone and Telegraph company stock for a like number of Teletype shares, was taken over today by the Western Electric company.

PERMANENTLY DISFIGURED, LOCAL GIRL SUES FOR $15,000

Claiming that she is permanently disfigured and that her eyesight has become impaired, Beatrice Claire Caron of this city, minor, through her father, Octave J. Caron of this city, has brought suit in the superior court, against the Shetucket Iron and Metal Co., also of this city, for damages of $15,000. The papers in the action have been filed with the clerk of the court.

It is alleged by the plaintiff that she was injured September 24, a year ago, while riding in a roadster operated by Joseph Kiefer of this city. They were driving in a northerly direction on North Main street, which was then under repair, traffic being limited to two lanes, one on the easterly side and one on the westerly side and a police officer was in charge of the traffic.

Charles Sever, it is claimed by the plaintiff, was operating a truck owned by the defendant company, in a southerly direction on the left side of the highway, and was driving in a reckless manner. As a result the roadster and truck collided and Miss Caron was thrown against the windshield.

Besides having her eyesight permanently impaired, Miss Caron claims that her face, left arm, left wrist, and three fingers of the left hand are permanently disfigured. She was employed as a saleslady at $15 a week, but has been unable to work since the accident, she claims.

LEAGUE OF MEN VOTERS ADVOCATED BY MRS. CLARK

A league of men voters interested in political education, to co-operate with the League of Women Voters, was suggested as a desirable development by Mrs. O. E. Clark, retiring president of the New London league, in her yearly report given at the annual meeting of the New London League of Women Voters at the Y. W. C. A., at the week end. Mrs. Clark mentioned having Mrs Frank A. Mitchell of Norwich, a member of the Connecticut child welfare board, tell the league of the new county home.

She also stated that telegrams were sent to Governor Trumbull urging the appointment of Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins of Norwich for county commissioner. She said: We have been greatly honored by having Miss Edna L. Tyler's name placed on the memorial table at Washington headquarters.

TAFTVILLE MAN SUES FOR $4,000 DAMAGES

Damages of $4,000 are claimed by Leo D Labbe, of Taftville, in a suit he has brought in the superior court against Louis P. Faucher of Thompson, this state. The suit is the result of an automobile accident Feb. 14th, last, on the Newent road in which Raymond Bernard of Thompson was killed and several others badly hurt.

Labbe, it is charged in the complaint, was driving a motor vehicle owned by John Paradis, along the highway, in the direction of Taftville. The machine owned by Faucher collided with Labbe's machine and as a result he claims he received a fractured skull, fracture of the neck and was otherwise injured. Labbe claims he was receiving $20 a week as a mill hand and that because of the accident he was unable to work for 11 weeks.

MASSACHUSETTS HENS SET PACE IN STORRS CONTEST

In the forty-seventh week of the Storrs laying contest, total production for all pens amounted to 3,065 eggs or a yield of 43.8 per cent. This is 147 eggs less than for last week but 363 eggs more than for the corresponding week a year ago.

The 1,000 birds have a grand total to date of 196,240 eggs thus bringing the average individual production up to 196.2 eggs as compared with 194.5 eggs in the preceding contest.

Four of the leading varieties were represented in this week's round-up for honorable mention. A pen of Barred Rocks entered by R. C. Cobb of Littleton, Mass., set the pace with a lay of 67 eggs. They were closely followed by Edward N. Larrabee's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Peterboro, N. H., that shelled out 56 eggs for the week.

Three pens of three different breeds were tied for third place. Pratt experiment farm's pen of Barred Rocks from Morton, Pa., and Fisher Poultry farm's White Wyandottes from Ayton Ontario tied with a pen of Leghorns owned by Cloverdale Poultry farm of Cortland, N. Y. These pens brought in marks of 52 eggs each. Fourth place was awarded to James Dryden's pen of Barred Rocks from Modesto, Cal., whose pen score was 50 eggs for the week.

During the past week there was but one shift in the line-up of seventeen best pens. This change occurred in the White Leghorn group when Cloverdale Poultry farm of Cortland, N. Y., superceded Alfred J. O'Donovan's entry from the same state.

The leading pens to date in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes — The Locusts, West Cornwall, 2255; Jack Wrennall, Barton, Nr. Preston, Eng., 2093.

Barred Rocks—R. C. Cobb, Littleton, Mass., 2461; Pratt Experiment farm, Morton Pa., 2369; Spring Brook Poultry farm, South Wethersfield, 2,214.

White Rocks—E. H. Rucker Ottumwa Iowa, 2110, Adam F. Poltl, Hartford, Wis., 1981; Davidson Bros., Upton, Mass., 1837.

Rhode Island Reds—Edw. N. Larrabee Peterboro N. H., 2606; F. S Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2413; Homestead farms, Newtown, 2403; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2340.

White Leghorns — Toivonen Leghorn farm, Girard, Pa., 2674; Steelman Poultry farms, Lansdale, Pa., 2,498; Hollywood Poultry farm, Woodinville, Wash., 2434; Hanson's Leghorn farm, Corvallis, Ore., 2420; Cloverdale Poultry farm, Cortland, N. Y. 2390.

FORMER "APPLE KING" PLANS TO WINTER IN THE SOUTH

Everett Brown, of Black Hill, Plainfield, long known as the "Apple King," was in Norwich Tuesday, with Mrs Brown. For many years Mr. Brown was superintendent of the magnificent Hoppin estate, Westland Farms, at Pomfret. Here he reclaimed and developed the orchards until his fruit won him some of the most coveted premiums at fairs and shows and his fame as an orchardist spread far and wide. Since the war, Mr. and Mrs. Brown have resided on the ancestral farm of Mrs. Brown's family, the Smiths, in the town of Plainfield.

It is their plan to motor south during October, making Florida their objective, but doing leisurely sight-seeing on the way. Mr. Brown has been invited to meet fruit culturists and to speak at agricultural colleges and grange assemblies in a number of states. There is a possibility that he may send The Bulletin an occasional letter from the towns visited, giving his impressions of orchard and farming conditions and accomplishments in the south. Just what Florida city Mr. and Mrs. Brown will select as a residential place during their absence has not been decided yet.

SEIZURE OF GUNS AND AMMUNITION IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A swift silent blow in the combined war on racketeers and gangsters was struck today when state's attorney's investigators raided the Monroe hotel in Chicago Heights, seized a large supply of guns and ammunition and arrested four men whom they described as "gang killers."

The raid was planned and conducted with such secrecy that results were not revealed until tonight.

Another offensive against hoodlums which has been kept secret also was disclosed when Judge John H. Lyle inadvertently admitted that vagrancy warrants had been issued for another group of gangsters, who are now being tracked by detective squads.

In closets of the rooms where the four were arrested raiders seized two machine gun rifles, an automatic shotgun and several thousand rounds of machine gun, revolver and shotgun ammunition.

CHICAGO'S "RESPIRATOR GIRL" FEELS HERSELF BREATHE

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Frances McGann, Chicago's "respirator girl" felt herself breathe today for the first time in three weeks.

Removed from a box-like breathing machine that has kept her alive for the past 21 days, the girl said she felt the rise and fall of her lung muscles for the first time since she was stricken with infantile paralysis while serving as a student nurse in the hospital, where she is fighting for life.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

A laugh in every line of the dialogue of "The Bad Man" is the boast of the producers, First National and Vitaphone, and judging from the audience reaction when the picture opened yesterday at Warner's Broadway it is true.

"The Bad Man" is a great picture primarily because it was a great play. It is a distinct and novel story, abounding in laughs, and, under the guise of a Latin temperament, kidding serious-minded Americans to the limit.

Walter Huston gives one of the greatest performances of his career in this picture.

But great as Huston is in the part, he comes very nearly having the picture stolen from him by O. P. Heggie, the veteran character actor who plays the role of the eccentric uncle in the wheel chair. Heggie played the same role on the stage.

James Rennie and Dorothy Revier play the romantic leads, and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams and Marion Byron the juveniles. Arthur Stone and Johnny Arthur also contribute important comedy characterizations, while Sidney Blackmer gives an excellent performance as the "real villain" of "The Bad Man." Clarence Badger directed, from Howard Estabrook's adaptation.

Hillcrest Theatre

Today the management is more than pleased to present one of the greatest pictures ever made, "The Cock-Eyed World," starring Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen and Lily Damita.

"The Cock-Eyed World" is one of those rare pictures which combine a vast amount of humor, spice and action, all rolled into one. The constant praise of the critics has resulted in "The Cock-Eyed World" being listed among the leading pictures of the year.

A surrounding group of perfect talking short featurettes all add to make this one of the most attractive talking programs ever presented in any theatre.

Coming Saturday, George O'Brien in a stirring drama of the snowlands, "Rough Romance."

The Ideal of a Craftsman

In every age men have striven with untiring patience for the achievement of an ideal. The name "STRADIVARIUS" on a violin immortalizes a master craftsman who lived true to his ideals.

Making a cigar of the finest quality was the ideal upon which in 1874, at Manchester, N. H., Roger G. Sullivan—starting with one cigar maker—founded 7-20-4. Today because of its ideal quality, 7-20-4 has grown to the largest hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos are traditional with 7-20-4. The unswerving tenet of its founder—to keep faith with the public—has remained unchanged for over half a century. It is this firm principle which today refuses to alter that method of manufacture which has made 7-20-4 Cigar—FAMOUS FOR ITS CHOICE QUALITY.

We cordially invite you to visit our factory

WARNING
Annual Town Meeting

The Legal Voters in Town Meeting of the Town of Norwich, are hereby warned to meet in ANNUAL TOWN MEETING, in the Town Hall, in said Norwich, ON MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1930, AT 8 O'CLOCK, P. M. for the following purposes:

To hear and act upon the annual report of the Selectmen and their recommendations, the reports of the Town Treasurer, the Sinking Fund Committee, the Town Health Officer, the Town School Committee, and the Trustees of the Otis Library, to fix the salaries of the Town Officials, to lay a tax to meet the lawful expenses of the Town, including the expenses of the Public Schools, for the ensuing fiscal year, and to fix the compensation of the Tax Collector.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum not to exceed the amount of Four Hundred Thousand ($400,000) dollars at such times and in such amounts during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to defray the debts of the Town accruing before the next Annual Town Meeting and to deliver the notes or other obligations of the Town therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interests of the Town.

Also to authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum of money not to exceed Twenty Thousand ($20,000) dollars at such time during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to pay the Town's share of the County tax heretofore levied upon the Towns of this County and to deliver the notes or other obligations therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interest of the town.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Sixty-five Hundred ($6500) dollars, to be used for the current expenses of the Otis Library.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Fifteen Hundred ($1500) dollars to be used for the care and maintenance of the trees on the highways of the Town.

Also to appropriate a sum not to exceed One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to defray the traveling expenses of pupils residing in this Town who desire to attend the Putnam or Willimantic Trade Schools.

Also to determine whether the Town will hereafter assume the expense of the care and maintenance of thirty-nine electric lights located on the public highway in or near the Village of Taftville; which lights have heretofore been cared for and maintained by the Ponemah Company.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to be used in maintaining a Treatment Station for the care of venereal diseases.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ninety-two Thousand Five Hundred ($92,500) dollars for the purpose of relieving the parents or guardians of children who attend the Norwich Free Academy and are domiciled in the Town of Norwich from the payment of the customary term fee for the School year of 1930-1931.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ten Thousand Five Hundred ($10,500) dollars for the purpose of providing medical inspection and health work for the school children of the Town of Norwich.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain a Street light at the corner of the private ways, known as Edward Avenue and Sylvia Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain two additional hydrants on Town Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known hydrant at the junction of Harland Road and Sachem Plain Road.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to accept a deed of a private way in said Norwich extending from West Town Street to Sturtevant Street and now known as Shales Avenue from the owner thereof and maintain said private way hereafter as a public highway.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way in the Town of Norwich heretofore known as Perry Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway of the Town.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known as Germania Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway.

Also to approve the action of the board of selectmen in removing the town sign-post heretofore located at the corner of Main and Market streets to a location on the east side of Laurel Hill bridge.

Also to authorize the proper officials of the town to execute and deliver to the Thames Bank and Trust company a proper bond of indemnity and to obtain from the said company a certificate of its capital stock to replace a certain lost certificate which was the property of the town representing certain shares of stock of the Thames National bank owned by the town.

Also to do any other business proper to come before said Meeting.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, this 29th day of September, A. D. 1930.

WILLIAM S. MURRAY,
CHARLES P. BUSHNELL,
Selectmen of the Town of Norwich.

RINARDO, NEW LONDON YOUTH, ADMITS STARTING THE ADEL GARAGE FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 1.— Rosa Rinardo, Grand street youth with police record of more than usual length, was arrested this afternoon by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh on suspicion of having set fire to the garage of P. Adel, Woodbridge street, last Friday night when the building was badly damaged and four automobiles destroyed and three other trucks damaged by the worst blaze that the New London department has been called upon to combat in many months, for the fire entailed a loss of the estimated amount of $30,000. Rinardo was locked up and will be in the police court tomorrow. The specific charge against Rinardo, however, is not arson, for it is believed that the investigators are without sufficient evidence to warrant that charge being made, but instead the youth is charged with the theft of gasoline and it is intended to accuse him of using negligence in committing the theft of the fuel which resulted in the fire being started. Rinardo, who has a bad record because of his implication in many acts of thefts, was taken into custody following a rigid investigation, in an endeavor to determine the cause of the fire which caused a two-alarm blaze. Ever since the fire, the police and fire officials have contended that the fire was started either by an incendiary or a gasoline thief, but the contention of the investigators was that the fire originated from an incendiary more than from a fuel thief. After the fire had been extinguished a pipe containing a pet-cock and which had been attached to the five-ton truck, beneath which the fire started, was found burned from its fastening and with the cock open so that the contents of the fuel tank would be emptied upon the floor. In arresting Rinardo it is further contended that the youth was in the act of stealing the gasoline and that through his carelessness in dropping a lighted cigarette, the fire was started. If such be the case the boy cannot be charged with arson, for his act was not one of premeditation or deliberateness, but was the result of gross carelessness in the commission of theft, if that crime can be attached to the acts of the youth.

Later, Rinardo made a confession of his acts. He claims to have gone to the garage about 11:30 o'clock and to having approached the watchman, Harold W. Decker, 33 Washington street and requested to be allowed to purchase a quantity of fuel. The request was refused. Later the youth obtained a galvanized pail and went to the garage where he opened the pet cock beneath the five-ton truck and started to relieve the tank of the gasoline. When Rinardo lighted a match to ascertain whether the pail was full, the gasoline ignited and after his attempt was futile in an effort to extinguish the fire, Rinardo fled from the building. The arrest and confession of Rinardo was principally due to Watchman Decker's statements, for after the latter had related his knowledge of events leading up to the fire, Rinardo was taken into custody.

State D. A. R. Convention

The 37th annual convention of the Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution was held here today in the parish house of the Second Congregational church and with about 400 delegates in attendance. Miss Katherine Nettleton, state regent, presided at the session and Mayor Cornelius D. Twomey delivered the address of welcome. The principal speaker was John F. Rolfe, of the Hartford Times.

Louis Levy, proprietor of the Capitol Cleaners, Bank street, this evening made complaint to the police that a two-horse power electic motor was stolen today.

Two cases of intoxication will be tried in the police court tomorrow. One of the men was arrested by Patrolman Frank Philopena on Main street and the other was arrested on North Bank street by Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

Miss Kathryn Prindiville, superintendent of Lawrence Memorial hospital, will leave Monday for New York, en route to New Orleans where she will attend the national convention of the American Hospital association the week of Oct. 20. Miss Prindiville will be accompanied by Miss Frances Chappell, superintendent of Glen Cove hospital, Long Island. They will make the trip by boat.

Albert Smith, of Waterford; Miss Ruth Chappell, Niantic; Mrs. Norman Nelson, and infant son, 570 Washington street; Mrs. Margaret Kane, 32 Huntington street; Mrs. Anthony Andrews, 216 Vauxhall street; Michael Turano, Westerly; Hector MacDonald, 159 Shaw street; Mrs. Mariano Marinelli, 50 Smith street; Alton Thompson, 93 Lincoln avenue; Mrs. Edward Cotter, 199 Vauxhall street; Mr. and Mrs. John J. MacDonald, Astoria, L. I.; Mrs. Nicholas Rogers and infant son, 32 Ocean avenue; Mrs. Justine Denison, West Mystic, Mrs. Richard Bogue and infant daughter, 53 Nameaug avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

OBITUARY

Mrs. James W. Ceil

Mrs. Viola May Ceil, 22, wife of James Willard Ceil, of 270 Crystal avenue, died last night at Lawrence-Memorial hospital in child-birth, together with her infant. Mrs. Ceil, is survived, besides her husband, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sizer.

Arrests for Month

The New London police department had another big month in the number of arrests for September; 262 men and women were taken into custody. The number of arrests and the offenses alleged ,were as follows: Intoxication, 81; violation of the automobile law, 39; violation of the traffic law, 40; breach of the peace, 33; arrested for other departments, 14; trespass, 9; driving while under the influence of liquor, 8; theft, 7; violation of liquor law, 5; lascivious carriage, 4; vagrancy, 4; evading fare, 3; violation city demeanor ordinance, 3; frequenting house of ill fame, 2; gambling, 2; insane, 2; keeping house of ill fame, 2; non-support, 2; bigamy, 1; breaking and entering, 1. Besides those arrested, 76 men were provided with shelter. Eight automobiles were reported stolen and all were recovered.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the driver's license of Frederick L. Smith, 252 Montauk avenue. Smith was recently fined $100 and costs in the police court for driving while under the influence of liquor.

The rear entrance to the state motor vehicle department, Bank street, was discovered unlocked late last night by Patrolman Louis Wheeler. The officer, after inspecting the building, secured the entrance for the balance of the night.

Dusky Dames In Combat

Marian Lewis, colored, of Newport, R. I., formerly proprietress of a disorderly house on Potter street and with a long police court record, returned to New London yesterday and today was charged in the police court with breach of the peace and intoxication. Marian, who was released on furnishing bail of $100 last night, was not in court to defend the charges and as a result her bond was declared forfeited. The Lewis woman and May Barnes, another Negress, residing at 25 Douglass street, also arrested many times on charges of an immoral nature, were on Golden street last midnight and both had been drinking. A row resulted when the two met and when Marian is alleged to have threatened May with a knife there were screams that aroused the neighborhood. A report was sent to police headquarters that a cutting affray was in progress and Sergeant John Courtney and four officers went to where the Negresses were battling and arrested both. In court today the Barnes woman was discharged.

Another Negress, with a police court record for her underworld activities was given a hearing, when Corrine Morris, Douglass street and her boy friend, John Wall, were charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. Each was fined $5 and costs. The man and woman were on Bank street, near Golden, late last night and they, also, had been drinking. The pair quarreled and Wall hit his companion a blow on the face that sent her sprawling on the walk. Both were arrested by Sergeant Samuel Hick and Patrolmen George McCaskey and Louis Wheeler

Bully Goes to Jail

Raymond McPartland, 288 Ocean avenue, charged with intoxication and breach of the peace, was fined $10 and costs on the first count and on the second charge a fine of $25 and costs was imposed. McPartland late last night was in a State street restaurant and had been drinking. When he left, he provoked a quarrel with Joseph Butts, an aged Negro, residing at 615 Montauk avenue. McPartland, who has been arrested many times and is but about 24 years of age, struck Butts a blow that sent the Negro into the highway, unconscious. McPartland fled through State street and as Patrolmen Dennis Cavanaugh and Joseph Sullivan were assisting Butts, McPartland returned to the site of the trouble, only to be arrested. He could not pay the fines imposed today and was committed to jail.

FORMER NORWICH MAN KEPT GAMBLING RESORT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON. Oct. 1—Philip Mandell, formerly of 4 Thames street, Norwich and now residing at 465 Ocean avenue, was charged with keeping a gambling resort at 6 Bank street. The case was continued to Monday next. Harry Manss, 105 Golden street; Samuel Goodman, a tailor; Mel Patricio and Peter Vong, 181 Main street, were charged with frequenting, for they were found in the building when the raid was staged. Their cases, also, were continued to next week, all furnishing bonds. The building was vacated a week ago by the proprietors of a gambling resort and with the building empty, Mandell, it is claimed, decided to operate a card game. This fact became known to the police and at 4:30 o'clock this morning. Sergeant Samuel Hick entered the building and arrested all found there.

Lieut. J. A. Pearson, U. S. N., stationed at Portsmouth, N. H., was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving while under the influence of liquor. He entered a demurrer, which was overruled and a fine of $100 and costs was imposed. Pearson was driving on Ocean avenue early this morning and lost control of the steering wheel, the car crashing against a tree .The auto was damaged but Pearson escaped injury. Miss Alice Quinn, 40 Centre street, who was a passenger in the auto, sustained lacerations of the head and scalp. She was taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital where an examination revealed that the injuries are not of a serious nature. The young woman will probably be discharged tomorrow.

Frank J. Wilson, U. S. coast guard, charged with reckless driving, pleaded not guilty. He was arrested last night by Patrolman Dennis Murphy. Because of the nature of the testimony introduced, which was lacking in facts to substantiate the charge, Wilson was found not guilty.

Two cases of intoxication were disposed of. A soldier stationed at Fort Wright, Fishers Island, was fined $15 and costs and went to jail. The other case was that of a young man found in a parked automobile on Tilley street. He was given suspension of judgment.

Wife Drove Car Away

Joseph Drury, 45 Ann street, reported to the police last night that the Ford automobile belonging to William W. Donnenhower, Washington, D. C., and which the former had parked on Main street, had been stolen. Later events revealed that the auto had not been stolen, but was found and driven away by Drury's wife, presumably because her husband had been drinking.

Robert Potter, 58 Howard street, reported to the police today that while his automobile was parked in front of his residence last night the car was hit and damaged by an unidentified machine.

Inspector Philip Devnew, of the state motor vehicle department, conducted automobile hearings in the county courthouse here yesterday. The cases disposed of were: William Williamson, 80 Allen street, Groton, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, license reinstated; Francis M. Cleary, Hartford, reckless driving, decision reserved; James Reid Watt, Quaker Hill, Waterford, reckless driving, indefinite suspension; Henry E. Cushman, 18 Glenwood avenue, reckless driving, decision reserved; Peter Dyke, U. S. coast guard destroyer Cummings, driving while under the influence of liquor, instructed to obtain three letters of recommendation; Raymond I. Letts, Deep River, fatal accident, license reinstated. Three drivers failed to appear: Harold Eldredge, Monroe street, Waterford, loaning markers; John Stetz, 50 Westminster street, Fall River, Mass., driving while under the influence of liquor; Stuart Long, Westbrook, driving while his license was under suspension.

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters today when an automobile owned by Charles R. Carlyle, 18 Amity street, was discovered afire in front of the owner's residnce. Northwest Hose company responded and extinguished the blaze with chemicals.

Another still alarm was received last night when the residence, 8 Schoolhouse lane, owned by Nathan Lubchansky and occupied by John Lane, was threatened as a result of a chimney fire which originated from an overheated flue. Nameaug Engine company extinguished the blaze before damage of consequence resulted.

Miss Esther Salinsky, Niantic; Miss Marie Riley, Flanders; Miss Pearl LaBelle, Niantic, and Miss Clara Oquist, Flanders, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

At the meeting of Clan Cameron, Order of Scottish Clans, held last night in Union lodge rooms, the following officers were elected: Chief, Duncan Silver; Tanist, Neil McPhail; chaplain, Daniel MacArthur; secretary, Norman MacIntyre; financial secretary, John A. Brown; treasurer, Robert Ferguson; senior henchman, Cornelius A. MacArthur; junior henchman, Norman Stevens; inside sentinel, Orman G. Huntley; outside sentinel, William Williamson; warden, Thomas M. Anderson; trustee for three years, John Rankin. The officers will be installed at the meeting to be held Oct. 23.

Donald Harwood, New York, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. LeRoy Harwood, 266 Ocean avenue.

Gaule—Brown

William F. Gaule and Mabel M. Brown, both of Providence, were married yesterday afternoon at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ, by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth.

Pimples Itched and Burned Terribly. Healed by Cuticura.

"Small, red pimples rapidly spread about my face and neck. They itched and burned terribly, and at times caused loss of sleep. The trouble lasted three months. I tried various remedies but failed to procure any satisfactory results. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and followed the directions with care. I noticed a difference after a few treatments so purchased more, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Geo. Gimon, 227 Chestnut St., Garfield, N. J., Feb. 4, 1930.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. H, Malden, Mass."

GREENEVILLE

FUNERAL

Henry Robillard

The funeral of Henry C. Robillard, who passed away at Danbury, Monday afternoon, was held Wednesday morning at 10:30 from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eli C. Robillard, 40 Fourteenth street. The services were conducted by Rev. Nicholas Caron, of Jewett City. Burial was in the family plot in Sacred Heart cemetery, Taftville, and Rev. Father Caron was in charge of the committal. The bearers were Louis T. Caron, Andrew Jarry, James Caron, Arthur Guertin, P. Bergeron and William Higgins. The floral remembrances were both numerous and beautiful and there were present mourners from Danbury, Jewett City, Taftville, and other places. Arrangements were in charge of Undertakers Dougherty Brothers, of Taftville.

Well Baby Conference Friday

A well baby conference will be held Friday afternoon from 2 until 4 o'clock at the assembly hall of Greeneville Congregational church. The Central avenue entrance will be used. The conference is in charge of the nursing department of the public health department.

Chauncey Geer and Horace Woolley have accepted positions with the Uncas Finishing Co.

Alban Keeley has returned as a student at St. Thomas' seminary, after spending the summer vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Keeley, on Convent avenue. Mr. Keeley, during the past summer, was an instructor at the Greeneville playground center on North Main street.

Many of the local merchants had radios installed in their stores Wednesday to get the returns of the world series and the idea proved very popular.

John Keeley has accepted a position with the Versailles Sanitary Fibre mills.

Returns from Hospital

The many friends of Mrs. Evelyn McGowan will be pleased to learn that she has returned to her home on Roosevelt avenue, after being a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis.

The Bowen's Newsies football team is getting into shape for a busy season with a practice held every evening. The team this year is in charge of John Kilcollum and among the candidates are Edward Quinn, Lawrence Wielland, William Martnicki, Edward Breen, Richard McNeal, Pino Quinn, Alexander Martnicki, Walter Mopstick, Harold Lasroff and Jacob Novick. Any team averaging 120 pounds desiring games can arrange same by writing to John Kilcollum, 458 North Main street

NORWICH TOWN

Next Sunday will be Rally day at Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church, in all departments of the work. The pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter, will preach a Rally day sermon at the morning service at 10:45 and the vested choir, under direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, will render special music. At 12 noon, the church school will have a special Rally day program. Rev. William J. Sly, D.D., will be the speaker. Dr. Sly is a famous story teller and his subject is, "What Do We Mean by Rally?" He was for five years an officer of the Baptist State convention. For several years, Dr. Sly taught Bible study and story-telling at Lynfield college, Oregon. He is the author of the book, "World Stories Retold." Adults as well as the young people have been invited to attend this special service and hear Dr. Sly. Mrs. Lewis Irish will be soloist at the service. The Christian Endeavor service at 6:45 will be led by the president of the society, Lewis E. Aldrich. At 7:30 the first evening service of the fall and winter will be held. The pastor will give a drama sermon, "The Way of All Flesh," a drama of sin and its inevitable consequences. There will be special music.

Boy Scouts and Cubs

Friday evening, at 7:15, the John Mason troop 2, Boy Scouts, connected with the Methodist Episcopal church, will hold the first meeting since July. The Wolf Cub pack will hold its first meeting Saturday morning at 10. Both organizations are in charge of the pastor of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. George Geer and Mrs. Josephine Parker, also Otto Miller, have returned to Norwich Town after a visit of several days on Cape Cod. They were guests of Rev. Charles Smith and his daughter, Miss Susie Smith, of South Harwich. Rev. Mr. Smith, a retired clergyman, was pastor of Uncasville Methodist church for about seven years. Mr. Geer and family motored to the cape by way of Providence, Taunton and Middleboro. When returning home they had the pleasant experience of crossing the Washington bridge in Providence, which was opened to the public last week. Rev. Mr. Smith and Miss Smith and their guests spent last Friday at Provincetown. This was the second time the Geer family has visited the cape.

There were three automobile parties from Norwich Town in the large attendance at the six-church conference held all day Wednesday at Preston City Congregational church: Rev. George W. Clark, pastor; Mrs. William H. Whieman had with her in her car Mrs. Andrew Gardner, Mrs. Edwin Lathrop, Mrs. Allen Kinney, with Miss Maria Briggs, of Norwich. Mr. and Mrs George Geer had as guests, Mrs. Josephine Parker, Mrs. Frederick Race Mrs. Herman Gager, also Otto Miller. Others from Norwich Town were Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb.

SIX CHURCH CONFERENCE HELD IN PRESTON CITY

With the skies and foliage most beautiful, the six-church conference met Wednesday at the Preston City Congregational church.

At 11 a. m., the conference was led in a devotional service by Rev. G. H. Strouse, of Bozrah, and the programme followed: Responsive reading led by Rev. W. L. Muttart, of Hampton; prayer, Rev. Harold Arnold, of Packerug; the anthem, "My Soul Shall Be Magnified" was rendered by the choir The offering was received by the Hall brothers. After a reading of the 35th Psalm, Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, of Norwich, gave the sermon. His text was "Righteousness Exalteth a Nation." "The religious world has emphasized the love of God," he said, "but has often rather sentimentalized the stiffening out of it. The Bible, however, does not. Underlying that evident idea is a permeating certainty that God's love of man, contains a love of uprightness and fair-mindedness on man's part. That is never concealed, but is given emphasis. As a nation we are not worried about what David did or did not have, but what spines we have. The essence of our national creed in all our questions is courage and honor in individual citizens.

"Our present question is supremely our dealing with the 18th amendment and its consequences. We find our sympathies go out to the consistently honest on both extremes of this question. That wet who stresses his right of free determination as to his personal habits, but whose personal habits are good by choice is a very different factor than the one who talks as if the saloon had gone, but is trying his crooked best to get it back. Who represents the common good? Especially must we remember that the administration of the law has never yet been honestly conducted. Men of centralized power in government have prevented an attempt to enforce its provisions. Good men have been too easy with their own consciences. Where are the men who take life and responsibility seriously and do not compromise when and where majorities may be deceived or coerced into wobbling or faltering. Religion means a faith large enough to stand for something that no one else may stand for, and not stop standing when the proximate plan fails; but keeps progressing toward the light."

This address abounded in pithy phrases and personal illustrations and was followed by announcements and benediction by Rev. G. W. Clark, pastor of the church.

About 160 were at the dinner at which Rev. C. H. Ricketts asked the blessing.

The afternoon session opened with a devotional service conducted by Rev. W. J. Reynolds of Newent.

The scribe asked for historical records to be collected for the 70th birthday next year, as the record books back of the one so faithfully kept by Mrs. E. H. Hiscox and her predecessors to 1914 had been lost.

Thanks, hearty and unanimous, were given to the women of the entertaining church, the speakers and such as had ministered to the success of the day.

A response to the last month's letter of sympathy to Dr. Cady was read. Rev. W. C. Prentiss invites the conference for the second Wednesday in November to Plainfield.

A hymn was followed by prayer by D. C. Stone, of Hanover. After the anthem "Near to the Heart of God," by the choir, accompanied by organ and violin, Rev. J. B. Lee, D. D., of New London, spoke on "The Greatest Occupation of man—Worship." He took his text from Ezekiel 46:9. In brief he said: "Ezekiel was a priest's son who became a prophet. He is peculiar. He had to go as a foreign missionary and was not enthusiastic about it until he saw the condition of the exiles by the Chebar. Then he became the "restorer of the lost sense of God" and by his visions roused the life-giving sense of worship." Rev. G. W. Clark then dismissed the conference.

ANOTHER CONTINUANCE IN SIRKO AUTOMOBILE CASE

Walter Sirko, 35, of Preston, was presented in the city court Wednesday morning on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor and evading responsibility. The case was continued until next Monday, at the request of Sirko's counsel, Thomas M. Shields. This is the second continuance.

Sirko was arrested Saturday night after the machine he was driving collided with one of Belt Bros. machines on North Thames street and failed to stop after the accident.

STATION AGENT GIBBS ABLE TO LEAVE HOSPITAL

Hermon J. Gibbs, station agent at Yantic for the Central Vermont road, who suffered a fractured skull on Sept. 2 by a fall on a rail while carrying a trunk across the tracks, has so far recovered that he was able to leave the Backus hospital on Wednesday.

Other patients discharged Wednesday were: William McDonough, Watercress avenue; Mrs. Max Moskowitz and infant son, 24 Green avenue, Jewett City; John Bell, 9 Stetson street; William Kolbus, Jewett City; Mrs. John Gill, Plainfield; Mrs. Henry Nelson, 23 Edwards avenue.

Will Begin Religious Series

The first of a series of monthly religious evening services planned to carry through the fall and winter months is to be held Sunday evening at 7:30 at the First Baptist church and will have for a special feature the appearance of the Harmony Male quartette of Worcester, Mass. They will give a concert of Negro spirituals and folk songs. The pastor, Rev. P. A. Kilmister, will speak on "Not Good If Detached."

Great Britian imported 136,514,460 dozens of eggs last year.

The annual report of the Norwich chamber of commerce which is given herewith, shows the varied line of activities in the past twelve months, as indicated by the report of President Frank R. Murdy and Miss Mary Bundy, acting secretary.

"The Norwich chamber of commerce has just completed the tenth year of its present organization and I am sure that any member who will carefully study the activities of this period will come to the conclusion that a great deal of hard work has been put in in trying to accomplish many things.

"I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation, particularly to the members of the committees who have assisted in the work of this organization; also, to all others who have had a part in forwarding the work of this administration. As long as members pull together to raise the standards of our city, to develop the business of the community, to encourage the physical improvement and appearance of our city in order to make Norwich a better place in which to live and to do business, the chamber will continue to grow in the esteem of its members and also in the confidence of the public."

FRANK R. MURDY, President.

Acting Secretary's Report

Miss Bundy, acting secretary, reports the following activities which the chamber of commerce has accomplished and worked on during the past year:

Aviation Committee

The aviation committee has worked hard to select a suitable site for an airport. After all, Norwich is not the only city at the present time that is without an airport. We feel confident that during the coming year much more work and results will be obtained in this direction.

Credit Bureau

The files in the credit bureau office have shown an increase in names from 15,000 to 25,000 individual accounts. The credit bureau membership has increased during the past year from 40 to 55 members. An average of 30 to 35 calls are cleared daily in this office and the merchants who belong to this bureau are privileged with receiving reports from any bureau in the United States.

Industrial Affairs

The chamber of commerce continues to spend a great deal of time and effort endeavoring to locate new industries in Norwich. Its work will continue during the next year with a lot more vigor and it is the earnest hope of the officers and directors that something definite and successful can be accomplished in this line.

The chamber is now working on the problem of re-opening the Yantic mill, a project which would mean lots to the citizens and merchants of Norwich. As soon as the people of Norwich realize that in order to bring in new industries cooperation must be had not only in the matter of finance, but also in the matter of proper industrial space. True, it is, we are all anxious to see Norwich grow, but in order to accomplish this everybody must pull together. Boosters are our asset.

Monthly Survey

The chamber of commerce continues to submit a monthly business survey of conditions in Norwich for local information and for use in the statewide survey conducted by the state chamber of commerce. This is considered by the state chamber as one of the biggest services rendered.

Deepening Of Thames River

Much work has been put into the project of deepening the Thames river and confirmation has been received from the war department that the work will now be completed within a very short time.

A survey for a new trade school was made but it was found that conditions were such at this time that a project of this kind could not go through.

Publicity And Radio Broadcast

A programme of ten weeks on historic, industrial and scenic Norwich was put on over station WTIC, Hartford, by Secretary Richardson. This programme reached a wide area. Letters coming from all over the United States and Canada were received at the chamber office as a result of this. Requests for our booklet on Norwich, The Rose of New England, were received and over two thousand were sent out over a period of two months. These booklets were requested by almost every city in New England primarily for the use of tourists.

National Ten-Mile Run

Norwich was the headquarters of the national ten-mile run put on by the Duwell club under the direction of Frank R. Murdy, president of the chamber of commerce.

New England Secretaries Convention

Eighty-five chamber of commerce secretaries and their wives from New England cities attended the conference and banquet held at the Norwich inn. J. Franklin Babb, of the New England council, was the guest speaker. He also spoke before a joint meeting of all civic clubs at a noon luncheon held at the Wauregan hotel.

Try Norwich First Campaign

The merchants bureau of the chamber of commerce conducted a merchandising institute in a Try Norwich First campaign. A dance for all salespeople and merchants in Norwich was held in the Wauregan ballroom The object of this campaign was to instruct and advocate the buying public of Norwich to spend their money in their own home town.

Merchants Bureau

The merchants bureau has been especially active during the past year with a program of activities which included two dollar days, one suburban day, and an elaborate spring opening and fall opening. Several meetings of the membership were held during the course of the year for the discussion of matters pertaining to the welfare of mercantile interests of the city.

C. Of C. Meetings

A membership meeting of the chamber of commerce was held at the Norwich inn in June at which about 150 members were present. The principal speaker at this meeting was Aurin E. Payson, president of the American Thermos Bottle company.

The annual meeting was held September 29th, at the Wauregan hotel, with an attendance of 95. The guest speaker was P. L. Gerrety of Derby, Connecticut, chairman of the New England council.

Fresh Air Children

The chamber of commerce again made provision for entertaining fresh air children from New York. A total of 25 children were entertained this year.

The Contact Club

The Contact club has grown steadily since its organization in 1929. Its programmes have been most instructive and the club promises to be as large and as good a luncheon club as any in the city.

TOOK GASOLINE READING WITH LIGHTED MATCH

Lighting a match to secure the reading of a gasoline pump in front of Bailey's garage, No. 12 Bath street, resulted in a call to the fire department at 6:40 o'clock Wednesday evening, little damage being done from the blaze. One of the employes, it is said, wanted to find out how many gallons of gasoline had been drawn out of the pump and as it was dark used a lighted match to get the information. Shortly afterwards the pump was enveloped in flames and the department was called, putting out the blaze with three gallons of chemical. Engine No. 1 responded.

Earlier in the evening, at 6:05 o'clock, residents in the section off Fanning avenue appealed to the department to extinguish a brush fire there that was causing a nuisance because of its obnoxious odor. Several hundred feet of hose was laid and a large amount of water was directed upon the flames before they were put out. Squad A and Deputy Chief Dennis Brennan answered the alarm. The property was being burned over by residents.

150 BOY SCOUTS TO ATTEND YALE GAME

One hundred and fifty Boy Scouts and 25 leaders are expected to attend the Yale-Maryland game Saturday. According to the local headquarters the game begins at 2:30 p. m. Saturday and the gate will be open at 1 p. m. As was true last year, the scouts have been encouraged to get to the bowl shortly after 1 o'clock to get good seats. There they will eat their lunch.

Each troop is attempting to provide its own transportation. In the event that a troop needs additional cars to those they have secured they should communicate with the local scout headquarters and an effort will be made to secure the additional transportation needed.

Parents are cautioned not to expect their scouts home until 7 to 9 p. m., because of the traffic jams some cars sometimes get into on leaving the games.

Since the request for tickets carries with the obligation to make use of them, it is hoped by the leaders that every troop will make an effort to have some boys attend the game. Only grammar school boys up through the eighth grade can attend the game free of charge.

GIRL SCOUTS COUNCIL MAKES SEASON PLANS

The September meeting of the Norwich council of Girl Scouts was held in the rooms of the Woman's City club on Tuesday afternoon, the commissioner, Mrs. Marcus Leith, presiding. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved. The course for the council members and the officers' association to be given by Miss Ruth Hedlund, field secretary, in November, was described in detail and is being looked forward to with much enthusiasm by the council members. It was voted that the Girl Scouts march in the Armistice day parade.

The plans for the fall and winter months were then discussed, and included a public exhibition of Girl Scout handicraft and activities, a public court of honor at which merit badges will be awarded, and the various courses which will be offered to the members of the council. It was voted to extend to Miss Agnes Leahy, of Norwich, executive secretary of the personnel division of the Girl Scouts with headquarters at New York, a cordial invitation to come to Norwich and meet with all the local Girl Scouts. Miss Leahy was formerly connected with social service work at Connecticut college at New London. The next meeting of the council will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 27.

NEAR EAST FOUNDATION TO CONTINUE THURBER'S WORK

Nathan D. Prince, president of the Hartford Connecticut Trust company, has been appointed state chairman of Near East Foundation, the successor of Near East Relief, according to an announcement Wednesday from the Foundation headquarters.

Mr. Prince will direct a state-wide effort to raise a fund for the continuance of the work of Christopher C. Thurber, formerly of Norwich, who was Near East Relief director and died in Greece in May 1930. Mr. Thurber was a graduate of Norwich Free Academy and of Trinity college and his brilliant career in the war torn lands of the Near East was followed with closed personal interest by his many friends in Connecticut.

Near East Foundation recently was incorporated as a permanent organization to carry on educational and health enterprises which have grown out of the temporary work of Near East Relief. An appropriation of $350,000 will be spent during its first year's work and funds will be raised to continue and broaden the program.

The Foundation already has taken over some of Near East Relief's projects, notably the work which Mr. Thurber established in Greece.

MADE OUTLINE OF PLANS FOR BETTER RURAL ROADS

A plan for the backing of a bill calling for the expenditure of $5,000,000 annually for the next three years was discussed, together with the legislative program to be followed this year, at a meeting of the Connecticut Rural Roads Improvement association held Tuesday in the state capitol at Hartford.

Secretary of the State William L. Higgins of Coventry, outlined a plan that would call for the improvement of 1,000 miles of rural roads each year. It was estimated that this work would cost $5,000 a mile. This plan would roughly allow each of the 169 towns of the state $30,000 a year. This allotment would allow for six miles of improvement each year in each town.

The report of the secretary revealed that the association has 409 state members and 455 additional members connected with the state organization through affiliation with local organizations. At the conclusion of the meeting, between 10 and 15 new members joined the organization and it was announced that 25 or 30 local organizations are expected to affiliate with the state association within the next week.

The receipts of the association have been $814.50 as against disbursements of $722.89. This leaves a balance of but $91.61 to meet outstanding accounts of about $100.50. Meanwhile the expenditures are increasing, Mr. Tolles said.

To insure unified backing for whatever legislation the association chooses to back, a motion was unanimously passed voting confidence in the executive committee, the body that will handle legislative matters. The meeting adjourned early in the afternoon, subject to the call of the president.

RIFLE CLUB ARRANGES FOR OUTDOOR SHOOT

The Norwich Rifle club held an early season meeting Wednesday night at the state armory and arranged to have an outdoor shoot on Sunday, Oct. 12 at the Jewett City range.

In a practice shoot several new shooters showed promise of developing into good material for the club. Jack Lucier who is now in New London is to shoot with the Norwich club in the Mohegan Rifle league.

TAFTVILLE

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MRS. CHRIST. WOHLLEBEN

A pleasant birthday party was tendered Mrs. Christopher Wohlleben at her home in Occum Tuesday evening. Cards were enjoyed and refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by Mrs. John Wohlleben and Mrs. Louis Wohlleben. The centerpiece on the table was a birthday cake with 75 candles. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wohlleben, and son, Walter, William Wohlleben, Fred Wohlleben, Mr. and Mrs. John Wohlleben and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wohlleben.

It was voted at a meeting of members of the Taftville Congregational church Monday evening in the church parlors that the annual fair of the church will be held in December. The chairman of the committee to have charge of arrangements will be headed by Allan Bogle, who presided at the meeting and Rev William Penner, the pastor, was appointed treasurer, with Edwin Heap in charge of the tickets. Clayton Sharples and Albert Mathewson were named a committee to confer with a committee of the men's league of the church relative to that organization taking charge of the minstrel show. The Ladies' Aid society are to have charge of the fancy work and food sale and the Sunday school in charge of the aprons, candy and ice cream booth. The fair will run for three nights and will include a play, minstrel show and dance. Miss Dorothy Hunt acted as secretary of the meeting.

Silas Deslandes, who is stationed at Hampton Roads, Virginia, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amable Deslandes of Hunters avenue.

Earle M. Woods of North Third avenue was a visitor in Hartford Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hormadas Garry of Pratt avenue and Mrs. Wilfred E. Fontaine and daughters, Bernadette and Loyola of Merchants avenue have returned from a visit with relatives in Springfield.

Lefty Dugas, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has arrived at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Azarie Dugas of Providence street.

STATE POLICE DIRECTED TRAFFIC AT RALLY

A squad of state policemen from the Groton barracks was on duty Wednesday to direct traffic at the republican rally at Gales Ferry.

Through the courtesy of Superintendent Hurley it was arranged to have a state police car take Congressman John H. MacLafferty to Springfield as the length of time consumed by the speaking programme would have caused him to miss the bus for that city.

SKULL WAS FRACTURED WORKING AT MANSFIELD

James A. Duncan, formerly of Norwich Town, is resting as comfortably as can be expected in St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, where he is a patient suffering from a fractured skull. He was badly hurt at his work in Mansfield.

HOOVER RECEIVES ROUSING RECEPTION IN CLEVELAND

The President and Mrs. Hoover Rode in an Open Car Down Crowd-Lined Streets With a Mounted Military Escort Leading the Procession—Ticker Tape Fluttered, 21 Guns Boomed and Throngs Applauded as the President Passed Along—Last Night President Hoover Discussed Before the American Bankers' Association the Business Problems of the Country

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2—(AP)—In an atmosphere reminiscent of his 1928 campaign days, President Hoover came to Cleveland today to discuss before the American Bankers association tonight the business problems of the nation

Down crowd-lined streets with a mounted military escort leading the procession, the President and Mrs. Hoover rode in an open car. Ticker tape fluttered from windows, draping over their automobile, the presidential salute of 21 guns boomed and many applauded as the president passed slowly along. Smilingly he lifted his silk hat time after time, and Mrs. Hoover, wearing a large corsage bouquet, waved her handkerchief.

Shortly after his arrival, the president was the guest of 250 bankers and business men at an informal luncheon at which no speeches were made, while the first lady was entertained by the Women's City club.

On the right of the president at the luncheon sat James R. Garfield, former secretary of the interior and son of the former president, and to Mr. Hoover's left sat Joseph R. Nutt, Cleveland banker and treasurer of the republican national committee.

About the president also were grouped Postmaster General Brown, Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war and a member of the president's law enforcement commission; John G. Lonsdale, out-going president of the American Bankers association; Harris Creech, president of the Cleveland Trust company; Samuel Mather, Cleveland philanthropist, and Mayor John D. Marshall.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Hoover again rejoined the president, and together they were taken on an automobile tour of the city. They dined quietly with a few friends before going to the auditorium for the address.

Arriving in this city just as business houses were releasing their employes for lunch, the president found Euclid avenue a jostling lane of people peering down the street as his procession drew near.

Along the same route Abraham Lincoln had paraded in 1861 as he went to Washington for his inauguration as president. Since that time fifteen others who have occupied the white house have visited Cleveland, but this was the first welcome extended a chief executive since Woodrow Wilson spoke here in 1916 in defense of his policy of neutrality in the World war.

Passing from the station into the business section, the applause steadily became greater, and as the procession reached Public square a mass of people had jammed every inch of room awaiting the coming of the president.

To reach the capital early tomorrow so that he would have three days there before departing Sunday night for Boston and Kings Mountain, in the south, Mr. Hoover arranged for his special train to leave immediately after the conclusion of his address.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

PUBLIC AUDITORIUM, CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—(AP)—President Hoover tonight told the American Bankers' association that although the current business depression is world-wide, America must go forward independently to recovery and maintain its standards of living.

He replied directly to political opponents "who resent the notion that things will never get better and who wish to enjoy our temporary misery."

"To recount to these persons," he said, "the progress of cooperation between the people and the government in amelioration of this situation, or to mention that we are suffering less than other countries, or that savings are piling up in the banks, or that our people are paying off installment purchases, that abundant capital is now pressing for new ventures and employment, only inspires the unkind retort that we should fix our gaze upon the unhappy features of the decline."

The president, making his only major address of recent months just a few weeks before the fall elections, spoke in the large auditorium in which in 1924 Calvin Coolidge was nominated for the presidency by the republican national convention.

His audience was composed largely of bankers and their wives, drawn from all parts of the nation for the 56th annual convention of the association, who had been given preference in the admission tickets to the auditorium seating more than 10,000 persons. Amplifiers however, carried the address to a supplementary auditorium behind the stage, where a second gathering heard the address, in addition to those who listened in on the national radio hookups.

Retorting to a suggestion in bankers' discussion that American standards of living be lowered, Mr. Hoover said, "To that I emphatically disagree."

"I do not believe it represents the views of this association," he added. "Not only do I not accept such a theory, but on the contrary, the whole purpose and ideal of this system which is distinctive of our whole country, is to increase the standard of living by the adoption and the conveniently widening diffusion of invention and discovery amongst the whole of our people.

"Any retreat from our American philosophy of constantly increasing standards of living becomes a retreat into perpetual unemployment and the acceptance of a cesspool of poverty for some large part of our people."

The auditorium was crowded almost to capacity an hour before the president ascended the platform.

The United States Navy band played for an hour before the president arrived, when practically every seat in the huge hall was occupied.

The entrance of the chief executive and his wife was the signal for loud handclapping. The band played "Hail to the Chief," and after being presented by John G. Lonsdale, of St. Louis, retiring president of the bankers' association, the audience applauded for more than a minute.

The president began his address in a rapid but firm tone and a little later slowed down the speed of his delivery. The first applause greeted his declaration that "No one can occupy the high office of president and conceivably be other than completely confident of the future of the United States."

HOW CLEVELAND POLICE HANDLED COMMUNISTS

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—(AP)—A parade of communists, estimated by police to number 600, was broken up here tonight when it attempted to break away from a police escort and head for Public hall, where President Hoover was addressing the annual convention of the American Bankers' association.

Mounted and motorcycle officers threw tear gas bombs into the ranks of the demonstrators and policemen used their clubs before the short-lived demonstration was broken up.

James Kehoe, a fireman on traffic duty, was slugged and taken to a hospital, possibly in serious condition. Several other persons were reported victims of clubs or fists, but none was believed badly hurt. Three women were knocked down by the rush. One youth was arrested.

The disturbance began after the parade had been led past the corner of East Sixth street and St. Clair avenue N. E., where the auditorium is situated. When the police escort had marshaled the demonstrators east on St. Clair nearly to East 12th street, the marchers moved as if to bolt and return to the hall, police said.

Mounted officers blocked their path and as the demonstrators pressed against their line, they wielded clubs and tossed tear gas bombs. Other officers rode motorcycles and horses into the marchers' ranks.

The paraders quickly scattered, breaking windows as they went. Banners which they had carried and dropped as the milling started were reclaimed and held aloft by the scattered demonstrators. They did not attempt to form into line again.

Many of the banners denounced Hoover and capitalism.

As they marched along with their banners they sang "The Internationale," "Madamoiselle From Armentiers" and "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

After the marchers were dispersed they returned to Public square, where the line of march formed and listened to impromptu orations. Police said the demonstration was organized several days ago and they were prepared for it.

The president delivered his address without being aware of the demonstration. He left the auditorium by a side entrance by prearrangement, and with his party boarded the special train which was parked on a siding adjacent to Public hall.

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY RETURNING TO WASHINGTON

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—(AP)—President Hoover and his party left for Washington at 9:40 p. m. tonight.

Two thousand persons were at the sides of the president's train as it puffed away from the side track at Public hall. They cheered lustily as the President and Mrs. Hoover appeared on the platform to wave a friendly farewell.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS RETURN FROM PILGRIMAGE TO FRANCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The 1930 pilgrimage of 3,671 gold star mothers to the graves of their sons in France ended today with the return of the last contingent of 95 mothers to American shores

Comforted by their visit to the cemeteries where their boys are buried, and wistfully grateful for the opportunity, the grey-haired women filed silently down the gangplank of the liner Republic at her Hoboken pier and scattered to homes from New Hampshire to Alaska. The pilgrimage will be resumed next spring.

Each of the mothers carried two mementoes of her trip—an American flag from her son's grave and a roll of film picturing her standing beside the cross at its head. The film was taken at the government's expense and presented to each mother.

"There wasn't a thing left undone which could have made us happier or more comfortable," said Mrs. Lydia Shampine of Gouverneur, N. Y. "All we had to do was be ready on time. The cemeteries were beautiful—so wonderfully designed and cared for. I can be happy now."

NAVAL AVIATOR KILLED WHEN AIRPLANE FELL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The navy was informed today that Lieutenant William A. Watson was killed when his airplane fell near Cape Charles, Va., this afternoon and that Chief Aviation Pilot Marion J. Simpson apparently escaped serious injuries by jumping with a parachute.

Watson's home was at Savannah, Tenn. Simpson enlisted from Udall, Kansas, in 1919. His wife lives in Pensacola, Fla.

The information was received in a message from the commander of the aircraft squadron scouting fleet.

BANK MESSENGER HELD UP IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Two armed bandits held up Lucien Primeau, messenger of the Banque Canadienne Nationale, and robbed him of $7,400 today. An hour after the hold-up the police arrested three suspects. The money was not recovered.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

LONDON, Oct. 2—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi's 61st birthday was celebrated by his British admirers and followers at a dinner in a London restaurant tonight.

BOMBAY, Oct. 2—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi, 61 years old today, spent his birthday in the cell at Yeroda prison, Poona, where he has been held "at his majesty's pleasure" since his arrest while leading the civil disobedience movement last spring.

GENEVA, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Efforts to amend the league of nations covenant in a form that would outlaw all war, thus making it harmonize with the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact, failed tonight in the league assembly's judicial sub-committee by a vote of ten to two.

WALLSALL, STAFFORDSHIRE, Eng., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Deep in the earth at the Grove colliery near here, where 14 men met their death last night, mine inspectors today vainly sought the cause of an explosion which dumped tons of debris into the busy galleries, a mile and a half from the bottom of the shaft.

OFFICERS OF CONNECTICUT LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

NEW LONDON, Oct. 2.— (AP) — Martha S. Bartlett, of Meriden, was elected president today of the Connecticut Library association at its annual meeting

Other officers elected: Vice presidents, Margaret S. Wilson, Norwalk; Walter E. Godard, Stratford; W. Bowen Church, Meriden; Judge Alfred Coit, New London, and Annie Slossan Trumbull, Hartford; secretary, J. Ethel Wooster, Bridgeport; treasurer, Katherine W. Sanford, Torrington; executive board, Orlando C Davis, Bridgeport, and Christian N. Due, Hartford.

The subject of the convention, which was attended by about 150 delegates, was "know your work and your workers." The speakers included Mrs. Elsie Williams Chandler, Hartford; Edna Potter, New London; Nataly E. Newton, Middletown; Orlando C. Davis, P. Roy Harwood, New London, Dr. Katharine Blunt, president of Connecticut college; Emily Coates, Hartford, and Mrs. E. W. Gilbert, Meriden. C. L. Wooding, of Bristol, presided.

LIPTON'S CHALLENGER HAS SAILED FOR HOME

BRISTOL, R. I., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth unsuccessful challenger for the America's cup, set sail this evening for the long voyage home.

Only one member of her original crew remained with the vanquished challenger, but there were five of the crew of Enterprise, the successful defender, who will help her over the Atlantic.

The sole member of Shamrock's original crew was Captain William Paul, who acted as navigator in the international contest. Of his crew of eleven, five served aboard Enterprise and one aboard Weetamoe, one of the unsuccessful aspirants for cup defense honors. It had been known for some time that the green sloop's own crew did not relish a return passage aboard her.

Captain Ned Heard, who commanded the challenger in the cup races, and most of his crew left for England more comfortably on a steamer a week ago.

TESTIMONY IN ADAMO-CHIARELLO MURDER TRIAL

TORRINGTON, Oct. 2—(AP)—Eight witnesses were called to testify today in Litchfield superior court as the state began presentation of its evidence in the trial of Domenico Chiarello and Theodoro Adamo, charged with first degree murder in the slaying of Antonio Russo.

The testimony of one of the state's most important witnesses, Captain Nicolas Calabrese, who was in charge of the investigation into the slaying, had not been completed when Judge Frank P. McEvoy adjourned court until next Wednesday morning.

THREE PERSONS KILLED BY TORNADO IN COLORADO

PUEBLO, Colo., Oct. 2—(AP)—Three persons were killed, one is missing and five were injured by a freak tornado which swept a narrow path near Fowler, 30 miles east of here, late today. The storm area was about a quarter of a mile wide. Where the tornado came to earth and where it ended its destructive course was not known.

MAN KILLED, FOUR PERSONS INJURED BY ERIE TRAIN

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.— (AP)— Erie railroad officials said tonight that one man was killed and four other persons, including two women, slightly injured in a collision between an Erie passenger train and a motorized hand car at the Manuet crossing junction, two miles north of Spring Valley, N. Y.

THREE YEAR SENTENCE FOR ISSUING FRAUDULENT CHECK

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2—(AP)—Felix Welgoricki, of New Haven, today was sentenced to from one to three years in prison when he pleaded guilty to issuing fraudulent checks. He admitted writing a check for $70 last May which he signed with the name John J. Mahoney.

OFFERS OF MEDIATION IN THE TEXTILE STRIKE

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Gov. John Garland Pollard today offered to appoint a committee of mediation to act in the Danville strike if 4,000 textile workers did not return to their work in the Dan River and Riverside mills Monday morning.

DECREASE IN LOANS TO BROKERS AND DEALERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Loans to brokers and dealers held by the New York Federal Reserve member banks for the week ending Oct 1 were announced by the federal reserve board today as $3,063,000,000, representing a decrease of $159,000,000 as compared with the preceding week.

AUGUSTINE LONERGAN RENOMINATED FOR CONGRESS

HARTFORD, Oct. 2—(AP)—Augustine Lonergan, of Hartford, three-times elected congressman from the first district, was nominated unanimously for that office by the democratic district convention held here today.

Tammany Office Holders Delinquent

Have Not Complied With Orders of Mayor Walker to Testify in Ewald Case—Time Extended

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Six Tammany district leaders who hold city positions failed to appear today in obedience to Mayor Walker's edict of yesterday that they must withdraw within 24 hours their earlier refusals to waive immunity before the extraordinary grand jury investigating office-buying charges against former Magistrate George F. Ewald.

The mayor announced he had given them an extension of time of 24 hours because of the Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur.

None of the six appeared today before Special Prosecutor Todd, in charge of the grand jury's investigation.

Mayor Walker hadn't heard from them either, he said.

"I agreed to the extension," he explained, "because of the Jewish holiday and because of the fact that several of the leaders had asked to be allowed to communicate with their attorneys before giving their answers."

Only one of the six Tammany leaders is known to be Jewish, but it was presumed some of the attorneys they wished to consult could not be reached because of the holiday.

The mayor insisted, however, the extension did not modify his attitude that the leaders must agree to testify, or relinquish their jobs.

The mayor's edict, issued yesterday to a gathering of the district leaders, was in conformity with a request from Governor Roosevelt that the recalcitrant witnesses be admonished to return and offer their testimony to the grand jury.

Seventeen Tammany district leaders, including Martin J. Healy, who has been indicted with Ewald on the office-buying charges, have refused to sign waivers of immunity. John F. Curry, head of Tammany hall, declared he was "insulted" by a request to sign a waiver. Mayor Walker was asked today whether any suggestion had been made to Curry to reconsider his refusal.

"Why," His Honor answered, "the last time I saw Mr. Curry he looked very well. There is going to be reciprocity between Mr. Curry and me and I am going to suggest as little to him as he does to me, and that's very little."

TWO MEN KILLED IN ATTACK ON A GANGSTERS' SHACK

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2—(AP)—Two men, one a reputed leader in the Cuckoo gang of St. Louis, were killed and at least two more were wounded today in a dawn machine gun attack on a shack and still operated by Cuckoo gangsters near Valmeyer, Ill., about 28 miles south of St. Louis on the Illinois side of the Mississippi river.

Police view the attack as accomplishment of a threat by Shelton gangsters from East St. Louis that they would "make it hot" for St. Louis gangsters and bootleggers found operating on the Illinois side. The Shelton gang attracted wide attention several years ago when they warred with the gang of Charlie Birger, executed racketeer, for control of liquor traffic in southern Illinois.

The dead were Peter McTigue, 22, notorious Cuckoo gangster, and William E. Boody, 34, formerly business agent of the East St. Louis Plumbers' union. Those wounded are Sam Therina, 24, twice-convicted bootlegger, and Joe Moceri, 28. All are from St. Louis.

CONTROVERSY OVER THE BIRTHPLACE OF COLUMBUS

GENOA, Italy, Oct. 2—(AP)—An avalanche of indignation has swept over this citadel of Columbus, stirred by the recent statement of the Peruvian Professor Luis Ulloa that the navigator was a Catalonian Corsair, was not born in Genoa, and accompanied Danish corsairs to America years before 1492, via Iceland, Greenland and Labrador.

Genoa is pointing the heavy guns of her battery of documents, historical records and references at Professor Ulloa, and demanding that he come to Genoa himself to search out the truth. This documentary arsenal will be thrown open to public inspection October 12, anniversary of the discovery of America.

Marquis Giuseppe Pessagno, Italy's foremost Columbian expert and director of the archives of Genoa, has charge of Genoa's defending forces.

KIDNAPER OF YOUNG GIRL FOUND TO BE INSANE

VALPARAISO, Ind., Oct. 2—(AP)—Claude Dilliner, 37, who said he kidnaped ten-year old Betty Jane Foster because he loved her, today was committed to the criminal insane hospital in the state prison for an indefinite period. Dilliner took the child from the home of her father, Ernest Foster, where he was employed as a farm hand, and fled with her to Elkhorn, Wis., where he was captured. The child was unharmed.

Three physicians reported to Judge Harry Crumpacker that Dilliner was a victim of arrested mental development.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES ABOARD THE LEVIATHAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—(AP)—A wireless message fre mthe S. S. Leviathan today said memorial exercises were held aboard the ship at the spot where the troopship Ticonderoga was sunk by a German submarine Sept. 28, 1928, with a loss of 216 lives.

As the Leviathan neared the tragedy's scene, John Michael, a passenger and survivor of the disaster, cast a wreath upon the waters which twelve years ago closed over the grave of J. J. Madison, commander of the Ticonderoga, who lost a leg in the disaster and died later in a Brooklyn hospital.

THREE FATALITIES IN AN AIRPLANE ACCIDENT

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Three men were killed late today when an airplane in which they had taken off from the Cumberland airport, nine miles west of here, crashed into a field

The dead were William Skelly, pilot, who was observing his 28th birthday; Fred Lease, 27, and Glendon Huc, 24.

Might Place Havana Under Martial Law

President Machado Asks Congress to Suspend Constitutional Guarantees Pending Election

HAVANA, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Reports from the presidential palace late this afternoon said that President Machado had sent a message to congress asking suspension of constitutional guarantees for the city of Havana and suburbs until after the elections, scheduled for November.

If the request [illegible] approved at the special session [illegible] called for tomorrow, a [illegible] similar to martial law will [illegible] Havana. Such approval [illegible] by observers.

The [illegible] understood to have been [illegible] ready for delivery since [illegible] noon, stated specifically th[illegible] circumstances warrant, [illegible]stitution should be suspended [illegible] parts of Cuba.

[illegible] action would prevent the holding of elections in the territory under martial law.

A $25,000,000 SEED LOAN FUND FOR FARMERS FORECAST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2— (AP) —A farmers' seed loan fund of perhaps $25,000,000 was forecast in agricultural circles today as a step toward alleviating drought distress.

Reports that the Texas delegation in congress would initiate such legislation with a proviso that $5,000,000 of the fund be allotted their state followed closely an announcement by S. L. Hoffman, head of the federal seed loan office, that his funds had been completely wiped out under a barrage of applications that was running high into the hundreds daily.

Texas was among numerous states which did not share in the unexpected balance of the $6,000,000 appropriated by congress last March to relieve distress in 15 states caused by storms, floods and drought. Hoffman had only $550,000 left and that was distributed among 1,732 applicants for loans in Alabama, Oklahoma, Virginia and Missouri.

It was necessary, he explained to limit the disbursements to states named among the 15 designated by congress and since the loans could be made only for crops of 1930 they were made in those states which had the best opportunity to produce pasture crops by November and December. The money will be used to purchase seed and fertilizer for fall and winter pasture.

YOUTHFUL FLIER FORCED TO RETURN TO AMARILLO

AMARILLO, Tex., Oct. 2—(AP)—Robert Buck, 16-year-old flier, experienced more difficulty toda yin his effort to better Eddie Schneider's junior transcontinental speed record, and was forced to return to Amarillo for his second night, after leaving earlier for Albuquerque, N. M.

Leaving the field here at 6:45 a. m. (C. S. T.) he was forced down at Glenrio, N. M., 70 miles west of here, by motor trouble. A mechanic, sent from here, found it necessary to install a new cylinder in Buck's motor.

The flier calculated that he was about one hour up on Schneider, based on the same distance covered and continued confident of setting a new record for the trip.

He flew to Amarillo from Wichita, Kans., yesterday, retarded by strong headwinds and storm clouds. He had hoped to fly to Albuquerque last night.

NAVAL STATION SHIP CALLS FOR ASSISTANCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The navy department late today dispatched the U. S. S. Concord to a point 500 miles southeast of Charleston, South Carolina, to meet the U. S. S. Montcalm, the naval station ship at Guantanamo, Cuba, which had messaged for assistance.

The Montcalm, a vessel of light tonnage, was proceeding from Guantanamo to Norfolk, Va., when it struck heavy seas and radioed for a convoy. The message was picked up by the Tropical Radio station at Miami, Fla., and relayed to the navy department.

The department immediately ordered the Concord to its aid. The Concord is the flagship of the destroyer squadrons of the scouting fleet, and was en route from Newport, R. I., to Charleston with the squadrons.

Navy department officials said the Montcalm was in no immediate danger.

RORABACK REPLIES TO DEMOCRATIC ATTACK

HARTFORD, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The battle of statements between the major parties in Connecticut got started today with an announcement from democratic state headquarters in New Haven attacking the speech of Chairman J. Henry Roraback of the republican state central committee at a republican outing Wednesday at Red Top. Before the day was over, Mr. Roraback made a counter statement.

The democratic statement took Mr. Roraback to task for criticising the democratic choice of a Yale professor as the gubernatorial nominee when a few years ago, the republican candidate was Hiram Bingham, a former member of the Yale faculty.

Shown the democratic statement, Mr. Roraback said:

"If anyone fails to see any difference in the public service rendered by Lieut. Col. Bingham and Prof. Cross, we have no answer."

OBITUARY

Judge Frank S. Dietrich

BOISE, Idaho, Oct. 2.—(AP)— Judge Frank S. Dietrich of the United States circuit court of appeals at San Francisco died suddenly here today of heart disease as he was starting on an automobile drive to San Francisco. He had been in Boise for several days and last night attended a wedding.

Judge Dietrich, who had spent most of the latter half of his 67 years of life in Idaho, frequently had been mentioned in connection with an appointment to the supreme court of the United States.

His death drew messages of regret from Idaho bar and court circles, from the governor of the state, from Senator William E. Borah and from prominent figures in many parts of the country.

FIVE KILLED IN COLLAPSE OF TENEMENT HOUSE IN N. Y.

Twelve Occupants Were Buried in Their Sleep—The Old Brick Walls of a Greenwich Village House Had Been Weakened By Adjacent Excavations—The Walls Had Sagged So That Passing Trucks Caused Ominous Vibrations in the house

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The old brick walls of a Greenwich Village tenement groaned and collapsed today, burying the 12 occupants and killing five of them in their sleep.

The foundations of the house, on Greenwich avenue opposite Jefferson Market court, had been weakened for years by adjacent excavations, and wreckers have been demolishing four adjoining buildings, one of which once housed the saloon of Luke O'Connor, where John Mansefield, poet laureate of England, scrubbed the floors when he was 17.

All of the officers of the wrecking company which tore down the four houses were ordered arrested by District Attorney Crain, who blamed them for failing to shore up sufficiently the sagging walls of the neighboring structure.

Two of the dead were women, Mrs. Victorine Courtade, 48, owner of the building and proprietor of a coffee shop on the first floor, and her daughter, Marguerite, 27. The others were Carlo Tornaghi, 20; Frank Bourdon, and an unidentified man. Tornaghi arrived from France yesterday.

The rest were injured, two critically. A 13th tenant, Baptiste Leabastide, spent the night with friends and came home to find police and firemen digging the bodies of his fellow lodgers out of the ruins.

The Courtade tenement had been a home for men and women from France and Belgium, drawn together by their common knowledge of the French language and by the flavor of the French coffee which Mrs. Courtade dispensed.

Tenants who escaped serious injury told the district attorney that they could not keep their hands from shaking during the last few days as they lifted their cups in the landlady's coffee shop. Passing trucks set up ominous vibrations in the house, they said.

Mrs. Marie Sargousse, 70, mother of Mrs. Courtade, was the only one awake when the house rumbled and caved slowly into its own cellar. Lying on a hospital bed with a possible skull fracture and internal injuries, Mrs. Sargousse told police she had been dressing in her room on the fourth floor when the crash came. All the others had been in bed, she said.

In the next building Anthony Campenosi lay awake in bed, staring idly across the narrow alley. His startled eyes saw the roof of the Courtade building sway and plunge into a cloud of dust.

"I was looking across the alley," he told police, "when suddenly I heard a rumbling sound coming from the tenement. Then slowly the roof of the building seemed to move toward the east in the direction where the buildings had been torn down and in a moment the entire house was falling."

Possible internal injuries to Mrs. Sargousse and a lodger, George Dado, 26, caused their removal to a hospital, where physicians said their condition was critical

MATTERS BEFORE BRITISH IMPERIAL CONFERENCE

LONDON, Oct. 2—(AP)—The imperial conference of the British empire swinging into its stride, today debated behind closed doors constitutional questions affecting the welfare of 450,000,000 persons.

Creation of an empire tribunal of appeal, about which the Irish Free State delegation apparently is greatly concerned, was one of the important matters coming up.

Patrick McGilligan, Free State minister of foreign affairs and chief delegate at the conference, left his delegation's stand somewhat ambiguous in a speech at the opening session yesterday.

"For us, the recognition of our position as a free and sovereign state comes before all other considerations," he said. He objected that while certain elements of the old system of imperial control were maintained, even though it was only in form, the will to cooperate was correspondingly weakened."

This statement recalled the fact that many Irishmen, even those warmly approving the imperial connection of the Free State, resent the ascendancy of the empire's supreme legal authority of the privy council of England through its judicial committee.

Mr. McGilligan said further, "We most earnestly urge upon the conference the need for removing finally those last obstacles.

NORTHCOTT EXECUTED FOR MURDER OF THREE SMALL BOYS

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Gordon Stewart Northcott, 23, chicken rancher of Wineville, Cal., was hanged here today for the murder of three young boys after he had left a written confession of his crime and faked a suicide attempt.

Northcott, led blindfolded to the gallows, collapsed as he stumbled up the thirteen steps to the scaffold platform.

Guards held him until the trap was sprung at 10:19 a. m., just as the Rev. Larry Newgent, Los Angeles evangelist, was intoning verses of consolation from the fourteenth chapter of St. John.

"Don't. Don't." Northcott cried, and fell through the little door to the beyond he had averred he did not fear. He died of strangulation twelve minutes later while 140 witnesses watched in silence. One man fainted

NOMINEE TUTTLE REPLIES TO GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—(AP)—Charles H. Tuttle, republican nominee for governor, today answered the question asked him by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt as to whether he would sign, if elected, a state prohibition enforcement act. The answer was "No."

He gave three reasons: First, that the peace officers of the state "are already under the duty of sustaining the national prohibition law with as much vigor as they would any state law. I would hold them to that responsibility."

Second, that the state already has a public nuisance act which "furnishes immediate and effective means of dealing x x x with resorts where crime and vice breed upon the illicit sale of liquor. x x x If experience demonstrates that this law should be strengthened in order to fulfill its purposes more effectively, I would favor such strengthening."

Third, that the principle of home rule could be etended to counties, cities, villages and towns, giving them "full power within their own borders to use their local courts and police in the enforcement of prohibition."

"I am in accord with that principle," he said, "and believe such legislation should be immediately enacted."

Mr. Tuttle asserted that the governor's own stand on the question, as given in his letter of Sept. 11 to Senator Robert Wagner, contradicts the platform adopted by the democratic state convention at Albany last Monday.

"The people," Mr. Tuttle said, "are entitled to know on which he stands, in order that they may judge whether the security which he proposes against the return of the saloon system is adequate or merely fanciful."

GANGSTER IN DISGUISE GAVE ASSUMED NAME

CHICAGO, Oct. 2—(AP)—The "public" scored two victories against its "enemies" in the war on racketeers and hoodlums today.

James "Fur" Sammons, one of the major gangsters classed as "public enemies," was arrested on a vagrancy warrant as he appeared in a courtroom disguised and giving an assumed name.

Danny Stanton, another "enemy" who was arrested just as the recent drive started, was formally charged with the slaying of Jack Zuta and sent to the county jail to be held without bail until Oct. 14.

Zuta was shot down in a Delafield, Wis., resort, and Wisconsin authorities had sent wor dthey would have extradition papers ready Oct. 14. Stanton was implicated in the Zuta slaying when ballistics experts reported markings on his gun corresponded with those on bullets taken from Zuta's body.

The arrest of Sammons, whose criminal record started in 1900, was the eighth seizure of "public enemies" on vagrancy warrants. He was nabbed as he appeared to answer charges growing out of an automobile accident. He wore large dark colored glasses and gave the name "John Nolan."

FOUR HI-JACKERS HELD FOR BREAKING AND ENTERING

HARTFORD Oct. 2.—(AP)—Four alleged hi-jackers, Carmello Palumbo, 27, East Hartford, and Antonio Margaraci, 37; Rafael Turburici, 48, and Vincenzo Donvisito, 42, all of Waterbury, were under arrest here today on charges of breaking and entering.

They were arrested early yesterday following the discovery that padlocks had been forced on the doors of three garages and a barn. Police believe the men were in search of liquor, but broke into the wrong places.

Their cases were continued until October 9 pending further investigation. Bond was fixed at $5000 each.

SUSPENSION OF ORGANZED SHORT SELLING ADVOCATED

CHICAGO, Oct. 2—(AP)—A temporary suspension of organized short selling on the New York Stock exchange to determine whether gamblers who play the market as a game are responsible for unwarranted business pessimism was advocated today by Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago attorney and economic expert.

Mr. Levinson also advocated appointment of five associate governors of the New York exchange to investigate rumors and forecasts and ascertain whether they have foundation for the benefit of the public.

INCORPORATORS OF NEW HOSPITAL ADOPT NAME

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 2—The name Windham Community Memorial hospital for the new institution which is to be built here with the proceeds of the $500,000 campaign this fall, has been formally adopted by the incorporators of St. Joseph's Hospital, Inc., on recommendation of the trustees. The incorporators agreed that as the new hospital will not occupy buildings owned by the Catholic church, will not be operated by the Sisters of Charity, and will be like the present hospital, a non sectarian institution managed and controlled by a non-sectarian board of directors, the new name would more aptly describe the management, character and service. The new name will not become effective until the new hospital is opened to receive patients. A study of the records of St. Joseph's hospital show a demand for service much greater than the facilities were normally intended to meet. In the single operating room, 667 operations were performed last year and 162 babies were born in the small maternity department. During the year ended June 30, the hospital cared for 1,142 patients and gave 13,385 days of service.

In an unique rotation of services and preachers an exchange of ministers of the Episcopal, Methodist, Baptist and Congregational churches is to be effected beginning next Sunday. On that day Rev. W. D. Hamilton of the Methodist church will preach at St. Paul's Episcopal church. November 2, Rev. David W. Lovett of the Baptist church will preach in the Methodist church. Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock of the Congregational church will preach in the Baptist church December 7 and Rev. Frederick C. Williams of the Episcopal church will preach in the Congregational church January 4. All Sundays in the schedule are the first Sundays of each month. There will also be an interchange of choral singing.

Joseph Earle, who had been assistant to the late George W. Williams for the past five years as janitor at the Natchaug grammar school, was appointed janitor at a special meeting of the town school committee held this forenoon. Dr. F. E. Guild presided and there were seven members present. The board named Fred Dumaine of 62 Center street as assistant janitor. Robert E. Casey of Turner street was chosen truant officer to replace John A. McKenna, resigned. The salaries for janitors of the town schools were fixed by the board. There were 29 applications on file for the position of Natchaug school janitor.

OBITUARY

John J. Sullivan

John J. Sullivan, 50, of 12 Center street, Hartford, died in St. Francis' hospital there this morning of pneumonia. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Julia Danahey Sullivan; three daughters, Alice, Mary and Irene; two sons, Francis and John, all of this city; two sisters, Mrs. Annie Merchant and Catherine Sullivan of this city; one brother, Daniel Sullivan, also of this city; and a niece, Miss Mildred Merchant of this city.

Mrs. Ethel Tourtellotte of Putnam was inspecting officer at the regular meeting of Francis S. Long Woman's Relief Corps, No. 28, held in the G. A. R. rooms Wednesday evening. Mrs. Catherine Higgins and Mrs. Gladys Magnus, newly installed conductor and assistant, presented Mrs. Tourtellotte to the corps. The president, Mrs. Marjorie Duggan, presented the inspector with a gift at the conclusion of the work. Reports were given by Mrs. Fannie Lamb of the auditing committee; Mrs. May Russ, ways and means committee; Mrs. Champlin, relief committee; Mrs. Helen French, secretary. Mrs. Fannie Lamb was awarded the mystery package.

Willimantic lodge, No. 131, B. P. O. Elks, endorsed fitting eulogies delivered at the bi-monthly meeting Wednesday night on Dr. Robert C. White, a charter member and Albert E. Greene, by James P. Mustard and Past Exalted Ruler P. D. Donahue, respectively.

The lodge has plans well underway for a ladies' night to be held at the home on Pleasant street next Tuesday evening. Tom Clyde Overholt and committee are preparing a special entertainment and refreshments. There will also be dancing.

The executive committee of the service relations council of the post office has been empowered to arrange for a banquet to be held in connection with the annual meeting of the council.

FUNERAL

Zize Federman

The funeral of Zize Federman was held today in New York city, the remains being removed there this forenoon from this city. Arrangements were in charge of Killourey Brothers.

Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, one of the principal Hebrew holidays, was observed here today with largely attended services at the Bank street synagogue. Business houses and manufacturing plants operated by Jewish persons were closed for the day including the plants of the Willimantic Silk, Inc., and the Kobe Silk.

An interesting book, Memorials and Pilgrimages in the Mohegan Country, by Arthur L. Peale, of Norwich, has been presented to the Willimantic Public library by James Haggerty, past state commander of the G. A. R. and present vice-president of the 18th Connecticut Volunteers' association.

Painters are at work on the woodwork of the H. C. Murray company block at Main and Church streets. Included in the work was the removal of the 26 foot flag pole that has surmounted the southeast corner of the block for the past quarter century. The pole was removed in three sections.

Several Rotarians and their wives left today to attend the New England Rotary conclave at Swampscott, Mass., to remain for the balance of the week.

James A. Duncan, formerly of Norwich Town, is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital with a fracture of the skull sustained while at his work in Mansfield. He was resting quite comfortably today.

Since the beginning of the year, there have been 20 births, 19 marriages and 32 deaths. During the same period of 1929, there were: 31 births, 19 marriages and 21 deaths, there being eleven more deaths so far this year than during the same period last year.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jones, Mrs. W. E. Adams, Mrs. Arthur H. Chapman, Mrs. Harold Clark, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Riley, Mrs. C. H. Norton, Mrs. Clara M. Gillette, Mrs. Robert S. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stevens, Mrs. A. H. McNeal, Miss Victoria Hilding, Mrs. Robert E. Greene, Mrs. M. J. Cornwell, Mrs. A. T. Van Cleve and Misses Florence Dawley and Addie M. Wickwire, members of Wooster Star chapter No. 94 O. E. S., attended the birthday party of the O. E. S. chapter of Montville Wednesday evening. Cars for the trip were furnished by J. M. Riley, Robert E. Green, E. E. Stevens and Mrs. C. H. Norton.

Dr. Frank D. Coles of Harland road, Norwich, and Chauncey E. McFarlane of Willimantic were recent visitors here.

Fire Near Norwich Reservoir

A piece of brush and grass land about a half mile square was burned over Sunday and Monday a short distance west of the Norwich Deep River reservoir in the eastern end of town. The blaze was discovered Sunday afternoon by the city's caretaker at the reservoir who notified District Fire Warden Riley here. A force of eight men with hand forest fire pumps in charge of Warden Riley was at work all afternoon fighting the fast spreading flames. It was necessary to carry water nearly a half mile from the reservoir to the fire line. Late Sunday evening the flames had been subdued but Monday afternoon the fire broke out anew. Warden Riley again dispatched some men to the fire and early in the evening the flames had been definitely extinguished. District Warden Riley asserts that no fire permits will be issued to people in Colchester as long as the present dry weather continues. Brooks and wells are low and if forest fires break out, the fire-fighters are seriously handicapped.

Members of Colonel Henry Champion chapter D. A. R., of Colchester, who attended the state D. A. R. meeting in New London, Wednesday, were the regent, Mrs. Anne Gilbert, Misses Clara and Susan B. Pendleton, Mrs. Fred G. Bock, Mrs. Malcolm Leal, Miss Addie Wickwire, Miss Florence Dawley, Miss Elizabeth G. Day, Mrs. Henry J. Bailey, Mrs. A. D. Williams, Miss Sarah W. Bigelow and Mrs. Chauncey G. Markham.

A large crowd gathered in front of the E. R. Holmes store, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons to listen to the radio broadcast of the world series games.

Curtis P. Brown, republican candidate for state senator from this district, Representative Samuel Freedman, Judge Charles F. Brown, William E. Adams, Harold F. Brown and Representative Samuel P. Willard were among local republicans in attendance at the county republican rally held Wednesday at Gales Ferry.

Miss Sarah Bigelow, Mrs. Henry J. Bailey and Misses Florence Dawley and Addie Wickwire were luncheon guests Thursday at "Wellesway" the summer home of Mrs. Clara Hanmer in Gilead.

Regret is being expressed by the townspeople over the news that Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Noyes Morgan of Hayward avenue, are to move soon to New London where they have purchased a new home. Both have been active in the social and civic life of the town for many years. Mrs. Morgan has been active in church work and is a charter member of both the Eastern Star and the grange. Mr. Morgan is a deacon in the Congregational church, chairman of the republican town committee and for two terms was a state representative. He is a member of Wooster lodge No. 10, A. F. & A. M. of Colchester and of the grange for forty years. He is also a trustee of Chelsea Savings bank, Norwich.

Stafford Springs

The town of Stafford will have a new board of selectmen after the town election next Monday, no matter which party is successful at the polls. No member of the present board is a candidate for re-election so there will be a complete new lineup on the board during the coming year. Byron W. Leonard is the standard bearer on the republican ticket for first selectman and Richard Valentine is his running mate. Daniel Avery is the democratic nominee for first selectman and Alfred Bidorini is the party's choice for second selectman. William H. Bumstead on the democratic ticket will contest for the office of assessor with Romildo Galotto on the republican ticket. For tax collector, there are two new-comers in politics. William Symonds who has been in the employ of the American Railway Express company for several years is running on the republican ticket, against Joseph Cunningham a local insurance agent, who is the democratic nominee. George J. Greendonner of West Stafford is the republican nominee for board of relief and John B. Piocin is running for this office on the democratic ticket. In ordinary times the natural republican majority in this town is sufficient to elect all majority candidates on the republican ticket. The democrats, however, say that this is no ordinary year; that the reassessment muddle last fall, coupled with the industrial depression which has thrown many people out of work will help the democratic ticket and they hope to win some of the major offices.

Borough Brevities

Miss Elumina Lavalle of Hartford, a former resident of Stafford, was a recent visitor with borough friends.

After a lengthy visit with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Baker and son David returned to Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday last.

Miss Mattie Abbe, of Swansea, Mass., a former resident of Hanover, is being entertained by a number of friends in the village.

Miss Caroline Gallup acted as substitute teacher in the Grammar school Friday of last week, thus giving the regular principal, Mrs. Irene Mann, a longer week-end in which to visit her sister in New Haven.

Mrs. James Edwards, of New Haven, with her two daughters and son Bennett, spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Ella Bennett. Master Bennett is making a visit with his grandmother.

Transferred from Denver

After a stay of several weeks at the home of Mrs. ElBiance's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Egli, Major and Mrs. ElBiance and three children left last week for Fort Hamilton, N. Y., having been transferred from Denver, Colo., at which point the major has been located as army physician at the fort.

Mr. and Mrs. John Scott, who have been spending the summer at East Lyme, were callers in the village early in the week, and friends look to see them permanent residents here soon.

A successful food sale was held in the parish house last Friday afternoon, under the auspices of the Ladies' guild of the Congregational church. The Endeavor society connected with the church will meet next Sunday evening with Miss Fannie Allen at her home. Miss Allen has been one of the most active and useful members of the society, but of late her health has not permitted her to attend the evening meetings, and her presence has been greatly missed.

HEBRON

Over 200 gathered in Hebron Congregational church, Sunday evening, to attend the Tri-County C. E. union meeting. Rev. Howard C. Champe, missionary from Mexico, who has just returned to the United States, gave a talk on "The Political and Religious Condition of Mexico." His son John sang a song in Spanish. He was dressed in a Mexican rain costume. His daughter, Grace Champe, sang a song and recited a poem in Spanish.

Miss Clarissa Pendleton, who has also just returned from a six weeks' visit to Mexico City, Mazatlan, Tepic, Guadalajara, and other cities of Mexico, gave a fine talk about the beautiful churches of Mexico, and "What It is to be a Mexican." George C. Munson, of Hartford, with a quartet, gave two quartet numbers, "Will You Not Come," and "When the Saviour Went Home." Mr. Brown, Mr. Westbrook, Mr. Moore and Mr. Gounard, all of Hartford, sang in the quartet accompanied at the piano by George C. Munson. Theodore Stebbins, youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Stebbins, of Colchester, sang the solo, "Trusting in Thee." Mrs. Karl Links, of Gilead, also sang a solo, "Hold Thou My Hand." After the service, members of the different C. E. societies of Hebron, Colchester, Marlborough, Gilead, Columbia and Westchester were served grape juice, cake and cookies. The next Tri-County meeting will be held Oct. 26 in Marlborough. A pageant will be given.

The Holy City chorus is to meet at 2:45 in the Methodist church, Hartford, Oct. 12. Leader, George C. Munson. The chorus will be given some time the latter part of October.

The Bible study class met this week at the home of Miss Marion Gott, Thursday evening.

Oak Park, Ill., has fixed midnight as curfew hour for midget golf courses.

WINDHAM SCHOOLS CONDUCTED WITHIN APPROPRIATION OF $200,000 LAST YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 2—The 33rd annual report of the school committee of the town of Windham for the year ending September 10 shows that once again the schools have been conducted strictly within the limits of the appropriation. The expenditure for the current year was $199,985.28 while the 1929-1930 appropriation was $200,000. The report shows that the bins are full of coal, many supplies for the ensuing year are purchased, buildings have been repaired and all bills are paid. Over the period of the past 10 years nearly $20,000 has been unexpended for current school expenses out of the annual appropriations.

These figures and many others of interest appear in the printed report which has been prepared for distribution and incorporates timely facts presented by Superintendent of Schools Egbert A. Case.

In consideration of state grants and the tuition income paid by other towns, the actual tax money spent for schools this year is only $137,304.03 and the actual money asked for next year is $156,590. Windham pays less taxes for school than does any other town of similar size in the state of Connecticut. With Windham rated as the educational center of eastern Connecticut and money for necessary things never having been denied, the low cost is due to other things, many of which are matters of management. It is pointed out in the report, as instances, that the salaries of three full-time teachers are paid by the state, the securing of these teachers over a period of nearly eight years having saved the local taxpayers over $50,000 to date. The committee has abolished the only salaried position available to its membership and the vast amount of detail involved in tuitions and division of accounts for Model school payments, is in the duties of the school superintendent without additional pay, thus reducing the committee expense to practically nothing. Supervision cost has been reduced to a minimum by combining the positions of superintendent, high school principal and secretary of the board.

Windham's greatest financial asset is its large patronage of tuition pupils which have saved the local taxpayers thousands of dollars, have made possible a larger school in which each teacher can specialize in one subject, and have made Willimantic a community center, a shopping center, a transportation center and in all ways a more prosperous place. The net profit derived from the admission of 70 additional tuition pupils, made possible by the construction and furnishing of a new room at the high school at a cost of about $9,000, will be sufficient to pay for the room in two years.

In view of ever increasing costs and registrations, the committee recommends an increase of $4,000 in the appropriation for the ensuing year, a total of $204,000. A tabulation shows the following increase of pupils in average daily attendance in the elementary and high schools during the last 20 years, 1910, 1119; 1920, 1473; and 1930, 2012. While the total additional expense incurred due to tuition pupils is placed at $18,100, a report of tuition income for 1929-30 shows that it was $33,263. The income will increase for the ensuing year as there are some 70 more tuition pupils and the tuition fee has been increased to $120. The school assets of the town amount to $1,0[illegible]764.

JEWETT CITY

MILK SITUATION TOUCHED UPON BY HEALTH OFFICER

In view of some recent agitation in regard to the local milk question, the following from the report made by the health officer, G. H. Jennings, to the selectmen is a matter of much interest to Griswold and Lisbon farmers:

Conditions remain nearly the same as last year. The supply of pasteurized milk slightly increased, from accredited herds the same; about one-third of the supply of milk comes from these two sources. All milk should be pasteurized or come from accredited herds, to make safe the most important food used by mankind. The state department of health and the dairy commissioner are working hard for this improvement. Cattle are inspected free of cost to the owner; many dairymen have applied to the commissioner for the test; a recent increased appropriation makes it probable that within four years all cattle will have received the test.

Mercury Drops To 29

The first frost of the season visited this section Thursday morning with the mercury down to 31. The lowest authentic report was 29. The damage to flower gardens within the borough limits was hardly noticeable. Farmers report standing ensilage corn as touched very lightly.

An interested gallery looked on Thursday, while the big power shovel worked in the river bed, removing the long cribs and piles that supported the temporary bridge across the Quinebaug.

Harvest Festival Planned

The harvest festival and Rally day services of the Methodist church will be held next Sunday. Rev. William C. Prentiss of the Congregational church, Plainfield, will preach at the 10:45 service. The Sunday school will hold its rally at noon when a concert will be given by the young people. The evening service will be at 7 o'clock; Rev. J. W. Carter, the pastor, will preach. The church will be decorated with fruits, vegetables, flowers and other harvest adornments. A committee of workers will be in attendance Saturday evening from 6 o'clock to receive gifts of the harvest and to arrange the display in the church. Invitations have been mailed to all the members, pupils and friends.

DIABOLICAL RACKET OF WHISTLING SOON TO END

When the Main street railroad crossing is closed, which will be within a few weeks, it is going to be a hard blow for the night engine drivers. With this crossing eliminated they will be robbed of the opportunity for extraordinary whistle operation, in which it would seem they took especial delight. It is understood that as a general thing night engineers will work for a good deal less money on lines where there are plenty of crossings, so that when they sail along in the dead of night they can wake up the sleeping towns, with a few unearthly blasts. On the other hand, these knights of the throttle, are sure going to demand higher wages when their whistling diversion is taken away. All past masters of the art, some of the local night drivers are noted for their efficiency. One regular chap, due in the small hours, begins up in the cut, low down and gurgling-like, to start with; then he pulls her full open, and bedlam is let loose. Whistler differ; some are like a call to a fire, while others resemble the despairing wail of a lost soul. Of whatever sort they are soon to be shut off locally, with the nearby residents duly thankful.

WINDHAM

The Fish and Game club supper Thursday was served to about 125. The menu consisted of roast beef, mashed potato, carrots, cabbage salad, rolls, apple pie, cheese and coffee. An interesting entertainment followed given by George Gillette, of an entertainment bureau in Hartford, including humorous stories, songs and selections on several instruments. Van's orchestra gave several selections. The women who helped make the affair a success included Mrs. Guy Richmond, Mrs. Donald Macdonald, Mrs. L. P. Oehrig and Mrs. Vantine Anderson.

Miss Gertrude Arnold strained the arch of her foot in a fall Saturday night and has been confined to the house for several days.

Mrs. H. H. Gallup and Miss Susan I. Gallup, of Norwich, were recent callers on their cousin, Miss Gertrude Arnold.

Mrs. Harold Leffingwell and Mrs. E. K. Leffingwell were guests of honor at a tea given at Mrs. Walter Abbe's in South Windham to the members of the Grenfell association. Mrs. E. K. Leffingwell was given a fountain pen and Mrs. Harold Leffingwell a pencil. The latter was given a necklace by the members of the Young Women's Card club recently. Mrs. Harold Leffingwell and little daughter are visiting the former's parents in Northampton, Mass., before leaving for Florida for the winter with her husband and mother-in-law.

Rev. E. F. Smiley was the speaker at the Mansfield C. E. meeting Sunday evening and Miss Margaret Bixby sang a solo.

A food sale Friday in charge of Mrs. DeWitt Lathrop, assisted by Mrs. David Light and Mrs. Edward Phillips, netted $25.35 for the Ladies' Aid society.

Ends Two Years' Tour

Mrs. Charles C. Abbe, who has been traveling in Europe for two years, arrived home last week.

Miss Emma Neale and Miss Grace Neale, who have been living with their sister, Mrs. E. K. Leffingwell, for a year, have returned to their home on the Green.

The leader for the C. E. meeting Sunday will be C. Arthur Keeney. Topic: "How May We Help Folks in Our Community?"

WESTFORD

The annual meeting of the shareholders of Westford Cemetery association will be held the coming week.

Services will be held at Westford Hill church Sunday next at 2:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Armitage spent most of last week on a motor trip into Canada, going up by way of Lake Champlain and returning through the White Mountains, a charming trip at this time of the year, if one is prepared for all kinds of weather—hot, cold, wet and dry.

Tuesday afternoon the Home Economics club held its first meeting, which was both interesting and profitable. A program was outlined for the coming year, including a variety of work, mostly under the general topic of home management.

MINNIE E. HICKS
R.R. #2, Rushville, Indiana

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for run-down condition before my baby was born. Now I eat better, have gained in weight and have more strength to take care of my four children. I can do my housework and not get a bit tired. My mother and my sister, also several of my women friends are taking your medicine now, because I believe that this medicine will help any woman that will take it regularly."—Mrs. Lydia Orloski.

"When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly do my housework. I was so nervous and weak from Change of Life that I had to lie down very often. I heard about the Vegetable Compound through a pamphlet which was left at my door. I am doing all the housework for a family of four and it keeps me on my feet. I have taken six bottles and I have gained strength and flesh."—Minnie E. Hicks.

INDIVIDUALITY—so easy to recognize... so hard to attain... bound to be admired... sure to be copied... but beyond imitation.

ONE will always stand out!

IT IS the "just right" combination that makes for style in the gown—and good taste in a cigarette.

Nothing can take the place of the right use of the right tobaccos. Chesterfield's long-tested methods of mellowing and blending the choicest cigarette tobaccos have no counterpart. Thus Chesterfield stands out for—

MILDNESS—the entirely natural mildness of tobaccos that are without harshness or bitterness.

BETTER TASTE—such as only a cigarette of wholesome purity and better tobaccos can have.

DANIELSON

MILITARY FUNERAL OF DELOR LEBRECQUE HELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 2.—Military honors were paid Delor Lebrecque, World war veteran, whose funeral was held from the home in Attawaugan this morning, with services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 10 o'clock. Many attended the solemn high mass, of which Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor, was celebrant, with Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Baldwin, M. S., both of Danielson, as deacon and sub-deacon. At the grave in St. Joseph's cemetery, a firing squad of American Legion members fired the customary volleys and Taps was sounded by Bugler Joseph Digget of Goodyear. The bearers—World war veterans—were Joseph Lebrecque, Peter Lebrecque, brothers of the deceased; Oscar St. Lawrence, Ovid Jarvis, Joseph Miller and Armand Lucier. Rev. Fr. Kost conducted the committal service. The funeral arrangements were in charge of L. E. Kennedy.

Recently Chief John McFarland attached a "Welcome to Danielson" card on the steering wheel of a car bearing a Pennsylvania registration that was parked in the business section. Later the owner, Edward Showceker of 5523 Boyd street, Philadelphia, came along and asked the chief about the card, and the officer explained that it welcomed all tourists to Danielson and as such they are not subject to any parking restrictions. Thereupon the chief gave the visitor a card to take along with him, suggesting that upon arriving home Mr. Showceker send it back, telling of his safe arrival there. The card came back this morning with a notation of "safe arrival home."

Joseph Liberty, who has passed his 77th birthday and whose home is wherever he happens to be, was taken over to the county jail in Brooklyn this morning by Chief John McFarland to serve a sentence of 30 days for having been intoxicated. He was picked up yesterday afternoon by the chief after that officer had received several complaints about a man being helplessly intoxicated and lying on a discarded mattress over by the old Westfield Textile Co. plant.

Joe managed to admit having had considerable of a party to the chief. After presentation in court this morning Liberty, losing his liberty, was hustled over to Brooklyn in a taxi to begin his sentence. The trip is a short one. Arriving outside the jail, Liberty, who is still a robust man despite his advanced years, remarked to Chief McFarland: "It no take long for get in here, but he take quite a while for get out."

It is of gratifying interest to his friends here and throughout the town of Killingly that William Brooks, recently named as assistant superintendent for the New Haven railroad, with his headquarters at Putnam, has been appointed to serve in this area, after having been with the company over 20 years at Hartford and prior to that at other places on the system. Mr. Brooks, as a youth, attended Killingly high school and after leaving school began his railroad career at Dayville, becoming in due course of time, a telegraph operator. From the first he showed unusual promise and evidence of ability to achieve the advancement he has since made. Mr. Brooks is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brooks, residents of Dayville, where they have made their home for many years.

Russell Neal, colored man whose place was raided during the course of a week-end dance last Saturday night, at Ballouville, was profuse in his thanks to the court this morning when execution of sentence was suspended on two counts charging him with actual sales of intoxicants and keeping with intent to sell. On each count Neal was sentenced by Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis to serve 30 days in jail. The understanding is that things are to be different, as to intoxicants, around the Neal place than they were when the raiders made their appearance while 58 persons, white and black, were mingling and having considerable of an evening.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, in charge of the state police barracks here, was in Hartford today attending a meeting of the commanding officers of the department. He was accompanied by State Officer Elton Nolan.

Delegations representing the towns of Killingly, Putnam, Thompson, Woodstock, Eastford and Ashford will assemble here in caucus Friday evening, at the town hall, to nominate a candidate for state senator from the 28th district on the democratic ticket.

This territory needs rain badly, but there just doesn't seem to be anybody to arrange for some. People with sensitive tastes are beginning to note a brackish sort of flavor to the borough's supply of drinking water. However, there is an ample supply of this in the reservoirs around East Killingly, and it is pointed out that Danielson never has experienced a real shortage of water since the system was installed about 40 years ago.

The Amasa D. Pierce country home and chicken breeding establishment at Squaw Rocks, southeast of here, has been sold to Anthony Carvette of Taunton, it was announced today by J. C. Witter, who also disposed of the Cyrus Smith estate at East Killingly to Edwin Davis.

With Mrs. L. E. Kennedy as hostess to the members of the Entre Nous Whist club, the winners at bridge were Mrs. Earl Wood, Mrs. William McLaughlin and Mrs. Rene Buteau.

About half the sets of cards at the Assawaga Co. woolen mill in Dayville were started this week and looms will be put to weaving at once. Work at this fine plant has been slack for some time past, but business seems more promising just now.

Voters throughout the town were being subjected to a steady drumfire of persuasive argument today, relative to the manner in which they will mark their ballots for candidates for selectmen in next Monday's town election. At this election all the voting will be done at the town hall here in Danielson.

The cider mills throughout this territory seem destined to be in for a heavy run of business this fall. This forecast is due in large measure to the unusually abundant supply of apples, even the best of which, fine sprayed fruit, is commanding less money in the market than was the case a year ago. To prevent many of the surplus apples going to waste they will be turned into cider, and much of that, not all, eventually into vinegar.

Excavating is underway in Potter street, where the borough is to build a sewer as the result of favorable action taken by a special town meeting the past week, the necessary appropriation having been made.

Only five days more for paying borough taxes. See Collector S. H. Perry. —adv.

Leon Tourtelotte, Providence traveling man who came to Danielson regularly for many years, but not for a number of years past, called on old friends here today.

Mrs. George S. Brown of Providence, for many years a resident here, is visiting with Danielson friends.

An automobile registration rarely ever seen here—Utah—was noted on a small coupe in the business section this morning.

After a visit here with Mr and Mrs. Rowland R James, Mrs. A. L. James and daughter Katherine, of Santa Monica, Cal., are leaving Sunday for a visit with other relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. They will go south to Florida, returning to the coast in November.

Speaking of automobile registrations, probably the most unusual one ever seen here has been reported. The plate was a cerise colored affair with gray figures and the letters R d'H It was from Haiti.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill recalled that Dr. Louis I Mason who died in Willimantic a few days ago, had been one of his staff of medical examiners, in the town of Windham, for the past 22 years.

A trio of aeroplanes soaring high over the business section shortly before noon today and on a southerly course, were watched with interest by many observers.

The vocational school, with classes every afternoon and evening at Killingly high school, is going along splendidly and is now well organized.

OLD PEOPLE'S HOME RECEIVES BEQUEST BY WILL OF BETSEY A. WILCOX

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 2.—The Westcott and Wilcox Old People's Home of Danielson is to receive a legacy under the terms of the will of Betsey A. Wilcox, who died recently in Moosup. After setting forth certain bequests and trusts, the will provides that George T. Greenman, a principal beneficiary under the provisions of the instrument, that "upon the death of George T. Greenman I direct that the net income from said trust fund shall be paid over to the Westcott and Wilcox Old People's Home, of Danielson, to be used and expended by them for the uses and purposes of said home."

How much this trust fund amounts to is not known, nor is it possible to estimate what it will be at the time the home here eventually receives it. However, it is believed to be a very considerable amount and there is the prospect that it will accumulate through the years. The Killingly Trust Co. of Danielson is named as executor of the will, which is dated Feb. 17, 1928.

Betsey A. Wilcox was reputed to be the possessor of very considerable wealth, which included extensive holdings of real estate. The income from the trust fund that eventually will come to the Westcott and Wilcox Old People's Home here represents the residue of the estate after a few comparatively minor bequests, including $500, to be known as the William and Mary A. Wilcox fund, the interest of which is to be paid to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam. This money is to be used for the purpose of assisting needy cases desiring medical attention, this for residents of the towns of Killingly, Plainfield and Sterling.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

Harry Dean has been a visitor at the home of relatives in South Killingly.

Madeline Faucher has been ill.

Has Left Norwich.

Clifford Gauthier, who has been employed at a Norwich hospital the past year, has finished there and has gone to Waterbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred H Tillinghast have returned from Misquamicut, R. I., where they have spent the greater part of the summer at their cottage.

George Street is visiting in Pascoag, R. I., with relatives.

Dr. S. Slabotsky is receiving treatment at the U. S. Naval hospital in Chelsea, Mass.

William Thompson and Samuel Lewis have been business visitors in the vicinity of Westerly, R. I.

Mrs. Charles Barber was in New London Wednesday representing the Deborah Avery chapter, D. A. R., at the state meeting.

Ernest Oppermen has gone to Pittsburgh to attend school. He will take a course in architectural drawing.

Winners at Bridge.

The Auction Bridge club was entertained Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Frederick Brewster. Mrs. William Heywood, Mrs. Alphonse Garcia, Mrs. Lewis Hoar of Moosup were guests. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, who was assisted by Mrs. Stuart Ellsworth. The club prizes were won by Mrs. Alfred Hill and Mrs. L. Howard Cross, and the guests' prizes by Mrs. Lewis Hoar and Mrs. Alphonse Garcia.

Peter Denis was in Providence Wednesday.

Mrs. Samuel Collins and Mrs. Everett Ladd attended the W. C. T. U. convention in Danielson Wednesday.

Mrs. John Vaughn of Norwich was in town Wednesday.

Variety of Chestnut Burrs.

A branch from a chestnut tree with chestnut burrs on it is attracting attention at Thompson's news store. Many of the younger children asked what they were as they did not remember seeing chestnuts before the blight struck the trees. Flying machines have nothing on chestnut burrs this year.

It is difficult to account for the bright remarks of some children after hearing their parents talk.

BROOKLYN

The first meeting of the Brooklyn Women's club scheduled to be held with Mrs. William House Tuesday, October 7, will be held at Canterbury manor, the home of Mrs. Homer G. Beecher instead. The roll-call and general subject will be as scheduled for the first meeting. The hour is 3 o'clock. The president, Mrs. L. B. Williams has made a clever program for each member.

Miss Belle Hatch left Tuesday to spend the winter in Boydton, Virginia.

All regret that Mr. and Mrs. George Merwin Kent are leaving town. Mr. Kent has sold his place to Amasa Pierce of Danielson, who comes to take possession this week.

Johy Fay and little daughter, Roberta, of Port Chester, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Fay's father, William Slater.

Rev. R. D. Hatch has gone to Germantown, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester B. Williams and daughter, Francees were guests Sunday of friends in Ashburnham, Mass. Mr and Mrs. Williams are this week entertaining Mrs. Lillian Jones of Ashburnham.

Miss Susie Robbins of Danielson spent Tuesday with her sister, Mrs. William Carlos.

Sergeant S. A. Moeller, Spanish war veteran, who is walking from New York to Boston to attend the American legion convention, created quite a furore as he passed through town Tuesday noon.

Clarence Copeland of New York and his sister, Mrs. Paul Geisler, of Gurleyville, Conn., called on local friends last week.

Mrs. George Kimball of Bridgeport spent last week in town renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lowney of Long Island were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lathrop.

Dr. Herman Atwood of Stonington visited his sister, Mrs Juliette Martin, last week.

Robert Field, younger son of Lieut. and Mrs. Albert Searls Field, is making a good recovery from an attack of intestinal grip and hopes soon to resume his studies at Kent school, Kent, Conn.

Tuesday evening a meeting of Brooklyn grange was held, a postponed meeting on account of the fair. The program was placed in the hands of the East Brooklyn members. Mrs. Whitman, who acted as lecturer, presented a very pleasing program. Mr. Wells gave an interesting talk on the testing of milk. Mr. Babson also spoke on the report of the test of local water supplies. The recitations by Mrs. Whitman and George Ingalls were both enjoyed. The musical numbers consisted of singing by the grange, a banjo solo by Mrs. Louis Ingalls, harmonica solo by James Ingalls, a whistling solo by Mrs. Whitman and a piano duet by Mrs. Ingalls and Mrs. Leavens. The grange appreciates the effort made by the East Brooklyn members. Next meeting Oct. 14 will open at 7.30 p. m.

Alfred E. Williams, after two weeks' vacation, resumed his duties at A. E. Meech's in Danielson Monday.

Mrs. A. L. Livsey has returned from a short stay in Providence.

R. H. Whitehead, president of the New Haven Clock company announced his company had reached a business arrangement with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company whereby both organizations shortly will place on the market the New Haven-Westinghouse electric clock. The line will include a motor alarm clock. Mr. Whitehead added that there is at this time no interchange of financial interest between the two companies and there had been no exchange of stock or interlocking of directorates.

PUTNAM

MAY MEMORIAL LIBRARY IS IMPRESSIVELY DEDICATED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 2.— In a beautiful autumnal setting 200 residents of the village of East Woodstock assembled on the common today for the formal dedication of the recently completed May Memorial library building which is the gift of George Henry May, whose home is in Lancaster, Mass. The building, one of the most beautiful of its kind in the state, was donated to the East Woodstock Library association by Mr. May in memory of his father and mother, William and Anna May, and to perpetuate the memory and traditions of the May family, one of the oldest and most honored in Woodstock's history.

There is an interesting story connected with the new May Memorial. According to the donor, Mr. May, many years ago when his aunt, Miss Julia May, a venerable resident of the little village, was librarian of the East Woodstock library, she often times emphasized the absence of a suitable library building as one of the village's greatest civic handicaps. Mr May, in his brief address, stated that it was the hope of his aunt that some day, someone would display their public spiritedness by providing the village with a new library. Miss May, who is 89 years of age, was present today to see her hopes and dreams realized, for it was her repeated suggestions made many years

NO TIME FOR PESSIMISM

Speaking before the American Bankers' association at Cleveland, President Hoover dwelt, as was expected, to a large extent upon existing economic conditions. The president fully appreciates the situation but he pointed out that it doesn't involve this country alone but is worldwide, with this country in a better position than others.

A significant statement by the president was to the effect that the situation is susceptible to proper influence and effort. He takes the position that it is but temporary and insists that it will be shortened largely "to the degree that you feel you can prudently, by counsel and specific assistance, instill into your clients from industry, agriculture and commerce a feeling of assurance."

The president was calling attention to the fact that it is a time for an optimistic attitude and the display of confidence in the country's future. It there is reliance upon nothing more than experience, it is evident that conditions are ultimately going to be better. It is possible to take the view that such a development should be allowed to take its time and its own course and that the country should suffer the detrimental effects while that is being done. It is the idea of the president that this is unwise and needless. The period of uncertainty can be made long or short, but it is in the interest of all that it should be shortened as much as possible and his word to the bankers was that they were in a position to do much to inspire and create that better situation. Faith and cooperation will do much in bringing the early return of prosperity.

The president paid tribute to the part that has been done in the way of construction work by utilities, railways and heavy industries, and advanced the view that, while they have made large contributions to business stability, it would be possible, through a wider public vision, for the handicaps which the railways are experiencing to be removed and permit them to be an even greater stabilizing balance wheel. He was, likewise, mindful of the part which the government can play and is playing. Its cooperation is necessary, and the country knows that it has been decidedly helpful, but there are limitations and sight cannot be lost of the fact that the situation is by no means domestic, but world-wide.

The president's address was in accord with previous expressions. It was an enlightening presentation of the situation that should inspire that confidence which can do much to secure improvement. The point that we need not wait to better our own conditions until the rest of the world has was well made.

GEORGIA'S LYNCHINGS

That a group of citizens in Atlanta should display concern over the resumption of lynching in that state is by no means surprising. It is the natural reaction to an outbreak which Georgia had hoped would not reappear. That state too long had the reputation for being the worst state in the country for such lawlessness until public sentiment manifested itself and put a check to it. Then, for a time, Georgia participated in the fight against mob rule, prosecuted those who participated and seemed to have accomplished a long-needed reform.

But Georgia has been backsliding seriously in the past few weeks and seems destined to return to the top of the list of lynching states and thus regain the position of discredit from which it had been thought to have departed permanently.

The Atlanta churchmen, clerical and lay members, attribute the lynching craze to laxness in religious training and to weakness and complicity on the part of public officials, and call for a relentless war upon "this survival of barbarism."

If it were true, as claimed in past years, that the many cases of lynching in Georgia did not represent public sentiment throughout the state, it must be that the minority has again gotten into control of affairs down there and is determined that the better sentiment of the state shall not prevail. This makes it evident that public opinion must assert itself, that it must put into office and keep there those officials who are prepared to uphold the law, and that it cannot tolerate any laxness that tends in the other direction.

Georgia is being made to realize that putting a stop to mob rule involves something more than getting the movement headed in the right direction and then deserting it. Wherever the trouble lies, it is apparent that public opinion or the better sentiment in that state has fallen down on its job. This doesn't necessarily mean that it cannot recover the reins and regain lost ground, but it does mean that it must awaken to its job and stick to it under favorable as well as unfavorable conditions. Many a good cause has had its reverses before success was ultimately attained.

DRIVING SIGNALS

Providing a system of signals for the driving of motor vehicles, getting them adopted and having them properly interpreted may seem simple enough, but it doesn't work out that way in practice.

Because those at the rear have failed to pay any attention to the signals of the driver ahead, or misinterpreted them, many accidents have occurred. This prompts Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoeckel to point out that the general reaction to signals by any driver should be to recognize that he is going to do something different than he has been doing, to stop, to turn right or turn left.

This, of course, doesn't make any allowance for the fellow who is in the habit of dangling his arm out of the window for no real purpose except that it is the most convenient form of relaxation at the time, or the chap who is constantly putting his hand out to flick the ashes off his cigar. The driver in back is supposed to know what the driver ahead is up to, but if that is hard to determine he should regard it as a sufficient ground for being cautious and get his car under such control that there will be no serious accident. Signals that are meaningless may be a nuisance but they may mean serious trouble if not regarded as a warning.

It would be an ideal thing if all drivers would learn to signal the car in back by putting out the arm when planning to stop, by pointing the finger to the left hand and keep motioning when going in that direction and to make a circling movement with the hand when about to turn right and thereby indicate the car at the rear should go ahead on the left.

Uniformity is a great thing and in no better way can it be used than in the giving of signals. Perfecting an individual system that is better might be possible but it is in the multiplicity of systems that confusion is created.

HIS INFLUENCE CONTINUES

Today marks the 76th anniversary of the birth of William C. Gorgas, whose death occurred ten years ago after a career in the service of humanity that has been a benefit to the whole world.

Dr. Gorgas' record in making such a successful fight against disease and unsanitary conditions will always occupy a place of prominence in medical history. It was a wonderful service that he rendered in driving the yellow fever out of Cuba and eliminating a menace which extended to other countries. He was equally successful in similar efforts in the Panama isthmus and there is no question but what he contributed the necessary disease preventive measures which permitted the completion of the canal. The transformation of the Canal Zone from a tropical pest hole to one of the most healthful places in the world was no small accomplishment.

It was through his efforts and achievements that great tropical areas were opened up to development. His fight against yellow fever and malaria is deserving of as great attention as is given to heroes of the battlefield, but in the establishment of preventive measures for combating disease he was equally efficient during his service as surgeon-general of the army and as the director of health activities of the army during the World war.

Dr. Gorgas served well whatever cause he was engaged in and it is a gratifying development that health educational work of a highly valuable character is being carried on by the Gorgas Memorial institute. Nothing would probably meet more admirably the desires of one whose activity was for so long directed in such paths. His influence still continues.

PRISON REFORM

Repeatedly it has been found that there is no great sacrifice without some good resulting therefrom. Ohio has reason to feel that way in view of the developments which have followed the fire in the state prison at Columbus. That resulted in a deplorable loss of life and the disclosure of conditions which had not received the attention they deserved. It was the means of forcing action, though that was not the purpose of it.

Prison conditions in Ohio have been under investigation since that time, with the result that the commission has studied the situation in that state and compared it with that in others. It had no difficulty in putting its finger on conditions that ought not to have prevailed and there will be less difficulty in getting betterments than formerly, but, along with the indictments which the commission has made in its report, it presents recommendations which will in all probability get considerate attention.

Among the reforms which the commission recommends is the classification of prisoners. The purpose is to keep the defectives, the confirmed criminals and those for whom there is hope, separated. Instead of having them mingle together and made susceptible to the guidance of the master criminal minds, it is believed that it is for the best interests of the criminals as well as the public that they should be segregated in order that they may be brought under those influences that will help in their reformation, if such a thing is possible. Facilities for carrying out that idea will have to be provided but it may well come in connection with such new prison construction as that state has got to face.

It is unfortunate that the state's need of different methods in handling prisoners should have to be brought out through such a destructive fire, but having disclosed the situation the remedy for the future cannot be applied any too soon.

THE WORLD AT SIXTEEN

"I have been absolutely speechless," Ernestine declared breathlessly as she shoved the Persian cat out of his favorite chair, selected a chocolate and sat down, all in one swift motion, "ever since Lorraine's elopement—haven't you heard? There positively were no classes today at all because all anybody could say was 'did-you-ever,' and the teachers were almost as upset as we were.

"I think it is perfectly wonderful for a girl as downtrodden as Lorraine has always been to get up enough spunk to take her life in her own hands the way she did. Why, her family wouldn't let her stay out after 10 o'clock and were absolutely callous to the fact that the boys admired her tremendously. 'No,' said her parents—I believe parents are born saying No—'certainly not; you cannot have callers on school nights,' when she was just dying to see Clarence because they had so much to talk over. She used to see him anyhow five minutes every evening when she would go out to the icebox in the back entry way to get an orange or something. I think true love like that is wonderful and it makes me furious when parents just sniff at it and refuse to realize how solemn it all is.

"When a girl decides she has met the right man that is all there is to it, and I am sure in my own case it would make no difference whether I was 16 or 25. I am very fond of my parents, and all that, but I can see their limitations. Their viewpoint and mine are absolutely different. I think I'm much broader-minded somehow. Parents never seem to have a speck of romance in their systems—did you ever notice?

"When mine talk all I hear is bills, adenoids, stocks going down, the hideous price of beefsteak and where they can set up an extra bed if Aunt Jenny brings the twins when she comes to visit. I can't imagine that they were ever very much in love with each other.

"Of course I haven't the slightest idea of eloping as Lorraine did, or anything, because if I did I know perfectly well I'd never get that sports car when I graduate, and I rather think mother is going to give me a fur coat next winter. A girl looks so luxurious in fur. And, besides, I'm going away to school, which will be fun—but, nevertheless, I should feel perfectly justified if I were awfully in love with any one and my parents were stubborn in telling them plainly and firmly what I thought about their actions. You can stand just so much, you know.

"Why, when I consider how thrilled Lorraine must have been on that auto ride she and Clarence took to the town where they were married I could almost cry. Every mile brought her that much nearer to the greatest moment in her life when she was to say 'I do,' and all the rest of it. Only it was a sort of a shame that she had to give up the lace veil and eight bridesmaids we had all decided we should have. It just shows how deeply her romance had sunk in.

"It must have been perfectly beautiful when the ceremony was ended and Clarence looked at her and said 'My wife,' and I can't imagine anything so heartless as her father. Everything would have been all right only Clarence couldn't find any money to pay the minister, and it took some time for him to search his pockets and just as he remembered he had left his Christmas money at home in his other suit of clothes, and was sort of asking Lorraine what to do, why, her father and Clarence's father just stormed into the place, and, my goodness, there were fireworks! When fathers get in that mood I guess you can't do much with them. They're too old to use any sense at all.

"And so Lorraine went back home with her father and Clarence had to drive his father home, and both of them had to listen all the way. It's going to be annulled or something, and Lorraine is staying down in the country with her mother at her grandmother's. I'd hate to have her parents' conscience, ruining her life like that! Love certainly is a terrible problem, and I guess, maybe, it's just as well I haven't got it! But you never can tell when it is going to hit as I told my family tonight—and were they mad!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2— Patrick Hurley, secretary of war, has a way with him. Newspaper folk who "covered" his inspection of Mississippi river projects were much impressed.

They saw Hurley in action many times as the party paused at this or that river town. They observed at first hand his adroit escape from possibly embarrassing situations.

Wherever the secretary stopped, the local reception committee had some project of local federal improvement to urge. And it was his job to keep from committing himself. How he did it greatly amused the reporters.

For Secretary Hurley never seemed to lack for a good story to break the ice when he replied to the reception committees. No matter what they said or for what they asked, it seemed to stir a chord of memory in Pat's mind.

They Liked It

"Now that reminds me," he would start off—and there would follow some laughable tale, recounted with a gift for that sort of thing. It always "got" the audience.

And no matter how apathetic had been his greeting on arrival, this lawyer-warrior-statesman sailed away again amid cheers with all hands voting him a delightful fellow despite his silence on the pet local project.

There was another incident of the concluding air flight of the trip from New Orleans to Washington via Birmingham which gave one of the reporters a particular thrill.

Everybody in the huge flying transport ship including Hurley had parachute packs strapped to them all the time. Nobody flies in army planes without that.

Just as the ship lifted out of New Orleans, the Bystander's colleague, Charlie Williamson, the "AP" man with Hurley, had an accident. In moving about the release ring of his parachute caught on a seat arm and in a moment the canvas of his chute was cascading about all over the place.

'Chuteless

As an aerial lifeboat it was useless from that moment. It would have to be repacked and that was a job for an expert. There were no spares aboard.

Hurley, sitting up front, noticed what had happened. His hand went to the buckles of his own 'chute harness.

"Here, take mine," he said to Williamson.

Of course the reporter refused. But then what did Hurley do? He unhooked his 'chute and laid it aside.

"I have never asked any man to do anything I would not do myself," he said smiling.

And all the way to Washington he rode 'chuteless just to keep a 'chuteless guest company.

YOUR HEALTH

Saving The Eyes In Industry

By Lewis H. Carris, Manager Director, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, New York.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

How more than 10,000 eyes and at least $46,000,000 were saved in two recent years among 583 plants, employing a total of half a million workmen, is told in the report of a study entitled "Eyes Saved in Industry," recently published by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness and the National Safety Council. These two organizations set out to discover the total of authenticated cases of workmen's eyes saved from serious injury or destruction through the use of goggles or headmasks; as those figures apply only to the corporations with definite records, there can be only conjecture as to the number of eyes actually saved by protective devices in all American industry.

In this study, the first of its kind ever made, it was assumed that an object which hit a goggle lens with such force as to pierce or shatter the lens would most certainly have so damaged the eye, if the goggles had not been worn, as to cause complete or nearly complete loss of vision. It was assumed, further, that every instance of a goggle lens bespattered by molten metal or by corrosive or otherwise injurious chemicals, represented an eye saved.

The increase in the use of destructive chemicals in industry during recent years is reflected in the data from miscellaneous manufacturing plants which recorded the spattering of both lenses with molten metal or injurious chemicals in the case of one employee out of every hundred in the industry within a year. In practically all these instances the glass lens was so badly damaged by chemicals or molten metal that it had to be replaced. Often even the frame of the goggles or the entire headmask had to be discarded.

Much has been said concerning the number of eyes lost in industry, the cost of industrial eye injuries, and the extent of blindness attributable to the eye hazards of industrial occupations. Little has been said concerning the number of eyes saved in industry, the economic gain of this saving to the employer, employee and nation, or extent to which blindness from industrial causes may be averted. The eye hazards of industry have come to be one of the most serious causes of blindness in America. There is, in fact, considerable ground for the belief that each year more persons are permanently robbed of their sight by occupational hazards than by any other major cause of blindness. This is due largely to the fact that innumerable persons, employers and employees alike, still do not realize, or do not believe, that it is possible to prevent accidental eye injuries in the particular occupations in which they are engaged.

Despite the splendid accomplishments of many individual firms in the prevention of accidents in general, and specifically in the prevention of eye accidents, such accidents are still considered by many persons inherent or unavoidable accompaniments of certain industrial processes. For each instance in which a goggle lens is shattered or pierced by flying objects there are scores, if not hundreds, of instances in which the goggle lens stops the flight of an object which would have pierced the unprotected eye with disastrous results. The comments volunteered by safety engineers and plant managers in this inquiry indicate that there were thousands upon thousands of instances in which tiny fragments of metal or mineral were imbedded in or fused with the goggle lenses and that a high percentage of these instances represents the prevention of blindness or of serious eye injuries.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jack Frost Does His Part

The thrifty always look ahead;
The thriftless play about instead.
—Old Mother Nature.

Jack Frost had arrived. There was no doubt about it. He had stolen down from the Far North in the night. He had been very busy. He had visited all the nut trees. He had pinched the husks of many of the ripe nuts and opened them, so that the little brown nuts were showing, even if they did not fall. He had covered the ground with white hoarfrost that looked almost like a light snow. Yes, indeed Jack Frost had been busy.

Impy the black Chipmunk was up even before jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun. Little Mrs. Impy was up with him. The minute it was light enough they raced for the nut trees in the Green Forest. But, early as they were, others were before them.

"Woof! Woof!" said a voice. That was Buster Bear.

"Chit-r-r-r-r," rang out another voice in response. It was a sharp, angry voice.

Impy grinned. He knew that that was his cousin, Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

There was the sudden stamp of small feet, dainty feet. Lightfoot the Deer was there, for Lightfoot has a liking for beechnuts. And there were others still. Drummer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse were there. Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Rusty the Fox Squirrel were there. Striped Chipmunk arrived just about the time that Impy and Mrs. Impy did. Even little Whitefoot the Wood Mouse was there, although no one knew it, for Whitefoot took care that none should see him.

Now, in spite of Chatterer's scolding, and in spite of the fact that Buster Bear now and then emitted a grumbly-rumbly growl, there really was very little quarreling over the nut supply. Each was too busy harvesting his or her share. Buster Bear and Lightfoot the Deer and Mr. and Mrs. Grouse stowed them away in their stomachs. Anyway, the first two did and Mr. and Mrs. Grouse packed them in their crops. The Squirrel family didn't stop to eat. Happy Jack, Rusty and Chatterer hid them away as fast as they could in various places near by. Striped Chipmunk and Impy and little Mrs. Impy took the nuts home. Yes, sir, they took the nuts home. You see, of all those nut lovers, they were the only ones provided with pockets. They had pockets in their cheeks.

How they did stuff those pockets! Had you met Striped Chipmunk or Impy or Mrs. Impy on their way home, you certainly would have thought that they had the mumps. If you had spoken to them, they wouldn't have said a word in reply. They couldn't have. Their cheeks were so swelled out with the nuts they were carrying that they couldn't use their tongues for talking.

My goodness, how they did work: back and forth, back and forth they raced. It seemed as if their little legs must ache. Perhaps they did. It made no difference. This was harvest time and those nuts were to be harvested and stored away. There would be plenty of time to rest later.

After a while Buster Bear had enough and went away and lay down for a nap. Long before this Lightfoot the Deer and Mr. and Mrs. Grouse had eaten all they could and had gone away. Chatterer, Rusty, Happy Jack and the Chipmunks kept right on working. As long as there was light enough for it to be safe, they worked, harvesting those nuts. When at last Mr. and Mrs. Impy made the last trip and emptied their pockets in one of their storerooms, they found it was all they could do to get all those nuts in there.

After a while Buster Bear had enough and went away and lay down for a nap

"I guess we won't go hungry this winter," said Impy.

"We'll make another storeroom, if necessary," was all that Mrs. Impy replied.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Life in the Cacao Country of Brazil

"In the mouth of a crocodile-infested river we anchored our seaplane and went ashore in the palm-fringed little town of Ilheos, Brazil," writes Frederick Simpich, National Geographic society correspondent with the seaplane party which is surveying routes from Washington to Buenos Aires. "Ilheos lives on chocolate beans, or cacao. One-seventh of the world's crop moves from here, and five men manage the giant industry.

"Riding in a gasoline speed car, with the railway manager, we rattled out over the 50-mile toy line which wanders into the jungle.

"From the forest whizzed a stinging bug, and bit our driver on the nose. If we weren't there he would probably take a crocodile tooth from his pocket and rub his nose with it,' a said our host. 'That is the popular cure here for snake bites, and other poisons.' We passed a new-made grave, with flowers on it. A man killed by a crocodile had just been buried.

"Dogs are the crocodiles' favorite dish. When a village dog ventures near the river bank at night and barks, the crocodiles gather.

"In the state of Bahia are about 80,000,000 cacao trees; this fruit has been grown here for about 150 years, and the tiny railway serves the heart of the great cacao region. It hauls more tons of freight per mile than any other line in South America.

"Leaving the coastal plain and entering the foothill, one sees the cacao plantations. We walked in the shaded groves. Among bigger, protecting trees the small cacao trees are planted, thus sheltered from sun and wind. I twisted off a green fruit, broke it open and tasted the whitish seeds; the flavor was like watermelon. Barefoot men and women split the pods, empty the seeds on a wide platform, and tread them free of pulp and pith. They call this 'Dancing the Cacao.'

"The seeds are dried by stirring them in a big flat bin. A wide roof, set on wheels, is at hand, to be hastily hauled over the bin if it rains. Turning a dark brown when dried, and tasting plainly of unsweetened chocolate when ripe, the beans are packed in bags and sent to Europe and the United States. In 30 years Bahia's export has risen from 150,000 to 1,200,000 bags a year. Brazil herself drinks very little chocolate—but much coffee.

"Near a station named 'Lava Pes,' or 'Wash Your Feet,' we stopped to watch a long file of umbrella ants. Each carried a leaf, as if it were an umbrella. Many ants were up in a tree, biting off bits of leaf and dropping them to other ants waiting on the ground. This line of marching ants is often a mile or more long. The ants carry the leaves to their underground home, and store them. On the leaves a fungus forms, and this the insects eat.

"Under a shed nearby we saw four men, with machetes, scraping a wild pig they had shot.

"Farther up the line we crossed a small stream running among cacao-covered hills. Long chutes made of boards ran down the hillsides to the water's edge. Down these chutes natives were sliding fresh cacao beans, which emptied into waiting dugout canoes. Although cacao has been grown here for so long, the methods of harvesting it are still primitive; for labor is cheap.

"White men find life here hard, because of so many insects, and malaria. Bugs are a plague. I saw a horned tumble-bug more than seven inches long—larger than many kinds of birds. And there were snails that must have weighed half a pound, and there was the fer de lance, and other bad snakes.

"'For days I see only native workmen,' an English superintendent told me. 'The natives' language is quickly learned—they use only about 400 words, a blend of Portuguese, Indian and African words imported by slaves.'"

LAY HOOVER DAM FOUNDATION FROM AIR

LAS VEGAS, Nev. —(AP)— Foundations for the great Hoover dam in the Black canyon of the Colorado are being laid in the air.

Aerial photography is speeding the preliminary work on the $165,000,000 project.

As the air shots are reduced to mosaics, engineers are making their preliminary survey of the dam site and the area which will be covered by the artificial lake to be formed behind the 525 foot dam.

At the site where the huge mass of concrete will be poured to hold back the waters of the Colorado, Col. C. H. Birdseye, veteran explorer of the treacherous mountain stream, is taking pictures with a specially constructed camera.

His photographs are being reduced to contours and topographical maps by engineers determining the strength of the stone on the canyon walls.

Birdseye's photographic survey, engineers have said, is the only possible one to get a complete picture of the perpendicular sides as footholds are few and rodmen would risk their lives if a transit were used.

His pictures are taken on a triangulation scheme photographing a narrow strip of the wall from two points.

From the photographs engineers study the stone formations, and the contour of the cliffs to determine future action.

The photographic surveys, it is said, will speed operations on the project and bring actual construction of the dam to a nearer date. Several engineering camps already have been established.

The heat is so intense that men now working on the surveys start their days at sunrise and end them about 11 o'clock in the morning, before a wind sweeps out of the desert flats.

BEACON TO GUIDE PILOTS ON SOUTH ATLANTIC ROUTE

RECIFE, Pernambuco —(AP)— Navigators on the regular Europe-Brazil ocean lane and airmen winging their way between the African and South American continents soon will have an air beacon to guide them far out in the Atlantic.

The Brazilian navy is starting construction on a beacon on the rocky islets of Sao Pedro and Sao Paulo, those two dots just north of the equator and 840 miles from Brazil's important penal island of Fernando do Noronha.

Shipping companies for years have endeavored to have the Brazilian government light these rocks, but without success.

AIR TOUR CAMPAIGNS FOR HIGHWAY CONGRESS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An aerial tour of Latin America lasting until mid-September has been undertaken by a federal official in the interests of the sixth international road congress.

O. M. Butler, newly appointed automotive trade commissioner to South America, is making the trip to acquaint officials in highway work with the conference which will be held October 6-11 in Washington.

Plans for the congress first to be held outside of Europe, will be laid before highway engineers in Mexico, Guatemala, Panama, Colombia, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, and Brazil.

NEW PARACHUTE OPERATES EVEN IF JUMPER FORGETS

TORONTO — (AP) — An automatic parachute has been developed in Canada with patents here and in the United States.

It is claimed that this parachute, strapped to the shoulder, may be automatically released, thus eliminating the possibility of the jumper failing to release the parachute. It weighs one and a quarter pounds.

Would Simplify Air Tests

PARIS—(AP)—France is seeking to increase its flying tourists by making fliers' licenses more easily obtainable. The cost and time now required for qualifying as a pilot is prohibitive for most people. Different priced licenses are suggested.

Recent tests indicate that taking narcotics affects the body very much like a blow on the head; in both cases nerve cells become thick and white and cease to function.

Appreciation

Life's a bully good game with its kicks and cuffs—
Some smile, some laugh, some bluff;
Some carry a load too heavy to bear
While some push on with never a care,
But the load will seldom heavy be
When I appreciate you and you appreciate me.

He who lives by the side of the road
And helps to bear his brother's load
May seem to travel lone and long
While the world goes by with a merry song,
But the heart grows warm and sorrows flee
When I appreciate you and you appreciate me

When I appreciate you and you appreciate me,
The road seems short to victory;
It buoys one up and calls "Comeon,"
And days grow brighter with the dawn;
There is no doubt of mystery
When I appreciate you and you appreciate me.

It's the greatest thought in heaven or earth—
It helps us know our fellow's worth;
There'd be no wars or bitterness
No fear, no hate, no grasping; yes
It makes work play, and the careworn free
When I appreciate you and you appreciate me.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Beardsley & Wolcott Manufacturing Company, Waterbury.

A history of the Beardsley & Wolcott Manufacturing company of Waterbury, is essentially a story of the business life of three companies—The Berbecker and Rowland Manufacturing company, The Beardsley Manufacturing company of Waterbury, and the Frank E. Wolcott Manufacturing company of Hartford. This merger in 1925 formed the present company.

The Berbecker and Rowland Manufacturing company—In 1879, Julius Berbecker, then the largest American importer of fancy upholstery nails from France, organized the Tucker Manufacturing company. He felt that the application of American manufacturing methods to the manufacture of upholstery nails would lessen their cost and improve their quality considerably. The factory was located, naturally enough, in Waterbury, the brass center of the world, which supplied the raw material used in the manufacture of the nails. Within four years this company had become the largest manufacturer of fancy nails in the United States. In 1886, H. S. Rowland became a member of this firm and the name was changed to The Berbecker and Rowland Manufacturing company. When the success of the nail business was firmly established, other lines such as drapery hardware and cabinet hardware were added, which took an important place among the firm's products.

The Beardsley company—In 1861, Thomas Fitzsimmons formed the Novelty Manufacturing company in Waterbury, to manufacture metal novelties, bathroom fixtures, etc. In 1918, the Novelty Manufacturing company was purchased by the Risdon Manufacturing company of Naugatuck, and was then known as the Waterbury branch of the Risdon Manufacturing company. During the World war, the Waterbury branch manufactured fuses and bayonet tips for the government. In 1927, Charles E. Beardsley, who was managing the Waterbury branch of the Risdon Manufacturing company, purchased control and a new company known as The Beardsley Manufacturing company was organized. This new company continued to manufacture bathroom fixtures and in addition large quantities of inverted gas mantels and handled large contract orders. When the great demand for cigarette lighters was created, this company completed one order which called for over a million cigarette lighters. They also introduced the Torrid-Wilwear Electric range, the first light duty electric cooking range on the market.

The Frank E. Wolcott Manufacturing company—Frank E. Wolcott organized the company bearing his name in 1927 to manufacture electrical cooking, heating and hairdressing appliances in Hartford. The electrical appliance industry was still in its infancy and by rapidly introducing low priced electrical products it soon placed the newly organized company among the leaders in the appliance field. Their chief products were curling irons, flatirons, waffle irons, etc.

The activities of The Beardsley Manufacturing company and The Frank E. Wolcott Manufacturing company brought them into close contact. In 1929, it was decided to merge the two companies and transfer the Hartford manufacturing activities to Waterbury. Several months after this merger the Beardsley and Wolcott Manufacturing company found themselves severely handicapped for manufacturing space and equipment due to the rapid increase in their business. It was thought advisable to purchase The Berbecker and Rowland Manufacturing company, who had a large and modern manufacturing plant with ample room for the appliance manufacturing departments in addition to the space occupied by their hardware lines.

This merger was accomplished and the greater portion of the manufacturing activities were transferred to the Waterville plant. The Waterbury plant, which the Beardsley Manufacturing company occupied was used solely for manufacturing electric ranges. The officers of the company are:

Mason T. Adams, president; R. W. Reid vice president and general manager; Francis Phillips, treasurer; Rowley W. Phillips, secretary.

The Munich zoological gardens have two hybrid animals resulting from the crossing of a lion and a tigress and said to be the only such animals in existence.

New Headache Treatment Now Established by Tests

Best there is, say thousands

If you are suffering from headache you will find that in nine cases out of ten quick relief comes from thorough cleansing of the system with Feen-a-mint, the modern chewing gum laxative. Men and women all over are turning to Feen-a-mint because it works by an entirely new method — that of internal distribution. Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store. —Adv.

Thick, wavy hair!

You, too, can have long, soft, abundant hair. It's simply a matter of using this easy method; approved by hair-specialists; endorsed by stars of stage and screen; used by millions who haven't time for the more laborious treatments.

Tonight when you arrange your hair, just put a little Danderine on your brush. Then as you draw the bristles through your hair, see how the scalp is toned and soothed. See how the hair becomes softer, easier to manage; how its natural color is brought out; how it takes on new brilliance and lustre!

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; helps stop falling hair; keeps hair and scalp healthy; encourages the growth of long, silky, abundant hair. Five million bottles used a year. That proves Danderine's effectiveness!

With an application on file for his removal as executor because of his failure to submit an inventory, Attorney Edward L. Kelly of Bridgeport reported to Probate Judge William W. Bent of that city this week that the estate of Rev. Charles A. Leddy, pastor of St. Peter's church, totals $44,765. Father Leddy was formerly pastor of the Catholic churches of Mystic and Noank.

Immediately upon receipt of the inventory in probate court, attempt was made to communicate the information to Frank A. Leddy, brother of Father Leddy, who applied last Friday for Kelly's removal. Leddy could not be reached in New Haven where he resides. It is believed that the application for removal will now be withdrawn as a matter of course.

The inventory, made jointly by the executor and two appraisers, the Rev. John A. Costello and Joseph Onkey, does not include the contents of the much disputed envelope, found in Father Leddy's safe after his death, which contained $5,000 in securities. These bonds were the property of Katherine McGrath, his housekeeper, according to directions written on the envelope.

The bulk of the estate is to go to charities and to a sister, Mary Irene Leddy, of New Haven, who is to receive $15,000, a lot in the town of Stonington inventoried at $250, half of the personal effects and two-fifths of the residue.

GROUSE TRIAL DERBY TO BE AT CHESTERFIELD

The derby stakes of the fifth annual field trials of the New London County Grouse Trial club will be run today (Friday) at the Coon club grounds near Chesterfield. The start will be in the morning, and dog owners will have their entries on the ground early. It is expected that 15 dogs will compete Friday. The meet will extend through Saturday, with the all-age stakes being run on the final day.

The entry list is not as large as it would have been had the club been able to have the meet on Sunday for a number of dog owners have told officials of the club that they could not get away from work on Friday, and are to enter their dogs in meets in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, where trials are held on Saturday and Sunday. The regulations of the Connecticut State Fish and Game commission prohibit trials on Sunday in this state. The ruling is further expected to cut down on the number of spectators at today's running, but many are expected at the grounds Saturday.

Dogs which placed first, second and third in the derby stakes of 1929 are to compete in the all-age stakes. The winner of the 1929 derby stakes is Hawestone Rex II. Pequot Squaw placed second and Groton Frank was third.

Foster's Polly, winner of the all-age stakes last year will try to repeat at this season's meet.

Ernest Rogers of Lyme and Dan Walden of Guilford will judge the derby stakes, and Mr. Walden and Harry Eagan of Springdale will judge Saturday. Paul Hudyma, who lives on the Coon club grounds, will be field marshal. He filled that position during previous trials conducted by the club.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMEN TO MEET AT UNITED CHURCH

Mrs. Carl H. Holdredge, chairman of the eastern district of the Council of Congregational Women of Connecticut, attended the meeting of the executive board held at Hartford early this week. Plans were discussed for the fall meetings to be held in the four districts during this month. The meeting of the eastern district, including Windham and New London counties, will be held at the United church, Norwich, on Thursday, Oct. 16.

EDUCATION COMMISSION TO ATTEND NORWICH MEETING

Dr. Ernest W. Butterfield, the new Connecticut commissioner of education, is to be the principal speaker when the School Men's association of Eastern Connecticut holds its first meeting next Tuesday at the Norwich Inn at 5:30 in the afternoon. The meeting will be of an informal get-acquainted character at which discussion of plans for the season will take place. Edwin B. Floyd is in charge of the arrangements.

SALEM LUTHERAN CHURCH CHANGES SERVICES TIME

In accordance with a decision recently reached, the time of the services at the Salem Lutheran church on Hickory street will be changed beginning next Sunday. Services will be held every Sunday morning at 9, and evening services the second and fourth Sundays of the month at 7:30. At the morning services the English and the Swedish will be used on alternate Sundays but all the evening services will be in English. This change is to be tried out three months, subject to final adoption at the end of that time.

NORWICH PASTOR SPOKE TO NEW LONDON ROTARY

Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church at Norwich, spoke on The Kind of Citizen I Want to Be, at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the New London Rotary club on Thursday. Rev. Mr. Cooper spoke on the various phases of what he considered constituted good citizenship and told of things that should be recognized and adhered to by a citizen. He declared that all citizens should have a broad perspective and should think of themselves as being citizens of the world as well as of the nation.

FUNERALS

Mrs. Paul Brumme

With many relatives and friends present, the funeral of Mrs. Paul Brumme was held Thursday afternoon with a prayer service at her home, No. 75 Oneco street at 1:30 o'clock, followed by a service at the First Evangelical Lutheran church at 2 o'clock. Rev. Carl Storek, pastor of the church, conducted the service. The burial was in Maplewood cemetery and Rev. Mr. Storek conducted the committal service. Howard B. Sterry, John Sullivan, Joseph McKenzie, A. J. Clark, Edward Robisky and Reynold Gordon were the bearers. There were numerous and beautiful floral tributes. Undertakers Church and Allen had charge of the funeral arrangements.

STORER FOR PRESIDENT, MISS BUNDY SECRETARY OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

FRANCIS E. STORER
President

The directors of the Norwich chamber of commerce held an organization for the year Thursday evening in the Thayer building, at which officers were elected.

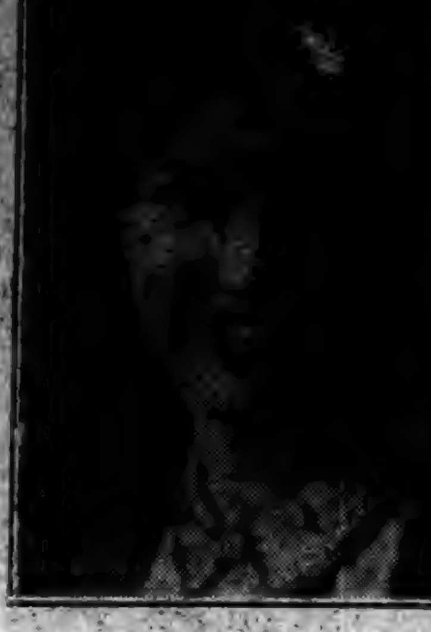
Frank R. Murdy, the retiring president, called the meeting to order and the election of the official staff for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President, Francis E. Storer; first vice president, Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr.; second vice president, Christopher M. Gallup, secretary, Miss Mary E. Bundy; treasurer, Henry D. Johnson.

The new committees will shortly be appointed and the new officers are looking for co-operation on the part of the entire membership in taking up the active lines of work that will engage the chamber through the year. One of the first committees to function will be the budget committee in deciding upon the financial programme that is to be followed.

The newly elected president of the chamber is one of the prominent business men of the city, being president of the Thames Bank and Trust company, a position to which he was elected in December of last year. He came to Norwich from Danielson where he had been cashier of the Windham County National bank since 1915, making an unusually successful record in establishing the Danielson bank as a leading financial institution in Windham county.

Miss Bundy, who has been elected secretary, has been serving as acting secretary for the last six months,



MISS MARY E. BUNDY
Secretary

a position in which she has demonstrated her fitness for the place and won the deserved promotion which was accorded her by the action of the directors.

The board of directors as now constituted consists of six who hold over from last year and six who were elected at the chamber's annual meeting last Monday night. The six holding over are: B. H. Palmer, Jr, William J. Fitzgerald, W. Harry Stebbins, Glenn R. Merithew, A. N. Van Wagenen and Frank R. Murdy. The newly elected are: Charles V. James, Francis E. Storer, Christopher M. Gallup, William H. Cruickshank, James C. Henderson and Jacob Slosberg.

CHESTERFIELD BOY DIES AT NORWICH SANATORIUM

Police Officer Howard Lamphere of Montville received an early call Thursday morning at 2:30 o'clock from officials at Uncas-on-Thames, Norwich, that one of their patients, Cassimir B Chabasinski, 17-year-old Montville boy, was very low and that they had been attempting for a long time to notify the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Chabasinski, of the boy's condition. They could not get anyone in the neighborhood to locate the parents, who reside at the other end of Chapel Hill, near Chesterfield. The hospital authorities asked Officer Lamphere if he could get in touch with the family and he immediately notified the boy's parents, giving them time to see the boy before he died, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

The youth was graduated from Bulkeley high school with the class of 1930. High tribute was paid to the boy by officials of the school, and the news of his death caused great sorrow to his parents and school friends. He was taken ill last June and was admitted to the sanatorium Monday of this week.

CRUELTY AND DESERTION ARE DIVORCED GROUNDS

Cruelty in two cases and desertion in two others are the grounds on which divorces are sought in four suits brought in the superior court for this county.

Ruth Gurney Todd of New London sues Frank Leon Todd of that city on the grounds of cruelty since Dec. 1, 1926. They were married in June of that year. She also asks for change of name.

Alleged cruelty is the reason for which Dorothy Peckham Douglas of New London seeks divorce from Franklin Raymond Douglas of that city. They were married Nov. 12, 1927 and the petitioner also asks custody of a two year old daughter.

Joseph B. Storer of New London alleges that he was deserted April 1, 1926 by Cecelia A. Storer of Philadelphia whom he married Sept. 7, 1925.

Willemena Gates Maynard claims desertion by Harry Maynard on May 18, 1927. Both live in New London and they were married Oct. 23, 1926. The petioner asks for change of name.

HEART BALM SUIT IS BROUGHT FOR $25,000

Damages of $25,000 are sought by Alfrida M. Johnson of New London, in a superior court suit against Carrie M. B. Denison of Groton. Alienation of affections is the charge against the Groton woman. The plaintiff claims that she has been the wife of James Johnson for 15 years and that they resided in Mystic. About January 1st, last the petitioner claims, the Groton woman alienated her husband's affections and that about July 1st last her husband left her and went to Nevada. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have one child, according to the complaint.

SUSTAINS KNEE INJURY WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Struck by an automobile on Main street, near Kies shoe store, early Wednesday evening, Otis Beebe of No. 11 Arcadia street, is a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital, suffering from an injured left knee. He was attended by Dr. Louis T. Cassidy and an X-ray picture of the knee was taken Thursday. He was hit by a Pontiac roadster owned and driven by Joseph P. Connor, Jr., of No. 13 Lincoln avenue.

YOUTHFUL VERMONT FUGITIVES MAY COME THIS WAY

Vermont authorities Thursday night asked the local police to be on the watch for Francis Wilcox, about 16 or 17, who escaped from the Industrial school at Vergennes, Vt. Young Wilcox and another youth, it is charged, broke into a Vermont meat market Wednesday night and stole some meat and provisions. They are also charged with the theft of two automobiles in Vermont and one in Massachusetts.

Brings Suit For Services

E. D. Steele, Inc., of New London, is named defendant in a $2,000 damage suit brought in the superior court by Hibberd N. Alexander, New London accountant. Mr. Alexander alleges that from December 5, 1926, to July 26, 1930, he performed services of the defendant concern, for which he was promised $25 a week. To date he claims the concern has paid him only $2,500, leaving a balance of $1,441.12 due.

SETTLEMENT IN SUIT BROUGHT FOR $25,000

The $25,000 damage suit brought by Thomas A. Sinclair of New London against William G. Barclay, William Barclay, Frank Halliwell of New London and Mabel A. Downes of Groton, was settled out of court Wednesday night at a conference of attorneys representing the plaintiff and the defendants. The case was scheduled to go on trial before Judge Christopher L. Avery and a jury in the superior court at New London Thursday morning but upon being notified of the settlement Judge Avery permitted the case to be withdrawn from the docket and ordered court adjourned until Friday.

The suit arose from serious injuries received by Sinclair on Feb. 24, 1929 when the automobile operated by the plaintiff was struck by a truck owned by the Barclay Tile & Marble Co., and operated by Miss Downes. At the time the automobile, which was owned by Mrs. T. A. Scott, for whom Sinclair worked, was turning into the Scott driveway in Ocean avenue.

Sinclair suffered a fractured left leg, fractured left arm, six broken ribs and other injuries of a less serious nature. His injuries have incapacitated him. Miss Downes was slightly injured in the crash.

Attorney C. Hadlai Hull represented the plaintiff and Attorneys G. Curtis Morgan and W. C. Jainsen represented the defendants.

The amount of the settlement was not revealed.

ROAD CONDITIONS IN EASTERN CONNECTICUT

Road conditions and detours in this part of the state made necessary by highway construction and repairs announced by the Connecticut highway department, as of September 30th, are as follows:

RECEIVING APPLICATIONS OF TO BE MADES

Applications of those to be made voters are now being received by Registrars Tyler D. Guy and Joseph B. Downes at their office in the town hall, probably having received 1,000 written applications so far, and expecting a considerable number more before the limit expires, which is at 5 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon. The law provides that applications to be valid must be actually in the hands of the registrars by that time, but that any received after that time are invalid. For that reason the registrars wish to warn all to be mades to see that their applications are in the hands of registrars and not in the pockets of party workers to whom they may have been entrusted for delivery to the registrars.

The assistant registrars are also at the regular polling places in the districts as follows to receive applications: second, West Side, Frank I. Royce, Thomas J. Kelly; third, Greeneville, Louis H. Geer, William J. Malone; fourth, Norwich Town, A. J. Bailey, Patrick T. Connell; fifth, Taftville, George N. Beardow, Timothy J. Sullivan; sixth, East Side, Howard A. Spalding, Henry Gebrath.

The time for making voters will be on two Saturdays this month, the 11th and the 18th.

NORWICH POLICE WATCH FOR MARLBORO GUNMEN

The Norwich police were requested Thursday night to be on the watch for two gunmen who held up and robbed a motorist at Marlboro during the evening. The gunmen, described as about 22 years of age, were in a Ford or Chevrolet automobile and pulled across the highway in the path of an approaching automobile. Jumping from the machine and brandishing guns the bandits took about $200 in cash from the autoist and then disappeared.

COMMISSION SAYS NORWICH HAS ENOUGH TAXICABS

Denial of the application of Clarence Gwiazdowski for authority to operate one additional taxicab in Norwich has been made by the public utilities commission of the state, which sent the notice to First Selectman William S. Murray on Thursday. The commission finds that there is no present need for more taxicab service here.

A hearing was held on the application on Sept. 25 at which two Norwich taxicab operators, J. S. Bennett and Mrs. Flora C. Mooney, appeared as objectors.

In the decision the commission says in part:

The applicant stated that he now operates one taxicab and that the frequency of demands upon him from patrons during the present year require an additional taxicab in order to take care of such demands. He stated further that on account of his inability to take care of his present demands for service, he has turned over to the other taxicab operators in Norwich several calls daily to take care of service. This testimony was contradicted in part by Mr. J. S. Bennett. The applicant produced also a petition, signed by fifty alleged patrons, requesting that he be authorized to operate an additional taxicab.

The applicant apparently operates a satisfactory type of service in Norwich, and his equipment, according to the records of the commission, is maintained in good condition. The applicant did not, however, produce any records in substantiation of his claim that public convenience and necessity required the operation of another taxicab.

It appeared further from the testimony of the two taxicab operators objecting to the application that the present public demand for taxicab service in Norwich is considerably less than the available supply of taxicabs authorized to operate in Norwich.

Based upon the failure of the applicant to produce evidence showing public convenience and necessity for additional taxicab service in Norwich, the commission is of the opinion and finds that said application should be and hereby is denied, without prejudice, however, to its renewal at a future date upon a showing of public convenience and necessity.

FIFTEEN FROM AMERICA AT WEST AFRICAN JUBILEE

Letters received recently from Mrs. Wain, wife of a former Columbia pastor, now missionary in West Africa, give an interesting account of the golden jubilee of the West African mission of the American board. This celebration lasted ten days and was held at the first station founded. The visiting missionaries and guests camped in grass huts. Mrs. Wain writes: "We went from Chilesso to Bailundo, had a picnic lunch on the way and reached Bailundo about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Hastings of that station had built about 30 huts of grass for the missionary families to live in during the jubilee program, so we moved into one of them. It was our first experience in a grass hut, and we enjoyed it very much. We had three rooms, a bed room, living and dining room combined, and a kitchen. However, the boys did the cooking outside of the hut on an open fire. When all the missionaries and their guests had arrived we had quite a thriving village.

"The jubilee program began with an evening service of welcome, in charge of Dr. William Sanders. Mr. Sanders is the only one of the pioneer missionaries living, and it was an honor and a privilege to have him with us. He has spent a term here over his retirement age and is leaving Angola now. Just think of working here for 50 years! He is now in his 75th year.

"I cannot tell you how much we enjoyed meeting so many folk from the United States and Canada, 15 in all. This was the largest gathering of white folk we have seen since we left home. There were about one hundred, including the missionary guests and our own missionary staff.

"It is difficult to try to tell you anything of the program during those ten days. The cantata, 'Queen Esther,' was given by a chorus of 500 natives directed by Mr. Steed, of one of the Canadian stations. The natives were the best singers from all the stations of the West Africa mission. Their acting was very good, especially when one considers that they have never seen anything of the kind before. Then there was a pageant showing the first mission stations and advancing to show some of the work now done in the various schools. Each station had a part in this and it required three afternoons and one evening to give it all, so you can imagine the work it was to plan it and train the natives for their parts. I think this part of Africa has never seen anything like it. It was estimated that 10,000 natives were present. Can you imagine the sight they made sitting on the hillside above the pageant ground? It was surely a sight worth seeing, for the side of the hill was literally covered.

"We came back to Chilesso May 26 and it seemed good to sleep on a real bed again. You see, we had been gone a month because of making preparations for our part in the pageant, so we had been sleeping on a grass bed all that time. It wasn't half bad but our blankets were beginning to get full of little pieces of grass which felt like a pin point when we struck them just right. Some of our neighbors in the grass huts had a bad time with grass ticks—a very tiny insect looking something like a spider, which attached itself to the skin and sucked the blood.

"On arriving home we began our preparations for receiving the guests here the following week. There were 15 guests from America and we expected 15 missionaries. That made 30 guests for the two families to entertain. We surely had to do some planning to think where we would put everyone and then after we had all moved out of our rooms to give them to the guests we had only about half of them planned for. We made a grass bed and slept in the carpenter shop for two nights in order to give our room to a professor and his wife from Boston. We even put a cot in our wash room, for one man. I surely was glad for my house boys those busy days. My cook outdid himself to give them a parting breakfast that they would remember.

"Sunday morning, the Chilesso church was dedicated. Rev. Mr. Chalmers, from the church in Boston which supports the Neipps, preached the dedication sermon. We feel quite proud of our church, for it is said to be the best in the West African mission. It surely stands as a monument to the hard work and faithfulness of the Neipps.

"Rev. and Mrs. Chalmers of Boston are still with us. They are on their honeymoon now, were married just before they sailed, and we surely are enjoying them."

Rev. and Mrs. Neipps, who are in charge of the station, left early in July for America on furlough, and may not return to the mission field, as they are getting on in years. This leaves the Wains in charge of the station. The Chilesso doctor, Dr. Mary Cushman, has just gone back after a year in America. Mrs. Wain writes: "Dr. Cushman brought a great many things with her, eight cubic tons of freight. She had to pay $500 duty on it. She has brought many things for her hospital, which is to be built as soon as possible, and also things will be of use for the natives. She traveled on the freight boat which brought her things and took 60 days to make the trip from New York to Lobito."

The church in Springfield which is supporting the Wains is giving them a new Ford automobile for use in their mission field. It will cost about $1,000 to get one there.

Gift From The Misses Blackman

The gift of an interesting piece of Royal Worcester has just been made to Slater museum by Miss Charlotte and Miss Elizabeth Blackman of 264 Washington street.

Chimney Fire on Roath Street

A chimney clogged with burning soot gave the local fire department nearly an hour's work Thursday morning at No. 64 Roath street, owned by Mrs. Mary Donovan and occupied by John Brown and family. The call was received at 8:06 o'clock and Engines No. 1, and No. 2, Chief H. R. Taft and Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan responded.

Playground Minstrels Volunteer

At a social under the auspices of St. John's church of Fitchville the minstrel troupe of the Jail Hill playground has volunteered to present the entertainment. Past performances of this troupe have been very pleasing and they are rehearsing to surpass their previous efforts.

MODEL CHICAGO AIRPORT IS FINANCIAL FAILURE

CHICAGO—(AP)—Sky Harbor, called a model airport, and intended to be an exclusive resort for air folk, was so exclusive it went into bankruptcy. The indebtedness was more than $1,000,000 when a trust company put it up for sale.

During the endurance flight of the Hunter brothers, Sky Harbor was popular and profitable. The Hunters used the port as their base.

The airport cost $750,000 two years ago. In addition to 220 acres of ground with hangars, improved runways and lights, there was a modernistic clubhouse which, in summer, housed the fashionable Petruska club.

Drought Salts Water

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—The drought has given New Orleans its first taste of salt in its drinking water. Because of low water in the Mississippi, the tide went up from the Gulf of Mexico, 110 miles distant, and deposited salt water in depressions of the river bed. The sea water mixed with the New Or-

According to calculations made by Martin E. Jensen, who had undertaken the work at the suggestion of the board of water commissioners, the proposed increase of water rates could be expected to yield $30,896 more than the present charges for the use of water.

As the water department net income has been about $15,000 short of meeting the interest charges of about $75,000 annually, this would indicate that that condition would be changed under the proposed rates.

The increases which it is figured could be expected from the proposed increased rates would be $6,373.50 from scheduled rates, $11,347.25 from metered rates, with discount of $354.42, a net of $17,366.443; also $980 from 98 private fire hydrants, and $12,550 from 502 public hydrants.

In a letter, with a report appended, Mr. Jensen writes to Charles A. Hagberg, president of the board of water commissioners, as follows:

"I submit for your consideration the results of quite complete examination of the probable effect on the cash receipts of the water department of the proposed increase in rates and charges for fire hydrants.

"In addition to the figures herewith submitted I have other figures which may be useful, but which I have not included here."

Report of Mr. Jensen

Effect of proposed increase in water rates:

In arriving at a figure approximating the probable increase in cash receipts for the city's next fiscal year, due to the proposed new rates for water, the following examinations were made:—

1. Schedule rate books were checked as of July 1, 1930, to learn: (a) Number of "families" at $5.00 yearly, old rate; (b) number of closets at $3.00 yearly, old rate; (c) number of baths at $3.00 yearly, old rate.

The figures found are used as a basis of determining the increase in cash receipts for the next city fiscal year.

2. Meter books were checked for amounts billed April 1 and July 1, 1930, or one-half year to learn: (a) Tax paid by consumers outside city limits and included in bills; (b) number of consumers paying minimum quarterly charges and the amount so paid; (c) number of consumers using over 50 M cu. feet quarterly and the amount paid therefor; (d) number of cubic feet between 5 M and 50 M quarterly at $1.00 per M, old rate; (e) number of cubic feet, 5 M or under at $2.00 per M, old rate.

3. Amounts billed for the last five years prior to April 1, 1930, to learn that the amounts billed for the last half of the five years equalled within a few dollars, the amounts billed for the first half of the five years. This warrants doubling the figures for the first half of current year to get the figures for the whole year.

4. The discounts allowed for the same five years less the additions to bills for delinquency in payment gave a net discount averaging 2 per cent. This discount figure is used in computing next year's figures.

Probable increase in cash receipts: From schedule rates, $6,373.50, 18.44 P. C.; from metered rates, $11,347.25, 15.50 P. C.; $17,720.75, 16.1 P. C. Ave. Less 2 P. C. net discount, $354.42; increase for regular customers, $17,366.43; add 98 fire hydrants, $10.00 per year, private, $980.00; add 502 fire hydrants, $25.00 per year, public, $12,550.00; total increase, $30,896.43.

NOTE: Ten items in the schedule rate books, amounting to $343.00 for a year are at special rates and the increase could not be determined. This does not materially alter the total increase.

Schedule rate books, July 1, 1930, showed: 3685 "families" increase $1.00 per year, $3,685.00; 3365 closets increase $.50 per year, $1,682.50; 2012 baths increase $.50 per year, $1,006.00; total schedule, $6373.50.

Metered rate books, April 1 and July 1, 1930, showed: 31 consumers of over 50 M cubic feet quarterly, increase $28.00 year, $868.00; 826 consumers paying minimums, increase $2.00 year, $1,652.00; 4,897,560 cubic feet in excess of 50 M quarterly per consumer, $.10 per M $489.36; 16,675 cubic feet, $.50 per M, $8,337.85; total metered, $11,347.25.

Schedule rates increase, $6,373.50; metered rates increase, $11,347.25; both, $17,720.75; less 2 P. C., $354.42; net, regular customers, $17,366.33.

Memorandum cash paid to city treasurer by water department: Total paid to city treasurer to and including March 31, 1930, $1,943,216.05; contra, paid by city treasurer for water department: Reduction of bonded debt from general funds, $155,000.00; reservoirs construction from general funds, $180,061.35; interest paid from general funds, $1,338,967.30; total, $1,674,028.65; balance for city's general expenses, $269,187.40.

Deep River reservoir bond interest. Up to March 31, 1930, $16,415.15 interest on Deep River fund deposits was received by the city treasurer. This amount is not included in the interest paid figure above, $1,338,967.30.

Up to March 31, 1930, the city treasurer has furnished from general funds $74,564.11 to meet Deep River bond interest. This reduces the earlier amount for city's general expenses to the figure given above.

ATHLETICS' HEAVY ARTILLERY PUTS CARDINALS TO ROUT IN SECOND ENGAGEMENT OF TITLE BATTLE

Earnshaw Pitches Brilliant Game While His Teammates Drive Rhem to Cover—Cochrane and Simmons Again Prove Big Guns in Athletics' Attack—Cochrane Gets Second Homer—No Game Today

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Again giving a perfect demonstration of how to recognize old man opportunity and accord him a handsome welcome, Connie Mack's Athletics subdued the St. Louis Cardinals today for the second straight game and continued to move rapidly toward another world's baseball championship.

Picking up where Bob Grove left off in the opening game, but adding considerably more fire-balling, big George Earnshaw shot the Red Birds down on the wing while his long-range artillery support knocked Charles Flint Rhem out of the box and gave the Athletics a decisive triumph by the score of 6 to 1.

Capacity Crowd

Before another capacity crowd of 32,295 roaring cash customers who contributed to a "gate" of $152,735, exactly duplicating the figures for the first game, Earnshaw overpowered the Cardinals decisively, allowing six hits altogether but only two in the last seven innings and bagging a total of eight strike out victims with his rifle-shot speed and baffling curve.

Cards Only Run

The only Cardinal run was due to a homer over the right field wall in the second inning by young George Watkins, in his series debut at bat, after which Earnshaw bore down and easily tamed the St. Louis flock despite a brand of support that fell far below the sparkling standard of the Mackmen yesterday.

Meanwhile the Athletics again cashed in on every opportunity to score. They collected only seven hits altogether but all of them were gathered off the delivery of Rhem in less than four innings and all of them figured in the run-making.

Heavy Hitters Hit

Again it was the heavy artillery that did the damage and struck another severe blow to the hopes of the Red Birds. Mickey Cochrane, a home run hero of the first game, led the big barrage with his second successive circuit clout, in the first inning, after which Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx and Jimmy Dykes, with the helpful bat of Bing Miller, fired the shots that brought about the downfall of the ill-fated Rhem.

The combination of these heavy hitters on attack, with Earnshaw's sharp shooting on the defense, was too much for the Cardinals.

The outcome, however, sent the rampant A's westward tonight, with a commanding lead that they were prohibitive favorites to win their second straight world's championship and their fifth of all time under the leadership of Connie Mack.

The battle will be resumed Saturday in Sportsman's park, St. Louis, with the A's needing only two more victories to clinch the defense of the championship and complete a rout of National league forces that has now reached the staggering proportions of fourteen defeats in the last fifteen series contests.

Only one other team in major league history, the Yankees of 1921, ever lost a world's series after winning the first two games. The victory of the Giants was made possible that year by reason of the limit of nine games, whereas the present regulations restrict the battle to seven games, barring ties.

Just Another Game To Connie

Today it was "just a ball game," in the words of Connie Mack, after all the hullabaloo of the opener and the enthusiasm inspired yesterday by the presence of President Hoover as well as the performances of the home town favorites. Treating it as such, the A's went about their business in a very workman-like manner, sprang out in front before their rivals had a chance to get warmed up and then, behind Earnshaw's great hurling, closed the door to any belated bid by the National league champions.

After Rhem had been shelled into retirement, the Cardinals sent out a brace of relief men, Jim Lindsey and Sylvester Johnson, who throttled the world's champions in their tracks. Not a hit or a run was registered off this pair by the Mackmen in the last four and two-thirds innings, but this brilliant work came too late. The Cardinals meanwhile were nearly as helpless against the fire balls of Earnshaw.

The Cardinals, after being choked off in the second inning after Watkins's homer, with two other hits posted, got only one other man to third in the rest of the game and no one else as far as second base, so complete was Earnshaw's mastery.

Cards Miss Nice Chance

They missed their best scoring chance in the third when two errors, a fumble by Boley and a wild throw by Cochrane, enabled Frankie Frisch to gallop around to third base but the two big guns, Jim Bottomley and Chick Hafey were fanned by Earnshaw to settle matters in this critical juncture.

Not even the "breaks" did the Cardinals any good in this third frame. Bishop dropped a foul hoist back of first base off Bottomley's bat and then Dykes slipped as he was about to grab Hafey's foul fly off third base, giving the batsman another "life" but Earnshaw took matters in his own hands.

Earnshaw Sprains Ankle

On only two other occasions did the big right hander and Swarthmore alumnus appear in the slightest danger as he fooled the Cardinals with the zip on his fast one or had them lunging at his curves. In the seventh, after he had sprained his right ankle in making a put-out play at first base, Earnshaw was momentarily wild, walking Mancuso on four straight balls. Hastily, there was activity in the A's bullpen as Walberg and Quinn warmed up for possible relief duty, but George regained his control.

In the eighth, Sparky Adams revived some hopes in the Red Bird breasts by starting with a line single but they were stifled when Dykes grabbed Frisch's drive and tossed to Foxx to double up Adams.

The attack of the A's, as usual, was brisk, brief and effective. With two out in the first, Cochrane hoisted his homer over the right field wall, after which Al Simmons drove a single to center and galloped home on Jimmy Foxx's booming double to center.

The heavy artillery was up again in the third, but it would not have had a chance to continue the barrage except for a rank error by Frisch on Cochrane's grounder. Instead of being the third out, as it should have been, this put Cochrane safely on first and the A's, quick to seize any opening, produced another run on Simmons' two-base smash to right. Foxx was purposely passed, much to the disgust of Rhem, who reluctantly obeyed his orders from the bench, but the strategy failed to work. Bing Miller rapped a single to left and Simmons raced home.

Dykes handed the knockout wallop to Rhem in the fourth, scoring Boley, who had singled, and Bishop, who had walked, with a double to center.

Lindsey To The Rescue

Lindsey came to the rescue and the rally was abruptly closed, when Gelbert grabbed Cochrane's drive on the run and retired Dykes at second with an unassisted double play.

Lindsey, who singled on his one and only turn at bat, was retired in favor of a pinch hitter in the seventh, George Fisher, after Mancuso had walked and been forced by Gelbert. Fisher merely lived up to the reputation of world's series pinch hitters of recent seasons by striking out with considerable vehemence, swinging in vain at two fast balls and a curve.

Johnson walked two A's, Bishop and Cochrane, in the seventh but regained control, retired the dangerous Simmons, fanned Foxx and then subdued the Mackmen in order in the eighth.

Frisch's double in the first inning was his 43rd hit in world's series competition and gave him a new record, breaking the tie he established at 42 yesterday with Eddie Collins, now the non-playing captain of the Athletics.

Frisch All Alone

The Fordham flash tried desperately at every turn to lift the Cardinals out of their slugging slump but he played a lone hand, except for the one circuit blow delivered by Watkins, and he had no support whatever from Hafey and Bottomley.

These two heavy hitters, like most of their mates, spent the day popping up and out. Bottomley has yet to make a hit. So conspicuous was the way Earnshaw had the Red Birds "skying" their shots that there were only four put-outs at first base on infield plays, three by Foxx and one by Earnshaw himself.

PARIS BASEBALL FANS LOSE HOPE OF CARDS WINNING

PARIS, Oct. 2—(AP)—Baseball fans in Paris who had been inclined to favor the chances of the Cardinals just about lost hope this evening when it was announced that Connie Mack's stalwart Athletics had captured the second game of the world series at Philadelphia.

Several hundred enthusiasts stood before boards in the New York bar and Jefferson Dickson's new emporium and watched the game play by play.

One fan summed up his impression by saying, "This is another Enterprise-Shamrock V affair." Yet there were several who made bets that St. Louis would capture the first game on the home grounds.

COLORFUL JOHNNY GOODMAN QUITS TOURNAMENT GOLF

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 2—(AP)—The high cost of competitive golf has forced another nationally known knight of the links to retire from championship play.

Following closely on the announcement of George Von Elm of Los Angeles, formerly national amateur titleholder, that he would quit amateur tournament play because he could not afford the 10,000 it cost him last year, Johnny Goodman of Omaha, who defeated Bobby Jones in the title event last year, formally withdrew from the big events for similar reasons.

Goodman struggled against poverty to play in the big events. In fact, much of his fame was due to his wayfaring to golfing jousts. Left parentless with nine younger brothers and sisters to care for, Johnny made what he could as a caddy to help keep the family together in a Lithuanian colony back of the stock yards.

He was only 11 then—ten years ago.

Goodman longed for golf while caddying and after getting some encouragement for good shots, he borrowed a set of clubs for a few days, just long enough to win the city championship when he was 16. He had to return the clubs, but an admirer gave him another set and his blood was fired for more links to conquer.

The next year he and two other boys hoped a box car to St. Louis for the trans-Mississippi championship, where he played well but not good enough to win. In 1929 he hitch-hiked to Colorado Springs with better success. Goodman had to appear on the course in the wrinkled clothes he wore on the trip, but he reached the finals by playing spectacular golf.

In that ultimate tour of the links he met James Ward, genial young millionaire, who was clad in custom-made raiment of the elite. But the title went to the best shot maker rather than to sartorial perfection, and Johnny won.

Just how he got to Pebble Beach, Calif., last year to oust Bobby Jones with a brilliant round is not on record, but that he was there the redoubtable Jones can well attest. This summer, he went in a house on wheels to Minneapolis to compete in the national open, and made a good showing living in the portable house built on an automobile chassis near the course.

He had been enabled to enter the University of Nebraska through a purse raised by admirers in Omaha and by selling insurance, he had earned enough to continue school at the university.

But the urge of tournament golf got that money, for he went to Philadelphia on a regular passenger train and lived under a regular roof, but with indifferent success on the links.

Whether his lack of excellent golf was due to too much pampering, or the breaks of the game, he returned to Omaha, where he holds the state championship, without sufficient funds to return to school. So at the age of 21 he announced that he had retired from more than local competition.

AGGIE-WESLEYAN GAME IS OFF; INFANTILE EPIDEMIC

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 2—(AP)—At the request of Connecticut Agricultural college authorities, the scheduled football game between Wesleyan university and the Aggies here Saturday was cancelled today because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Middletown.

President James L. McConaughy, of Wesleyan, where three cases have developed, resulting in one death, agreed to the cancellation, but said that it was contrary to the best judgment of Wesleyan authorities.

MYSTERY SUBSTANCE CUTS RABBIT GOITER

NEW YORK — (AP) — A mysterious substance which prevents goiter in rabbits is reported to the American Chemical society by Emil J. Baumann and David Marne of the Montefiore hospital of New York.

It is not iodine, says the report, and appears to be something not yet indentified in the juices of some plants.

The report suggests that it may be hexuronic acid.

About the time an actress begins to recover from an attack of matrimony she has a fresh one.

Congratulations, Mary, all the success in the world to you.

Yes, sir, folks, Mary's the new secretary of the chamber of commerce. And the chamber of commerce is to be congratulated in its selection.

Turn over the page and take a squint at Mary's picture. Pretty snappy looking girl, isn't she? Yes, the other picture is the new president of the chamber Francis E. Storer.

Looks like Norwich had a real live pair to head the city's largest civic organization. A couple aces, as one would say in poker, and aces are always hard to beat.

You know we brought Francis in from the suburbs to head one of our banking institutions and he did so well that the directors of the C. of C. decided to give him a bigger job.

Please note that I said "bigger job" and made no mention of salary. A president of a chamber of commerce gets only honor and abuse, mostly the latter. Frank Murdy will vouch for that.

No, I can't say whether they favor the Athletics or the Cardinals, prohibition or miniature golf. But I do know that they favor an up-and-coming chamber of commerce such as Norwich should have.

And, speaking of the Athletics, I can safely say that I feel much better than I did last year when I picked the Cubs to win. Those Cubs darn near ruined me financially but I'm slowly getting on my feet this series.

And I hope the fellow that said "If Susie picks the Athletics I'll take the Cards, for Susie never picked a winner," has more than one shirt, 'cause it looks like he was going to need it.

Don't forget, Saturday is Lefty Dugas Day.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 2—Armando Aguilar, Chilian lightweight sensation, and Bobby Mays, New London southpaw, will exchange wallops in the feature bout of 10 rounds at the Thames arena here Friday night. The contest will head an all-star card arranged by Matchmaker Al Weill which will consist of 22 rounds of boxing. The Aguilar-Mays battle has created a great deal of interest and a large turnout is expected. Aguilar, who recently arrived in this country and has taken part in four bouts since then, has defeated Jimmy Goodrich, Joe Trabon, Freddie Huber, and stopped Johnny Ciccone in two beats.

The matchmaker has listed three six rounders. The semi-final will bring together Angelo Tejire, Florida junior welterweight and Jimmy D'Zuro, of the Coast Guard acamedy. In 42 bouts, D'Zuro has stopped 28 opponents. Jimmy Quinn, undefeated Norwich Irishman, faces a tough assignment in Johnny LaBera, rugged Waterbury featherweight; and Young Mangual, Coast Guard Academy, meets Joe Russo, popular Westerly 152 pounder. The opening attraction, a four frame encounter, will show Carmen Knapp, New Haven lightweight, former amateur champion, trading punches with Benny Galinis, of the Coast Guard Academy.

ANOTHER LITTLE SERIES CONTRACT TO BE MADE

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 2—(AP)—A ten-year contract between the American association and the International league providing for a championship series between the pennant winners of the two loops expired with the series which Rochester won today, from Louisville.

Thomas J. Hickey, of Chicago, president of the American association, and a member of the series commission, said tonight the agreement has proved satisfactory and that both leagues at their December meetings are expected to approve a renewal of the contract Mr. Hickey and Charles H. Knapp, of Baltimore, president of the International league, will get together after the December meetings and formally draw up another ten-year contract, according to present plans.

CARDS, CRESTFALLEN AND DEJECTED, ARE SUFFERING BAD CASE OF SHELL SHOCK

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2—(AP)—The hopes of the Cardinals are tumbling, confidence is seeping away, and the cocky, carefree "let's get at 'em" spirit of the Red Birds is giving way to a mild case of the jitters, a sort of shell-shock brought on by the thunder of the Athletics' siege guns.

The Cardinals stumbled up from their underground dugout after the last putout of the second game of the world series as if they had spent a week in a shell-battered trench. They trotted into their dressing room with heads down and tongues silent, awe in their faces at the carnage just behind them.

In a single day the Cardinals have changed from a boisterous, challenging, daredevil gang to a squad of ball players who look as though they think someone has been playing practical jokes on them.

Today the long range guns boomed again and their own bats were silent. Two defeats have piled up against them and the A's are rolling easily along, treating the series as though it were just another set of ball games to be won as rapidly and easily as possible. Two of the Cardinals' best pitchers have been whipped, the hitters aren't hitting and the fielders aren't always fielding. The general result is that the Cardinals are just about licked.

Little Sparky Adams, the mite third baseman who got his hit and turned in one of the fielding gems of the day in throwing out Jimmy Dykes at first in the opening inning, had a word of hope as he trotted into the dressing room.

"We've just got to beat them in St. Louis, that's all," he muttered, but there was more desperation than confidence in his face.

Gabby Street, loquacious pilot of the flock, was as close to absolute silence as he ever gets. There was a glint in his eyes that probably meant someone was going to hear uncomfortable things once that dressing room door closed and he was alone with his help.

"They've just beat us, that's all," he said. "Earnshaw pitched better ball than Grove did yesterday. We made some mistakes and they hurt. We aren't getting any hitting from the top of the lineup. That hurts, too. Bill Hallahan will pitch the first game in St. Louis."

Down the runway that led to the Athletics' dressing quarters, everyone was trying at once to pat the shoulders of "Big George" Earnshaw, brilliant Mickey Cochrane, smiling Al Simmons, the youthful Jimmy Foxx. Connie Mack ducked the celebration and scooted away to his mountain retreat in the club tower as fast as his long 67-year-old legs would carry him.

The A's, while hardly a bashful lot, all were eager to pass along the honors to someone else.

"Earnshaw was marvelous today," Mickey insisted. "He had his fast ball working perfectly. It was a bit dark down there and once we found the Cardinals couldn't hit his speed I didn't call for much else. My home run? A curve ball on the outside a little low."

Earnshaw was very happy but winced when someone patted his right shoulder. It seemed sore after the day's work.

"I just kept burning them in there and they couldn't hit them," he said. "Those Cardinals can hit but it was too dark for them today. I did not hurt myself much when I took Foxx's throw at first on Watkins in the sixth. I just fell over my own big feet. I'm naturally clumsy."

To Connie Mack, reviewing the day's work in his office, it was just another ball game and not a very exciting one at that. Baseball, to the tall tactician, is like playing bridge. Some hands are easy to play and some are hard. Today's played itself.

"The hitting of Cochrane, Simmons, Foxx and Dykes, and the pitching of Earnshaw, especially in the pinches, were the features of the game, but they were just what I expected. Frankie Frisch was the only Cardinal who looked like a batsman and he had little luck. Watkins' homer was a real smash."

Connie thought the fielding gem of the day was Dykes' catch of Frisch's liner to double up Adams at first in the eighth.

"Jimmy always rises to the occasion, either at bat or afield," he said. "If Frisch's liner had gotten away it might have meant some runs. It was hard luck for Frankie. He was very much in the game."

Connie said the fielders had more trouble today than the spectators probably realized.

"The high sky and wind made it hard for them. No one was sure of fly balls. Balls that got away on both sides were excusable."

He had a good word for the manner in which Street has handled the Cardinal club in the two games here.

"He was perfectly correct in removing Lindsey, no matter how good ball he was pitching, because what he needed was runs, not pitching, at the moment. Street has made no mistakes. Unfortunately he can't make hits for his players."

About the time most of the excitement had died down and the players were heading for the trains to St. Louis, Flint Rhem, the tall, lantern-jawed South Carolinian who was belted from the Cardinal box today, came tumbling out of the dressing room. He was mournful and subdued.

"Everything I threw, they hit," he mourned. "No matter what I put on it, they hit it. They're powerful good."

YALE FOOTBALL SHOWS INCOME OF $1,164,964 FOR 1929

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2—(AP)—That greatest of all college sports—football—with more than a million dollars gross income paid all athletic operating expenses and considerable property account at Yale, in the fiscal year ending June 30 last.

This was shown tonight by the report of Harold F. Woodcock, general manager of Yale A. A. The football figures were $1,164,964.38 income, $528,730.94 disbursements, and $636,233.44 net.

The year was the fourth in which gross income from athletics went over the million mark, and the third in which football had gross figures of over a million. For the year ending June 30, 1928, football's gross was $1,033,211.93. The previous year the total gross revenue of all athletics was $1,104,359.

Mr. Woodcock notes in a prefactory way that in the year just closed football revenue took care of all operating expenses of all departments of sport as well as maintenance of properties in addition, a larger reduction than usual was made in items of capital investment for property purchases, expansion of fields and construction developments and improvements. Over $92,000 was paid off on account of purchases of new real estate and the cost of constructing the golf course has been paid in full.

The athletic receipts for the year were $1,270,204.11; less payments to visiting teams, $414,426.23, making gross $855,777.88.

The total expenses were $574,935.02, making net $280,842.86. Adding to this reserve fund of $4,825, and surplus of $1,471.21 on June 30, 1929, the excess of revenue over income was $287,139.07.

Operation of all departments of sports and property maintenance cost $452,503.22; administration and salaries, etc., $51,926.65; Y club ($45,781.59, less revenue including board charges $36,070.73), $9,710.86; interest $17,816.47; taxes, $21,265; insurance, $10,138.56; golf course (maintenance $34,560.92, less dues and fees $29,246), $3,314.92.

BLAKE AND CUYLER STAR AS CUBS EVEN CITY SERIES

CHICAGO, Oct. 2—(AP)—Sheriff Fred Blake had one of his best days today and with the aid of an elaborate bit of punch hitting by Kiki Cuyler, hurled the Cubs to a 4 to 2 triumph over the White Sox, and an even break in the Chicago championship series.

During the gray, misty afternoon, the White Sox batsmen collected just five hits off the sheriff, and two of them came in the ninth, when he thought he could ease off a little with his 4 to 1 lead. He squared himself for relaxing by striking out Pinch Batsman Campbell with men on first and third, for the final out, and letting about 25,000 spectators start for home.

The National leaguers found Cecil Pat Caraway, southpaw of the Sox, a great puzzle until the eighth, when they disposed of him in rapid fashion. With the score tied at one-all, Clarence Blair, who had fanned twice, singled to center. English cracked a single to right, sending Blair to third, and Cuyler came up with the count two balls and a strike and crashed a home run into the left field seats for three precious runs. Cuyler also contributed the fielding gem of the game—a great running one-handed catch of Tate's blast to right in the third inning.

Riggs Stephenson, Woody English and Charlie Grimm were back in the line up and the batting of the former was the best of the day, at least in quantity. He collected three singles in four times up. Cissell got two of the five Sox hits.

They will transfer to Wrigley field tomorrow, where the next three games of the set will be played. Red Faber, veteran spitballer, probably will pitch for the White Sox, with either Bush or Teachout working for the Cubs.

LOU BROUILLARD SIGNS WITH MADISON SQ. GARDEN

DANIELSON, Oct. 2.—Dynamite Lou Brouillard of this town now holds a contract by the terms of which he will hereafter battle under the colors of Madison Square Garden. He signed up in New York yesterday. Lou, however, finds himself in a bit of difficulty from which he must be extricated before he can start fighting in the Garden. He is under suspension both in Connecticut and New Hampshire, and, therefore, for the time being out of luck.

It so happened that Brouillard went over to Keene, N. H., a week ago tonight to take part in a bout. That in itself was an infraction of the rules under which boxing is regulated in various eastern states, for he was scheduled to appear here, and did, the following night. He should have fought within seven days of his appearance here. Then again he lost the Keene bout on a foul, because he socked his opponent a heavy blow after the bell sounded the end of a round. That infraction was not intentional, though, for excited over the sensational milling, the crowd was in an uproar and Brouillard did not hear the bell.

It was understood here this afternoon that Garden officials will begin at once to seek the raising of Brouillard's suspension. They regard him as a wonderful prospect, and would like to make it possible to have him in action at the earliest possible date.

SUAREZ-MILLER BOUT OPENS GARDEN TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—(AP)—Justo Suarez, a husky lad from Argentina who knows not the meaning of defeat, and Ray Miller, a Chicago lightweight with a mighty wallop in his left hand, open the winter boxing season at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, when they meet in a bout scheduled for ten rounds.

Suarez, winner of 19 ring battles and undefeated among the simon-pures in Argentina, will be making his initial appearance in the historic battle but on the basis of three victorious battles in this country he rules the 8 to 5 favorite over Miller. Unknown three months ago, the little Argentine slugger has won his way up the lightweight division with decisions over Joe Glick and Herman Perlick and a knockout victory over Bruce Flowers.

The Argentine will have a five-pound weight advantage but Miller is a tough customer when so inclined. His left hook has stopped many a good fighter but tomorrow night he will be called upon to meet a rushing style of attack as Suarez constantly bores in, letting loose with both fists to whatever part of the body they may fall. Suarez is expected to tip the scales at 137 pounds. Miller will do well if he weighs 132.

TAFTVILLE

FUNERAL

Mrs. Philip Dugas

Funeral services for Mrs. Philip Dugas were held at 8:15 o'clock Thursday morning at her residence, No. 2 South A street, followed by a solemn highm mass of requiem at 9 o'clock at Sacred Heart church. The mass was celebrated by Rev. Omer T. Mandler, assisted by Rev. Frederick R. DesSureault, as deacon, and Rev. Donat Jette, as sub deacon. The music was in charge of Adolphe Dugas of Webster, who sang, at the offertory, Guonod's Pie Jesu. The funeral was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends including a delegation from the Ladies of St. Ann of Sacred Heart church, and the floral offerinks were beautiful and numerous. Burial was in Sacred Heart cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. DesSureault. The bearers were Ernest Bolduc, Telesphore Dupont, Albert Dupont, August Dupont, Ralph Malo, and Azeles Dugas. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaken George G. Grant.

Prokop Tkacz

The funeral of Prokop Tkacz was held Thursday morning at his home, No. 51 Norwich avenue, relatives and friends attending. A high mass of requiem followed at St. Peter and Paul church, Woonsocket, R. I., celebrated by Rev. Y. M. Rewymskbotsky, who also read the committal service at the grave in St. Peter and Paul cemetery, Blackstone, Mass. The floral tributes were beautiful. Undertaker George Grant was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

NORWICH TOWN

The first fall meeting of the Norwich Town group of New London County Home and Farm Bureau, was held all day Tuesday in the vestry of the Methodist church with about a dozen present. Miss Ruth T. Russell gave instructions on making and remodeling hats. The leader, Mrs. William Weaver resigned because of poor health. Mrs. Weaver has faithfully served the group for eight years. She is to be succeeded as leader by Mrs. Arthur Fulton, who was elected at the meeting Tuesday. Those attending carried lunch; coffee was served by Mrs. Fulton, who also entertained Miss Russell at dinner.

The next meeting will be with Miss Florence Browning of Plain Hill. Mrs. Weaver expects to retain membership in the group, but will have no active duty.

Rev. Frank A. Fuller of Putnam, is to be the officiating clergyman at the First Congregational church Sunday, October 5th. Following morning worship there will be a Rally day service by the Sunday school.

Norwich Town acquaintances of Major William M. King of Ballston, Va., who will be 98 Sunday, October 5th, are remembering him with birthday greetings, either letters or cards.

Improved in Health

Local friends called on Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Thursday afternoon at their home in Occum. Former residents of Norwich Town, Mr. and Mrs. Bell returned recently from a stay at Giants Neck, the summer home of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Brown, of Broadway, where they had gone in the interests of Mr. Bells health. He is greatly improved, following an illness of many weeks.

TOM DUFF HERE FOR DUGAS DAY

Some 20 years ago a lad from the sandlots of Taftville stepped to the pitcher's mound up in old Sachem park and pitched himself into the hearts of Norwich baseball fans. This lad was Tom Duff, protege of Jack Tighe, one of the outstanding figures in Norwich's baseball history. Saturday, Tom Duff returns to Taftville and will again step to the mound, but this time he will be pitching against a younger generation.

Tom Duff attracted the eye of Jack Tighe just about 30 years ago. Jack took Tom under his wing and the Taftville lad showed great promise as a hurler with his wide, sweeping delivery. At that time Norwich had an over-abundance of pitchers, so that when Derby wanted a hurler Duff was sent there. Then after working with Derby for a time he entered Niagara university and pitched college ball for three years. After college he went to the McKeesport team in 1905 and then went to Chatham in the Delaware-Lackawanna league. In 1907 he came to Norwich, where he helped the local team in the pennant race.

Local fans will be glad to welcome him back to the diamond of his youth. Duff will pitch an inning or two for the Shyma club in the Dugas Day game against Jim Troland's All Stars. Coming to Norwich with Duff will be Pat Collins, for a number of seasons the property of the New York Yankees. Collins has just completed a season of minor league ball and is to report to the Yanks in the spring.

As an added feature for the fans who attend the Dugas Day celebration on Saturday there will be a baseball auctioned off that has been autographed by every member of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Lefty Dugas brought the ball home with him and it will become the possession of some fortunate fan.

Plans for the celebration have been completed and will be announced in tomorrow's paper.

FOUR CAMPERS FALL AFOUL OF THE LAW

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 2—A beaten path by the Connecticut Pawcatuck river bank led the way to the circus lot camp of four cormorants where all the comforts of the old-time frontier campers were to be had. There was a rude fireplace in the vast open stretches where the brightly painted circus wagons once coralled. On the bushes hung towels for the camp followers, but the path in that direction was not as well beaten as that to the river bank where one of the elements of "spirit" was to be found. On Wednesday one of the camp-followers was reported in that blissful state that he did not know the difference between the meadow land and the deck of his river boat. But that was early in the afternoon. Then came darkness and the campers sought repose—but not for long. A sudden and unexpected raid on the camp was made by State Trooper Dygatt, and the quartet of nature lovers, Edward Duprey, 67, of White Rock, and Edward "Admiral" Corey, 54, Albert Richards, 34, and Charles Trentine 44, were led to the Liberty street lockup.

They were all taken to Stonington and arraigned before Judge William A. Wilcox in the town court on charges of intoxication and vagrancy. They were found guilty and each was sentenced to ten days in jail and the payment of costs. The sentences were suspended for sixty days.

The eldest of the quartet, Edward Duprey of White Rock was taken to Howard today, where he will be cared for.

CORP. BONAT IS MARRIED TO MISS BEATRICE A. BINNS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 2—On Thursday morning Corp. Ernest Ralph Bonat, of the Rhode Island department of state police and formerly of the Westerly police force, son of Mrs. Amelia Bonat of Lowell avenue, and Miss Beatrice Alvina Binns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Binns of White Rock, at 9:30 a. m., were united in marriage at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. J. F. Vincent, S. M., who also celebrated the nuptial mass which followed.

Miss Nora Bonat of Providence, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and Francis Murphy of Lakewood was best man. The wedding marches were played by Mrs. James McMahon, and solos during the service were sung by Martin H. Spellman of Westerly and Joseph Farley of Providence.

The bride wore a gown of white ivory satin. Her tulle veil ended in cap shape and was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaid wore a gown of opaline pink satin, with black velvet hat, and carried butterfly roses.

Following the ceremony at the church, a wedding breakfast for 48 guests was served at Peckham's Inn on Granite street. This was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents in White Rock. The couple left late this afternoon on a wedding trip and upon their return will make their home at Lowell avenue, Providence.

The groom is a well known member of the state police, and the bride has been employed in the accounting department of the South County Public Service Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Binns, parents of the bride, are today observing their own 25th wedding anniversary.

At the home of the bride, 38 Grove avenue, Wednesday occurred the wedding of Miss Ruth F. Wilcox and Frank J. Robertson of New York city, formerly of Westerly. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Lewis A. Walker, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church.

Miss Mary C. Wilcox, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Richard Webber of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Frank N. Wilcox. Roy Wilcox, brother of the bride, and A. Barclay Robertson, brother of the groom, were ushers. The wedding marches were played by a three-piece orchestra under the direction of Mrs. George O. Murphey.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaid wore a gown of light blue taffeta and point d'esprit. She carried garden flowers.

Westerly and Pawcatuck firemen were again called out on Thursday to answer alarms for brush and grass fires on both sides of the Pawcatuck river. In Pawcatuck the Lincoln avenue section was visited by a brush fire and in Westerly several points near the beaches had fires start.

John G. Bill of Providence was a Westerly business visitor on Thursday.

Samuel R. Robinson of Wakefield, R. I., was the Wednesday evening visitor with friends in Westerly.

Mrs. E. A. Freeman left Westerly on Thursday following a summer visit here to return to her home in Troy N. Y.

Ralph D. Eldred, custodian of Camp Hoffman, the R. I. Girl Scout camp, was an Usquepaug visitor in Westerly on Wednesday

Mrs. Nelson Perrin after passing the summer season at her Watch Hill cottage, left Westerly on Thursday to return to her home in Washington, D. C.

John Pescetello of Pawcatuck, who has recently undergone an operation, is again able to be about.

Mrs. W. Williams left Westerly on Thursday morning returning to her home in St. Louis, Mo.

John Cirwein of Wakefield, R. I., visited with friends in Westerly on Wednesday.

Westerly Legionnaires now have two welcoming and information banners across Broad street. On Thursday a tent was pitched on the site of the old Rhode Island hotel where Boston bound Legion convention tourists can get information and rest.

MONTVILLE

Final Averages of Montville Indies

Manager Plouppe's Independents closed up their 1930 baseball season with a win over the Raymond Taftville All Stars at the Gair-diamond at Uncasville last Sunday. The team which is composed of some of the local talent and the pick of the Montville Industrial Twilight league, played wonderful ball this season by winning five games, losing 4 and one tie game. Following is the list of some of the leading players: Awezec and Burelle are tied for home run honors, each collecting one. McDermott leads in three-baggers by collecting two and he also leads in runs scored by scoring 18. There are four tied for two-base honors, Caron, Welchell, Shahan and Nortosky each having two.

Welchell leads in stolen bases with 24 to his credit. Shahan leads the pitchers by winning nine games and losing three. Lamphere has won four games without a defeat. He also has pitched one tie game. Caron won one and lost none. Gero won one and lost one. Ski lost two. Following are the complete records of all of the players:

EASTERN VOLUNTOWN

George Green of Plainfield and Herbert August, gentleman friend of South Manchester, were last week callers at Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood's.

Albert Dawley lost a nice team horse Sept. 30. It broke its leg.

Mrs. William Bitgood saw in the Bulletin that Dr. George Bitgood of New London had a very bad auto accident. He is in Hartford hospital. He is William Bitgood's nephew. We hope to hear of his recovery soon. Hope it isn't serious.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood's son William, at Pachaug, has a very bad leg. He hurt it with a stone. It is quite painful.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bitgood of Pachaug were at Mrs. Bitgood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dawley, Sunday. Mr. Bitgood was sick and had to go home. He has a very bad cold.

Mr. Holmes of Eastern Voluntown was a caller at Mrs. Bitgood's recently.

Lizzie Maynard visited with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Tanner, at Ekonk, Sunday. Also she visited with her brother, Harry, and family at the same place.

Charles Barber and son Joel, of Jewett City are shingling Emma Wilcox's house and shed.

Mr. Armstrong is working in Plainfield in Mr. Hopkin's mill.

Horace Gardner and Mr. Many of Rhode Island are carrying apples to William Bitgood's cider mill. The mill is running on full time. Plenty of apples and plenty of work.

Mrs Bitgood says her lameness grows worse instead of better. Her knee pains her quite bad most of the time. The leg she hurt three years ago the second of October is quite a little shorter than the other.

M. Gray and sister Agnes of Campbell Mills called at the Pine Grove farm recently.

Lee Remington of Oneco has been on the sick list for the past week. He has a bad pain through his shoulder, back and arms.

Farmers are complaining of their wells and brooks drying up. Some have to go quite a ways to get water to drink and cook with. Your correspondent says they don't ever remember seeing such dry times before and they are 80 years old. There was a man went into Mrs. Bitgood's and he told her he was almost 89 years old and he never saw it so dry before.

Mrs. Bitgood was sitting by her kitchen window Tuesday and she looked out and saw two quail. She said she thought they were looking for water and something to eat. Last week there were four pheasants that came into the same yard.

Lee Remington of Oneco has raised 64 bushels of nice potatoes. Two other men planted on his place. One raised over 40 bushels and the other over 30. How is that for potatoes on one little piece of land? He also raised a lot of peppers on one stalk. He had over 200. He picked over 80 large peppers at one time off it. How is that for peppers?

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Penny were playing golf at Waldron, Saskatchewan, when Mr. Penny made a hole-in-one. His chest was still expanding when Mrs. Penny stepped forward and also shot a hole-in-one. The hole was halved.

Sore Throat?

Don't neglect a sore throat! It is uncomfortable at best, and can easily lead to something worse. Make a gargle of Bayer Aspirin. It will ease all soreness, and reduce the infection. But get the genuine Aspirin physicians endorse; look for the Bayer cross stamped on every tablet, thus;

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

THE AGE OF TROUBLE DODGING

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

There have been numerous attempts to classify this age of ours. Most of them have been ambitious and suggestive of the high-brow.

One man would call it the "age of steam," another the "age of electricity," another the "machine age," another the "scientific age," someone else the "age of doubt," and so on and so forth.

My own proposal is that it be named the "age of trouble-dodging."

So far as my limited locomobile functions permit me to get around among my fellow humans of both sexes, I find them pretty unanimously devoted to dodging trouble.

So far as they permit me to listen to their conversation, I find them continually discussing new schemes which will save trouble.

So far as their talk and conduct indicate, their chief ambition is to find quicker and easier ways of doing things, so as to avoid trouble.

By "trouble" I don't mean exactly tribulation, but rather the giving of labor and the taking of pains to ensure desirable results.

For instance, there are two ways to make a cameo. One involves a frequently long search for a piece of chalcedony which has white and red layers; a long and careful reduction to a thin two-tinted disc; then the slow and pernicketily delicate cutting away of portions of the white layer, till only the nobly conceived and artistically defined portrait head appears in relief upon its darker background.

The other way is to melt up two batches of differently colored glass, pour them into a mold and let them "set."

The first way involves an immense amount of labor, pains, trouble and produces a gem worthy to serve as cloak-clasp for the robe of a Zenobia or a Cleopatra; the second way takes about two minutes and produces a thingumy eminently suitable for the catch-basins of the "five-and-ten".

And yet, if the light isn't too strong and your eyes aren't any too good, they look very much alike—at a distance. Whereupon the modern spirit which we hear so much about from both its friends and its enemies says, in effect, "Why sweat and toil to make a real gem when paste is so much less trouble?"

And echo may be expected to respond "Why?" If, indeed, echo hasn't also found the task of repeating fool questions too much trouble and herself retired to take a nap.

The latest device for cutting out trouble is the announcement by a New York food distributing company that it is planning to put on the market canned meals. We already have offered us practically all the materials which go to make up our meals in cans or cartons or bottles or packages. But, even when she has bought all these, the "tired housewife," isn't she as good as "the tired business man?"—still has to open them all and sometimes actually cook some of them.

This is, manifestly, a degree of trouble which she ought to be saved. So she is to be given the opportunity to buy a whole canned meal, breakfast, lunch or dinner, as she may desire, all sealed up in one can, to be opened at one operation and served, I suppose, on paper plates with pasteboard spoons and wooden forks, all of which can be burned up, after use, to save the trouble of dish washing.

This, also, is what is called Progress, with a big P, if you please.

It is to be assumed, of course, that, as the business grows, there will be developed an increasing variety in the compositions of the canned dinners. There will be a corned-beef-and-cabbage dinner for the Jiggses, and a lobster-Newburg supreme for the Vanastorbilts. Also, one can foresee the inclusion of a box of canned heat, so that real fussy diners can warm things up as desired.

As daylight saving, so-called, is understood to be of immense benefit to the "tired business man" already referred to, in giving him more time for golf, so this canned meals idea ought to be of equal value to the quite as "tired housewife," in giving her more time for bridge.

The propagandists of this canned meals idea say, quite openly, that they expect the time to come soon when practically all the dishes served on the American table will be prepared at central factories.

That is their idea of our "manifest destiny," and they propose to get in on the ground floor, where their own pickings will be most plentiful and their own profits most comforting.

Well, why not?

We've all got automobiles, so that we needn't walk any more. And every business building has its elevators so we needn't climb stairs. We don't have to go to the post office for our mail, it's delivered at our doors. We telephone our orders to butcher and baker and take what they see fit to send, instead of picking out the viands ourselves and lugging them home in our own market baskets.

If things keep on, it isn't impossible that we may gradually lose our legs from lack of use for them. What with autos on land and airplanes in the sky and submarines under water, what's the use of legs, anyway?

We're also filled up with already cooked and often "predigested" cereals, with "ready-to-eat" beef and ham and veal and chicken and salmon, etc., and coddled with candies and ice cream and "soft drinks" till we've most of us lost the teeth we have no further need of.

Little by little, but with inevitable certainty, we're giving up the doing things for ourselves, and letting other people do them for us. "It takes too long" to do this; "it's too much trouble" to do that; "let's find some easier and quicker way." That's the preaching and the practice of the age.

Carried out to its logical extent it would result in transforming the race into a community as cosy and comfortable as a colony of tadpoles in a mud-puddle—and almost as honorable!

The whole thing reminds me emphatically of the parable in Kingsley's wonderful fairy-story of "The Water Babies," entitled "The history of the great and famous nation of the Doasyoulikes, who came away from the country of Hardwork, because they wanted to play on the Jews'-harp all day long." These estimable emigrants found a country in the land of Readymade, at the foot of the Happygolucky mountains, where flapdoodle trees grew wild and little ready-roasted pigs ran about squealing to be eaten, and there were warm springs to bathe in, so they didn't need any water-system, and warm caves to sleep in, so they didn't need to build houses, "and so on, and so on, and so on, till there were never such comfortable, easy-going, happy-go-lucky people in the world."

Till the volcano blew up and the pigs all died and the flapdoodle trees were all killed and the caves filled with lava and the lions came in and they had to take to the trees for safety and live on such roots and nuts as they could scavenge when the lions weren't looking and they grew pot-bellied and hairy and forgot even how to talk, so that at last when M. Du Chaillu came upon the last ugly survivor and pointed his gun at him and he tried to say "Am I not a man and a brother?" all he could get out was an "Ubbobooo!" and M. Du Chaillu shot him and called him a gorilla.

The moral of which tale is that devolution downward is just as possible in nature as evolution upward, and that the only way to get to the top is by climbing up-hill, not by sliding down-hill.

Climbing is admittedly harder than sliding. And sliding is admittedly easier than climbing. We have our choice as to which way we'll go. It's up to us. We can toil and sweat and callous our hands and tear our clothes in order to get to the airy heights, or we can tuck our skirts under us and slide smoothly and gracefully down into the swamps, where the mire is soft and the tadpoles and mud-turtles are thoroughly enjoying themselves.

The great question whether Mrs. Grundy and M. Poiret and Prof. Huxley might or might not have made a better world than Nature turned out, we can leave to the theologians and metaphysicians to squabble over. All their disputations won't alter the facts. And it's the facts that we're up against.

Among those facts are a few that we'll show wisdom not to overlook. Such as the fact that victory comes only after battle; that wages have to be earned before they can be paid; that the only discoverable way to develop muscle and manhood is by exercising both to the last limits of endurance; that the clam will never become an eagle by snoozing its life away in the off-shore mud, etc., and so forth.

It may be comfortable to do things the easiest way. But it's admirable and honorable to do them the right way, regardless of cost.

To come back to the canned meals proposition; there is no doubt that a thousand dinners can be cooked cheaper and easier in one big factory than in a thousand separate kitchens. There is also no doubt, human nature being what it is, that the factories, to magnify their own profits, will inevitably tend to the use of poorer meats and stale vegetables and older eggs and renovated butter and synthetic instead of honest flavors.

It'll all taste alike, and the taste will be that of the factory cooker and not of the home range.

D'ye s'pose any dinner-factory can ever turn out a loaf of "rye 'n injun" such as "mother used to make?" Or a hundred thousand modern mothers could make—if it wasn't "too much trouble?"

I SEE YOU ARE WASHING CLOTHES THE NEW WAY NOW
YES. THIS WAY SAVES SCRUBBING AND GETS THEM WHITER
WHAT IS THE NEW WAY?
WITH RINSO, MOTHER!
RINSO SUDS SOAK OUT THE DIRT AND SAVE ALL HARD WORK

You, too, can now have whiter washes—easily!

HERE'S a soap that practically does the wash for you. Loosens the dirt so that all you need to do is rinse. Clothes soak so white and clean, you don't need to bother about boiling.

This way saves the clothes—and washes them much, much whiter. Safely.

Cup for cup, Rinso gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps. Great, either in tub or machine; the makers of 38 famous washers recommend it. Get the BIG package. You'll like Rinso for dishes—for all cleaning.

Piles Go Quick

Piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Only an internal medicine can remove the cause. That's why external remedies and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID succeeds, because it relieves this congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription has such a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief even in chronic and stubborn cases, that Lee and Osgood say try HEMROID at our expense. Your Pile suffering must end or money back.

The man who does no harm in the world does but little good.

STERLING HILL

Frosts were reported from the low lands Wednesday morning.

Visitors at Joseph Gallup's Sunday were Mrs. Haynor and a friend from Troy, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Almond Colvin and Miss Bertha Carr, of Moosup, William Carr of Providence, Lawrence Browning and a friend of Norwich.

A service was held in Sterling Hill church Tuesday evening. Mrs. Haynor, a former resident of Oneco, conducted the service, which was very helpful and inspiring. All were glad to meet Mrs. Haynor again after many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Tanner and family attended Natchaug grange fair at Chaplin.

Mrs. Adela Gibson has been visiting relatives in Centerville and attended Fiskville fair.

Richmond Young is enrolled as a student at Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs.

Active at 84.

In spite of the dry weather Joseph Gallup has had a fine vegetable garden which he has cared for alone. He has just finished gathering his crop of fine potatoes, some of which weigh over two pounds. Mr. Gallup is in his 85th year.

Six or seven tomatoes co-operated in the growing of a tomato that resembles a doughnut. It happened in the tomato patch of Miss Mary Toft down in Gorham, Me. The tomatoes grew in such a way that they formed a circlet with a hole in the middle.

BLENDED...TO BUILD VIGOROUS HEALTH

Do you want more energy?

Then try a meal of which Master Bread is a major part. It will build muscle and energy to take you through your hardest day's work with vigor to spare.

It is ideal for growing children, and its delightful blended flavor makes them ask for it again and again.

You'll agree, when you try it, that the Pilgrim Bakers have mastered the method of proper blending—in Master Bread—for flavor, lasting freshness, and health-building nutriment.

Broughton and Miss Pauline Chesebro of Stonington. Mrs. G. S. Costello and Mrs. A. O. Colby were able to attend the morning sessions only. Miss Julia Haley, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs. Joseph Noyes and Miss Grace D. Wheeler, attended as guests.

At the County Republican club outing held at Red Top, Harvard quarters, Gales Ferry, among those attending from Mystic and Old Mystic were Mr. and Mrs. George F. Costello, Mrs. A. O. Colby, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Colby, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Swain, Louis P. Allyn, Dr. Louis M. Allyn, Gurdon Gates, John Fribance, John R. Wheeler, John B. Grinnell, Courtland C. Potter and Charles Noyes.

FUNERAL.

Mrs. Susan Jackson.

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Jackson were held at her home in Burnett's Corners, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with a very large attendance of relatives, friends and neighbors. The officiating minister was Rev. Homer C. Moore, pastor of Old Mystic Methodist church. During the service, by Mrs. Jackson's request, Mrs. Flora Ingram and Miss Evangeline Watrous sang Face to Face and Jesus Is Calling. They were accompanied at the organ by Mrs. James Watrous. The bearers were John Yetter, Charles "E." Stapelyn and John Godfrey of Burnett's Corners, and George Girkling of New London. Burial was in Wightman cemetery at Burnett's Corners. There were beautiful floral tributes. Sympathy is felt for her husband who survives.

At the benefit whist given in K. of P. hall by the Pythian Sisters, Tuesday evening, five tables were in play. High scores at straight whist were made by Mrs. James Kieburg and James Hempstead; low by Mrs. Benjamin Comeau and Charles Anderson. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Donath won the first prizes in bridge and second prizes were won by Mrs. Treffly A. Morin and H. P. Wilson. Refreshments were served by the committee, Mrs. Henry Ritzie, chairman.

The Mystic Garden club meet Tuesday afternoon next at Pequotsepos, with Mrs. N. Stanton Gates. Members are to bring plants and seeds for exchanging, also bouquets of seed pods.

Public Lecture.

A lecture, free to the public, will be given in the auditorium of the Mystic-Noank library in Mystic, Friday evening October 17th, by Prof. Percy H. Boynton of Chicago university, who spends the summers with his wife at their home in Old Mystic. He speaks under the auspices of the trustees and auxiliary of Mystic-Noank library.

Mrs. Harry Allyn has returned from a short visit with New York relatives.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church, Old Mystic, met with Mrs. Ralph Hodgson, Wednesday afternoon. Reports of the secretary, Mrs. Emily B. Holmes; treasurer, Mrs. Etta S. Wheeler; sick committee, Mrs. Holmes; and work committee were given. The hostesses served cakes and tea. There were ten members present.

William W. Keigwin, mail carrier for the local post office is having his vacation and Louis Brunke is covering the route.

Miss Elizabeth Fitch, who has been spending the summer at her cottage on Lord's Point, has returned to her home in the village.

The first meeting of the School of Religious Education, held Tuesday evening in the Congregational parish house, was very well attended. The meeting opened at 7.30 with Rev. Louis J. Shepler, pastor of Union Baptist church, in charge. A lecture on The Old Testament was given by Rev. Robert J. Chrystie, Ph. D., of the Methodist church. At 8.40 Rev. William G. Fagan of the Congregational church gave a talk on The Pupil. The next meeting will be held Tuesday evening, in the Methodist church.

Miss Josephine Denison of Worcester, and Miss M. F. Lee of Great Barrington, Mass., have returned to their homes after visiting friends here.

Delegates Chosen.

The monthly covenant meeting of the Union Baptist church was held Wednesday evening in the vestry. After the prayer meeting, a short business meeting was held during which the report of the treasurer, G. S. Richmond, was given and delegates for the Connecticut Baptist state convention, to be held in New London, the middle of October were chosen. From the Sunday school, Sands S. Fish, superintendent, and Miss Jessie Fish, superintendent of the intermediate department were chosen. From the church, Mrs. Elmer C. Hall, Russell W. Potter, J. Harold Thorpe, with the following alternates: Miss Harriet Fish and Elmer C. Hall and Mrs. L. J. Shepler. Cards have been sent to all the members asking them to try to attend services in the church next Sunday, which is to be Rally Day.

Persons holding stock in the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad, received their dividends Wednesday, October 1.

Local members listened in to station WTIC, Hartford, Thursday afternoon at 2.45 o'clock and heard another broadcast sponsored by the Connecticut D. A. R. Mrs. Ellie Newton Sperry, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a past state regent of the New York D. A. R., gave a very interesting talk on Our Republic.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. MacPherson have returned to their winter home in Pennsylvania, after spending the summer in the village.

Water Situation Serious.

Unless rain falls very soon, there will be a serious time getting water to drink. When wells get so low, it is very apt to cause a great deal of sickness. Many residents in the community who have wells are obliged to carry water great distances, on account of their own supply having dried up. The ponds are exceptionally low.

Most Nurses Use New Face Powder

MELLO-GLO, the new wonderful French Process Face Powder, is preferred by nurses because of its purity, and they say it does not make the skin dry and drawn. Stays on longer, keeps shine away, and is very beneficial to the complexion. You will love MELLO-GLO Face Powder. Porteous & Mitchell Co.

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT HOOVER ON THE BUSINESS PROBLEMS OF THE COUNTRY

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The text of President Hoover's address, delivered here tonight at the 56th annual convention of the American Bankers' association, follows:

Members of the American Bankers Association and Guests:

I am glad to meet with this assembly of representative bankers from every state and almost every county of our country. During the past year you have carried the credit system of the nation safely through a most difficult crisis. In this success you have demonstrated not alone the soundness of the credit system but also the capacity of our bankers in emergency.

We have had a severe shock and there has been disorganization in our economic system which has temporarily checked the march of prosperity. But the fundamental assets of the nation, the education, intelligence, virility, and the spiritual strength of our country in lands and mines are undiminished. Scientific discovery and invention have made further progress. The gigantic equipment and unparalleled organization for production and distribution are in many parts even stronger than two years ago.

Though our production and consumption has been slowed down to 85 or 90 per cent of normal, yet by the very fact of the steady functioning of the major portion of our system do we have the assurance of our ability and the economic strength to overcome the decline. The problem today is to complete the restoration of order in our ranks and to intensify our efforts to prevent such interruptions for the future.

And it is not a problem in academic economies. It is a great human problem. The margin of shrinkage brings loss of savings, unemployment, privation, hardship, and fear, which are no part of our ideals for the American economic system.

Causes Of Depression

This depression is world-wide. Its causes and its effects lie only partly in the United States. Our country engaged in overspeculation in securities which crashed a year ago with great losses. A perhaps even larger immediate cause of our depression has been the effect upon us from the collapse in prices following overproduction of important raw materials, mostly in foreign countries. Particularly had the planting of rubber, coffee, wheat, sugar, and to a lesser extent cotton, expanded beyond world consumption even in normal times. The production of certain metals, such as silver, copper, and zinc, had likewise been overexpanded.

These major overexpansions have taken place largely outside of the United States. Their collapse has reduced the buying power of many countries. The prosperity of Brazil and Colombia has been temporarily affected from the situation in coffee; Chile, Peru, Mexico, and Australia from the fall in silver, zinc, and copper. The buying power of India and China, dependent upon the price of silver has been affected. Australia, Canada, and the Argentine have been affected by the situation in wheat; Cuba and Java have been depressed by the condition of the sugar industry. East India generally has suffered from the fall in rubber. These and other causes have produced in some of the countries affected some political unrest. These economic disturbances have echoed in slowed-down demand for manufactured goods from Europe and ourselves, with inevitable contribution to unemployment. But the readjustments in prices, which were also inevitable are far along their course. Most of these commodities are below the level at which sufficient production can be maintained for the world's normal needs, and therefore sooner or later must recover.

Must Lead World To Recovery

Because the present depression is world-wide and because its causes were world-wide, does not require that we should wait upon the recovery of the rest of the world. We can make a very large degree of recovery independently of what may happen elsewhere.

I should like to remind you that we did precisely that thing in 1921. We were then experiencing the results of the collapse of war inflation in all commodities and in every direction. We had less organized cooperation between the business community and the government to help mitigate that situation. The rest of the world was in chaos from the war far more menacing both to economic and political stability than anything confronting us today. Our difficulties at that time were far more severe than they are at present. The commercial banks particularly were sufferers from a large volume of frozen credits and enjoyed nothing to compare with the comfortable liquidity that prevails today. We then had overexpansion and large stocks in most commodities; today with one or two exceptions we are free from this deterrent. But we led the world in recovery. It was our independent recuperation from that depression, and the economic strength which we so liberally and largely furnished to other countries, that was the very basis for reconstruction of a war-demoralized world.

Free Ourselves Of World Influences

We are able in considerable degree to free ourselves of world influences and make a large measure of independent recovery because we are so remarkably self-contained. Because of this, while our economic system is subject to the shock of world influences we should be able, in large measure, to readjust ourselves. Our national production is over one-third of the total of the whole commercial world. We consume an average of about 90 per cent of our own production of commodities. If, for example, we assume a restored normal home consumption and held even our present reduced basis of exports, we should be upon a 97 per cent of normal business basis. Even this illustration does not represent all of our self-contained strength.

We shall need mainly to depend upon our strong arm for recovery, as other nations are in greater difficulty than we. We shall need again to undertake to assist and cooperate with them. Our imports of commodities in the main depend upon our domestic prosperity. And forward movement in our recovery creates a demand for foreign raw materials and goods and thus instantly reacts to assist other countries the world over.

I wish to take your time to discuss some of the pivotal relationships of the bankers not only to the immediate problem of recovery but to the wider problem of long-view business stability. Any discussion of the one involves the other.

Rebukes Pessimists

Before I enter upon that subject, however, I wish to say that no one can occupy the high office of president and conceivably be other than completely confident of the future of the United States. Perhaps as to no other place does the cheerful courage and power of a confident people reflect as to his office. There are a few folks in business and several folks in the political world who resent the notion that things will ever get better and who wish to enjoy our temporary misery. To recount to these persons the progress of cooperation between the people and the government in amelioration of this situation, or to mention that we are suffering far less than other countries, or that savings are piling up in the banks, or that our people are paying off installment purchases, that abundant capital is now pressing for new ventures and employment, only inspires the unkind retort that we should fix our gaze solely upon the unhappy features of the decline. And, above all, to chide the pessimism of persons who have assumed the end of these mighty forces which for 150 years have driven this land further and further toward that great human goal—the abortion of intellectual and economic poverty—is perhaps not a sympathetic approach. Nevertheless, I always have been, and I remain, an unquenchable believer in the resistless, dynamic power of American enterprise. This is no time—an audience of American leaders of business is no place—to talk of any surrender. We have known a thousand temporary setbacks, but the spirit of this people will never brook defeat.

Not A New Experience

Our present situation is not a new experience. These interruptions to the orderly march of progress have been recurrent for a century. And apart from recovery from the present depression, the most urgent undertaking in our economic life is to devise further methods of preventing these storms. We must assure a higher degree of business stability for the future.

The causes advanced for these movements are many and varied. There is no simple explanation. This is not an occasion for analysis of the many theories such as too little gold or the inflexible use of it. Whatever the remote causes may be, a large and immediate cause of most hard times is inflationary booms. These strike some segment of economic life somewhere in the world, and their re-echoing destructive results bring depression and hard times. These inflations in currency or credit, in land or securities, or overexpansion in some sort of commodity production beyond possible demand even in good times—may take place at home or abroad—but they all bring retribution.

Cause And Remedy

The leaders of business, of economic thought, and of government have for the last decade given earnest search into cause and remedy of this sort of instability. Much has already been accomplished to check the violence of the storms and to mitigate their distress. As a result of these efforts the period of stable prosperity between storms is longer, the period of storm is shorter, and the relief work far more effective. But we need not go beyond our situation today to confirm the need for further effort.

The economic fatalist believes that these crises are inevitable and bound to be recurrent. I would remind these pessimists that exactly the same thing was once said of typhoid, cholera, and smallpox. If medical science had sat down in a spirit of weak-kneed resignation and accepted these scourges as uncontrollable visitations of Providence, we should still have them with us. This is not the spirit of modern science. Science girds itself with painstaking research to find the nature and origin of disease and to devise methods for its prevention. That should be our attitude toward these economic pestilences. They are not dispensations of Providence. I am confident in the faith that their control, so far as the causes lie within our own boundaries, is within the genius of modern business.

Measures Of Relief

We have all been much engaged with measures of relief from the effect of the collapse of a year ago. At that time I determined that it was my duty, even without precedent, to call upon the business of the country for coordinated and constructive action to resist the forces of disintegration. The business community, the bankers, labor, and the government have cooperated in wider spread measures of mitigation than have ever been attempted before. Our bankers and the reserve system have carried the country through the credit storm without impairment. Our leading business concerns have sustained wages, have distributed employment, have expedited heavy construction. The government has expanded public works, assisted in credit to agriculture, and has restricted immigration. These measures have maintained a higher degree of consumption than would have otherwise been the case. They have thus prevented a large measure of unemployment. They have provided much new employment. Our present experience in relief should form the basis of even more amplified plans in the future. But in the long view the equally important thing is prevention. We would need have less concern about what to do in bad times if we discovered and erected in good times further safeguards against the excesses which lead to these depressions.

Praises American Business

American business has proved its capacity to solve some great human problems in economics. The relation between employer and employe has here reached a more stable and satisfactory basis than anywhere else in the world. We have largely solved the problem of how to secure the consumption of the gigantic increase of goods produced through that multiplication of per capita production by the application of science and the use of labor-saving devices. That solution has been attained by sharing the savings in production costs between labor, capital and the consumer, through increased wages and salaries to the worker and decreased prices to the consumer with consequent increased buying power for still more goods. Every step in that solution is a revolution from the older theories of business.

We may safely assume that our economic future is safe so far as it is dependent upon a competent handling of problems of productivity. But one result is to render further advance toward stability even more urgent, because with higher standards of living the whole system is more sensitive and the penalties of instability more widespread.

There is no one group of which the public expects so much in assuring stability as the bankers, because in the vortex of these storms many values lose their moorings. Nor can any other group contribute so much in constructive thought and action to solve the problem either today or in the long run.

Banker General Adviser

Three most important relationships to these business movements lie in the banker's field. The first is what, for lack of better terms, we call psychology—both that contagious overoptimism which accelerates the inflation of the boom and those depths of fear and pessimism which deepen and prolong the depression. The American banker has come to occupy a unique position in the strategy of stability, for he is the economic adviser of American business. He is the listening post of economic movement. He in large measure makes or tempers its psychology.

I do not suppose the banker has consciously sought this new function of general adviser, but such he has become. His business is no longer the simple function of discounting commercial bills and lending money on first mortgages. That is today but part of his work. These days, when he establishes a line of credit to a business, or furnishes loans upon securities of a business, or advises investment in a business, he must know the elements which make for success and failure of that business. And he must form judgment as to the future trend of business in general. On the other side, the American business men, big and little, the farmer, and the labor leader are coming more and more to consult with the banker on problems of his business. Whatever the origin of this position may be, the banker is now the economic guide, philosopher, and friend of his customers, and his philosophy can dampen our enthusiasm and equally it can lift our courage and hope.

Banker's Unique Position

The second point of the banker's unique position in relation to business trends lies in the part which credit plays in the whole business process. Obviously during the inflationary period the use of credit for unwise expansion and speculation draws away the supply of credit from normal business. It imposes upon normal business an interest rate which strangles the orderly commerce of the country. Commerce sickens under this pressure, its pace slackens and contributes to collapse. Therefore, I wish to emphasize what has long been recognized—that is, that the flow of credit can accelerate and it can retard such movements. Equally a wise direction movements. Equally a wise direction to recovery from depressions.

The third reason why this is so much a banker's problem is that banking is the one great line of business activity that is in itself interconnected. Each credit institution shares the credit burdens of others and all are largely coordinated through national organization—the federal reserve system.

The reserve system and its member banks and the treasury participation in fact form a widespread cooperative organization, acting in the broad interest of the whole people. To a large degree it can influence the flow of credit. Bankers themselves are represented at each stage of management. And, in addition, in the various boards and advisory committees represent also industry, agriculture, merchandising and the government. The reserve system therefore furnishes an admirable center for cooperation of the banking business with the production and distribution industries and the government in the development of broad and detached policies of business stability.

You have gained much experience from the two great crises of recent years. I trust you will seriously and systematically consider what further effective measures can be taken either in the business world or in cooperation with the government in development of such policies, both for the present depression and for the future. I know of no greater public service. It is a service to every business man, to every farmer, to every worker, whether at the desk or bench. I am not assuming you can do it all, or that all disturbances, domestic or foreign, can be wholly prevented or cured.

The government should cooperate. It plays a large part in the credit structure of the country. Its fiscal system has most important bearings. For instance, I believe an inquiry might develop that our system of taxes upon capital gains directly encourages inflation by strangling the free movement of land and securities.

The regulatory functions of the federal and state governments also have a bearing on this subject through their effect upon the financial strength of the railways and utilities. During a period of depression the soundest and most available method of relief to unemployment is expansion of public works and construction in the utilities, railways, and heavy industries. The volume of possible expansion of construction in these private industries is about four or five times that in public works. During the present depression these industries have done their full part, but especially the railways have been handicapped by some provisions of the Transportation Act of 1920. With wider public vision the railways could be strengthened into a greater balance wheel of stability. We have need to consider all of our economic legislation, whether banking, utilities, or agriculture, or anything else, from the point of view of its effect upon business stability.

Must Cure Abuses

I have never believed that our form of government could satisfactorily solve economic problems by direct action—could successfully conduct business institutions. The government can and must cure abuses. What the government can do best is to encourage and assist in the creation and development of institutions controlled by our citizens and evolved by themselves from their own needs and their own experience and directed in a sense of a trusteeship of public interest. The federal reserve is such an institution.

Without intrusion the government can sometimes give leadership and serve to bring together divergent elements and secure cooperation in development of ideas, measures, and institutions. That is a reenforcement of our individualism. It does not cripple the initiative and enterprise of our people by the substitution of government.

Proper cooperation among our people in public interest, and continuation of such institutional growths, strengthen the whole foundation of the nation, for self-government outside of political government is the truest form of self-government. It is in this manner that these problems should be met and solved.

Influence Of Bankers

I wish to revert to the influence of the bankers, through encouragement and leadership, in expedition of our recovery from the present situation. You have already done much, and at this juncture the responsibility of those in control of money and credit is very great. Without faith on your part and without your good offices, the early return to full prosperity can not be accomplished. This depression will be shortened largely in the degree that you feel that you can prudently, by counsel and specific assistance, instill into your clients from industry, agriculture, and commerce a feeling of assurance.

We know that one of the prerequisites of ending a depression is an ample supply of credit at low rates of interest. This supply and these rates are now available through the cooperation of the banks and the federal reserve system.

Unnecessary Fears

The income of a large part of our people is not reduced by the depression but it is affected by unnecessary fears and pessimism, the result of which is to slacken the consumption of goods and discourage enterprise. Here the very atmosphere of your offices will affect the mental attitude and, if you please, courage, of the individuals who will depend upon you for both counsel and money. Many, perhaps all of you, have been through other periods of depression. Those of you who have had occasion to review the experience of the past will, I believe, join in the thought that there comes a time in every depression when the changed attitude of the fi-

A STEADY DECLINE IN STOCK PRICES PARTIALLY OFFSET IN LATE TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(AP)—A steady decline that had all but eliminated yesterday's advance in stock prices came to a sudden halt in the late trading today and the market rebounded sharply, although it failed to make full recovery and closed lower than yesterday's final prices. The average loss was nearly 2 points.

Profit-taking from the Wednesday rally began promptly at the opening and continued in a constant dribble until the last 15 minutes. The decline, which reached 3 points or more in the leaders, encouraged short selling and also brought sales of stock that had been held for just such a recovery as yesterday's.

Activity was desultory, although the pace increased on the covering movement. Sales totaled 2,315,700 shares.

Wall street was particularly interested in the loan statistics published after the session. Federal Reserve brokers' loans had shown a gain of $120,000,000 for the first three weeks of September despite the heaviness of the markets. Consequently the monthly stock exchange member borrowings figures, which are much more inclusive than the loan totals for member banks, were awaited eagerly. The figures showed that these loans had declined $117,000,000 last month. However, federal reserve brokers' loans dropped $159,000,000 in the week ended October 1, so that the net decline for the month in this calculation was $39,000,000.

The size of the decrease in member borrowings which are now less than half of the second total established on September 30, 1929, was taken as a barometer of the liquidation in the market during the month. Failure of reserve bank loans to go down until the past week reflected to a considerable extent borrowings from brokers to meet September 15 income tax payments.

The weakness of the earlier hours found many prominent stocks within a point or two of their Tuesday lows. Pressure was insistent at times against U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Electric, American Can and Bethlehem Steel, while some of the volatile specialties tumbled as much as 9 points. The rally, however, lifted the level 1 to 6 from the bottom and a few important shares finished with small gains. International Telephone met good support after Wednesday's weakness and gained 2 points net.

Investment rails were among the day's softest stocks and there were final declines of 2 to 3 points in Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Southern Railway and Northern Pacific. The last named, together with such miscellaneous issues as International Harvester, United Fruit, American Locomotive, Postal Telegraph preferred, Richfield Oil and Sloss Sheffield and Gulf States Steel touched new lows for the year. Selling of United Fruit was based on the company's third quarter earnings statement, which showed only 46 cents a share against $2.26 a year ago.

Most of the leaders, especially in the utility group, made good recoveries. American Telephone regained two thirds of its maximum drop and was off only a point. American Can, down 3 points closed 3-8 lower, while U. S. Steel reduced a break of 3 5-8 to 2 1-8. General Electric was rather heavy, closing more than 2 points lower. Westinghouse Electric and Standard Oil of New Jersey were up 1-8 net. Diamond Match gained 4 and Auburn Auto nearly 3. Issues off 2 to 3 included International Harvester, Case, Johns Manville, DuPont, American Smelting and Gillette, General Motors, Radio and Anaconda lost about a point.

The recovery in stocks was aided by the strength of the commodities. Wheat rallied a cent net on the improvement shown by Liverpool and a better export demand, while corn closed 1 1-2 to 2 1-4 cents higher. Cotton, after early easiness, steadied and was up 7 to 10 points net.

Foreign exchanges improved. The French franc made its first rally in a week and the Japanese yen went to a new 1930 high.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—(AP) — Despite lively profit taking, wheat scored fresh price bulges today, with reports current that foreign countries were negotiating for big purchases on long time credit. Europeans were estimated to have taken more than 2,000,000 bushels of North American wheat today, including some from the United States. Chairman Legge of the federal farm board was quoted as saying that countries overseas would purchase 100,000,000 bushels more wheat this winter, and that he thought they would have no trouble financing that amount.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1c1 3-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed at 1 1-8a2c advance, oats 1-8a3-8c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 85c.

Provisions went higher on account of unexpected reductions shown in Chicago stocks of lard.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Sept. 30 were $7,095,241.56; expenditures $5,956,326.72; balance $381,160,294.28.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.— (AP) —Curb shares fluctuated erratically and closed irregularly lower in quieter trading company. Transactions aggregated 525,700 shares, nearly 200,000 less than yesterday.

In view of the announcement of the suspension of Piperno and company, for insolvency, a firm specializing in curb securities, and holding two curb memberships, the market was regarded as maintaining a fairly even keel. Losses in the more active stocks were rather extensive for a time, but were reduced by a brisk rally in the final transactions.

As a result of the Piperno suspension, trading was suspended in the shares of Rainbow Luminus Products, for which the firm was the principal market sponsor. Trading will probably be resumed in these shares shortly.

Electric Bond and Share, after selling off 2 1-2 points, rallied to close at 67, off only 3-4. American Super Power closed at a fraction higher at 19. Central Public Service and Public Utility Holding were firm. American Gas and Electric dropped 4 points, then rallied 2. United Light A, however, dropped 2 points, and closed at the bottom. In the natural gas group, Memphis was an active feature, closing up 1-8.

Oils were again a soft spot, as earnings statements are expected to be unsatisfactory, in view of the low gasoline prices. Gulf dropped 2 points then regained all but a fraction. Humble, however, closed 3 lower and Cosden, Lion, and Vacuum were off a point or so to the finish. Cities Service continued to meet good support, and closed at 26 3-4, up 1-4. In the mines, Newmont was again weak, closing at 65, a new low, off more than 4. Metals and Mining Securities, an investment trust, sold at 3 7-8 as against a previous closing price of 10.

In the industrials, Deere dropped 6 in sympathy with farm implements on the big board then rallied 3 from the bottom. American Cyanamid B, and Cuneo Press lost a point, and Driver Harris, 2.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The gold statement of the Federal Reserve bank of New York, for the week ended October 1, showed imports of $620,030, which included $504,000 from Brazil and $116,000 chiefly from other Latin American countries. Exports consisted of $1,000,060 to Canada and $963,000 to Venezuela. Gold earmarked for foreign account showed a decrease of $3,992,000.

After declining in price from $275,000 to $255,000 in four successive sales, New York stock exchange memberships turned upward today, with the arrangement of a sale at $260,000. Last year, stock exchange seats reached a maximum price of $625,000, or $500,000 after deducting the so-called "seat dividend. Of the five seats recently sold, it is learned that at least three were acquired in 1929, when seats commanded their fanciest prices.

age to her nephew, on occasions when he visited with her in the summers of his boyhood days, that is largely responsible for the village's new building.

The new library is a fitting tribute to the parents of the donor and is an institution of which every son and daughter of East Woodstock may be justly proud. Built of Harvard water struck brick and limestone, the structure carries an air of the colonial period throughout. It is 30 feet wide and 50 feet long. Entrance is gained from the west side, which faces the village common. The exterior decoration is of brick of flush joint construction. Limestone trimmings are set in walls beneath the windows on either side of the door. Above the windows are limestone keys and the window sills are also of limestone.

Four tapering limestone steps lead onto the outside portico which is supported by four pillars of Corinthian architecture. Just inside the portico is a small vestibule, finished in natural finish native oak. From the vestibule one enters the library room, where art, beauty and usefulness of design is suggested in every part.

The room is colonial in design and decoration and the unity of these two features make such favorable impressions upon the visitor that he is, in thought, quickly carried back to the days when America was in the making. From the ceiling to the basement there is carried to the utmost the quiet solidity and dignity of the colonial charm. The color scheme of the walls is a light buff tint which is combined with the delightful effect obtained from the natural finish native oak woodwork. The ceiling is recessed into a dome and is snow white in color. The walls at intervals are lined with natural oak built-in shelves, which contain the library's 2,500 volumes. On the east side is a staircase which leads to the basement. On the south side is a beautiful fire-place of dark red Harvard brick. The mantel of the hearth and other fixtures about the fire-place are of natural oak. Over the mantel piece is a large banjo clock, a gift of Mr. May, donor of the building. On either side of the fire-place is a large high backed colonial fire-place bench and their arrangement with reference to the rest of the room lends a most pleasing decorative affect.

The electrical system is a complete one. Small candle shaped fixtures are hung about the walls while suspended gracefully from the ceiling are three strictly colonial wrought, 8-candle bronze fixtures. The light obtained from these alone is sufficient to illuminate the entire building beautifully.

The librarian's desk is in the center of the room, directly opposite the vestibule. At either end of the room are large quartered oak Windsor tables and in appropriate corners there are mahogany colonial Windsor chairs with full arms. The floor is of solid oak. In the center is a heating resister and at the north and south corners there are cold air grills cut into the flooring.

In the basement there are lavatory accommodations, book shelves for future use and the water system. The water supply is obtained from the Gifford spring. From there water trickles down through a line of pipe across the hill and into the large concrete vat in the cellar from where it is pumped throughout the building. An overflow pipe carries the excess water to a drain.

The grounds about the structure are deserving of mention. A large expanse of lawn greets the visitor from the front and may be seen in the rear. At the south side there is a little cove which is to be utilized for a flower garden. Other beautification work will be undertaken next spring. Beside the lawn on the west side entrance is a brick walk extending to the street. The last touch of exterior finish is seen in the roof which is entirely of Vermont slate of variegated colors harmonizing favorably with the brick color in the rest of the building.

Much of the credit for the fineness of the building exemplified in the construction is due Rev. Henry D. Baker, pastor of the East Woodstock Congregational church, who acted as overseer of construction. The May Memorial library is a name well chosen for the materials entering into it exemplify the feeling of kindred Mr. May holds for East Woodstock, the community where he passed part of his childhood. His donation is a token of his high esteem for people of East Woodstock who are to derive the everlasting benefit from this wonderful institution.

The formal exercises in connection with the dedication of the building were both fitting and impressive. On the speakers' stand was seated Mr. May, Arthur Morse, chairman of the board of trustees of the Woodstock Library association; Clarence W. Bowen, of Woodstock Hill, well known historian, author and lecturer; Mrs. Belle Holcomb John and Rev. Russell H. Linton.

Mr. Bowen delivered an interesting historical address in which he vividly depicted Connecticut's and particularly Woodstock's role played in the American Revolution. In closing he extended his warm felicitations to Mr. May saying: "I envy the donor for the very privilege he now enjoys and for the pleasure he has and will have for this very fine building."

Mrs Belle Holcomb Johnson, member of the state public library committee, made a hurried trip to East Woodstock in order to be present at the dedication exercises. She carried with her the greetings and congratulations of the institution she represents which she conveyed to Mr. May and the people of the village. Mrs. Johnson talked interestingly and at length on the complete and comprehensive catalog system devised by the state, which is in use in the May Memorial library. During her talk she read a poem, "East Woodstock's Books Return Home," which was written by a village resident. The exercises came to a close with benediction which was pronounced by Rev. Russell H. Linton.

On Friday morning, at a short calendar of superior court, Judge Newell Jenning of Bristol who last Friday sentenced Pedro DeClark of School street to serve a state prison term of not less than 8 nor more than 15 years, will hear Mrs. DeClark's divorce petition which was filed in court yesterday by her lawyer, State Attorney Howard C. Bradford. The action is brought before Judge Jennings who presided at the trial of DeClark, through a special statute which has been in effect since 1920.

Mrs DeClark is now partially paralyzed through severe attacks of inflammatory rheumatism. She is the mother of several young children.

No real political situation in a local way has developed with regard to the state ticket. Legislative candidates are still unknown other than the two democratic incumbents, and the republican aspirant Leon T. Wilson, former newspaperman and federal revenue agent who recently declared himself a candidate for the party's nomination. Irving H. Miron, chairman of the republican town committee, is silent on the subject of who the party nominees will be, he being of the opinion that this is a matter that should be left for the decision of the voters. Leon Talbot, elected two years ago to the legislature by Putnam democrats, is to be a candidate for re-election. His running mate in the 1928 campaign, J. Otis Fox, prominent Putnam business man, has not as yet disclosed his intentions for this year's campaign, although it is reported that Mr. Fox is certain to be a candidate.

Additional improvement in the condition of Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston was reported today by officials of the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass., where he is a patient suffering from a complication of diseases.

Several appearances of the Day Kimball hospital ambulance about the streets today caused alarm among those who saw it, and was responsible for numerous inquiries of "Where's the accident?" being made at local newsrooms. A check-up of the report brought out the information that the vehicle had been somewhat overhauled and was being put through a series of trial spins.

Mrs. Edgar M. Warner, of South Main street, who is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, is making a gradual recovery.

Judge Newell Jennings, of Bristol, will reconvene superior court in this city Friday morning at 10 o'clock. A short calendar session following by an assignment session for civil cases is slated for the attention of the court.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(P)—The price level of the bond market was virtually undisturbed by the quiet movement today. Trading in the best grade issues lacked the briskness that has characterized recent sessions and the number to reach new high for the year was small. Fractional changes were the rule among seasoned domestic bonds. The widest revisions took place among speculative industrials, depressed to new low ground, and in the foreign group where recovery of many German, Italian and Latin American obligations recently under pressure stood out.

Declines of many low grade or so-called speculative corporation issues was measured in full points. Richfield Oil 6s sagged [illegible] points to a 1930 low. Warner [illegible] lost nearly 4, Lehigh Valley Coal 5s, and B. F. Goodrich 6 1-2s, 3 each, and Consolidated Coal of Maryland 5s, and Cuba Northern Railways 5 1-2s, 2 each. Parmalee 6s advanced 4 points from its year's minimum.

The foreign list was not without its soft spots but a large majority of the changes were on the constructive side. On a large turnover German International 5 1-2s rallied 1 1-4, and the Dawes 7s gained 3-4. The whole Italian group was buoyant and some issues advanced a point or more. The government 7s moved 1 1-2, Milan City 6 1-2s and Rome City 6 1-2s, more than a point each.

The recovery of Latin American issues was very irregular. Cuban 5 1-2s made a small advance on a large turnover, and Peruvian, Chilean and Argentine issues showed moderate improvement. Bolivian issues were weak. The 7s of 1969 dropped 4 3-4 points and the 7s of 1958 reacted 1 1-4. Colombians were depressed in thin trading.

There was a fair amount of activity in U. S. governments. Treasury issues advanced on good buying. Treasury 3 3-8s of 1943-47 reached a new high for the year.

Public offering will be made shortly of a $2,000,000 province of Saskatchewan 25 year 4 1-2 per cent issue which was sold to a syndicate today.

PLAINFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mathewson and daughter Frances, of New London, were callers in town Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marsland were in Norwich Monday.

Rally and Promotion day services will be held at the First Congregational church Sunday morning.

Plainfield Economics club will meet Monday afternoon at 1:30 at the home of Mrs. Evelyn Hall. All women interested are welcome to join this club.

Those from here who attended the church conference at Preston Wednesday were Rev. William C. Prentiss, Walter Kingsley, Jason Lathrop, Mrs. Mary Phillips, Mrs. Everett Dawley, Mrs. Roode, Mrs. J. Wilde, Mrs. Cecil Butler, Mrs. Lotta Dodge, Mrs. John Kingley.

Visited Patients

Miss Sylvena Allard called Monday on Mrs. Lee Rainey and Mrs. Amelia Guild who are patients at the Backus hospital, Norwich.

Miss Adelaide Prentiss left Monday to take up her duties as dean at Dearborn Junior college, Newton, Mass., after spending the summer with her father, Rev. William C. Prentiss.

Winners At Cards

Tuesday evening the grange met with Mrs. Fred Gardner. A large crowd was present, ten tables being in play. Mrs. Briggs, Miss Helen Doyle, Mr. Wheeler and Henry Randall won the prizes. Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

Lawn Party Nets $25

Ayuda Camp Fire girls held a very successful lawn party the other evening at the Congregational parsonage. There were two booths on the lawn for candy and soda, while indoors several of the girls were selling cakes, pies, preserves and honey, hot dogs and ice cream. Rev. Wm. C. Prentiss and his daughter very kindly opened the parsonage for a real old fashioned party and many of the patrons took advantage of the offer and enjoyed the games and puzzles that were spread through the rooms. Others were kept busy with the phonograph and still others experimented with the radio in another part of the house. One of the indoor attractions was a spider web which extended from an upstairs room, down a staircase and ended in the library. Whoever untangled a thread found a prize at the end. The Camp Fire girls also sold marshmallows to be roasted at the fireplace in the library. During the evening a very pleasing entertainment was carried out by the following: Piano duets, Marjorie Mortimer, Dorothy Mortimer; vocal solos, Mrs. Harold Barber; accordion solo, Raymond Roode; vocal solo, Dorothy Babcock. The following girls were in charge of the booths: Mildred Walsh, soda; Dorothy Velt, candy; Blanche Hollingworth hot dogs; Lena Butler, food; the guardian, Rose Bethudry sold ice cream; Laura Gallup and Hazel Congdon, spider web. The net proceeds, $25, was turned over to the church treasurer.

COLUMBIA

Mr. and Mrs. Dresser of Brooklyn have been visiting Mr. Dresser's sister, Mrs. Randall at the Dresser cottage.

Miss Orilla J. Fuller of Hartford was in town Sunday and called on her niece, Mrs. Florence Badge.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lyman of Plainville spent the week end with Mrs. Lyman's sister, Mrs. Raymond Squier.

Mrs. Edith Shutt of Setauket, L. I. called a few days ago on Mrs. Florence Badge.

Mrs. Ruth Jacobs, accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. Harriet Little, motored to Boston, Monday, to spend several days with Mrs. Little's brother, Caspar Isham. They were accompanied on the trip by Rev. and Mrs. Mellinger and children Margaret and Paul, who will visit Mrs. Mellinger's sister, Mrs. James Sherman.

Owing to the dry season, late apples are already falling in large quantities before their time. The large crop of fruit has lowered the price and demand to such an extent that very little money will be made, in spite of the large yield.

Word has just been received through the Boston office of the board of commissioners for foreign missions of the birth of a son, Robert Ingram, at Chilesso, Portuguese West Africa, to Rev. and Mrs. Duane Wain who are serving as missionaries at that station. Mr. Wain was pastor of the Columbia church for two years prior to enlisting for foreign service. This is their second son, Duane, Jr., now being four years of age.

Several members of the local C. E. society motored to Hebron Sunday evening to attend the meeting of the Tri-County union.

SEEKING MEN WHO STOLE $10,000 CURRENCY FROM MAILS

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 2.—(P)—Postal inspectors today were seeking unidentified men who stole $10,000 in currency, from the mails sometime last night between Frisco City and Atmore, both in Alabama.

The money was being shipped from a Mobile bank to a bank at Frisco City.

Postal inspectors said the money was cleared through the post office at Atmore but was missing before the train reached Frisco City. The shipment was registered mail.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS ON STRIKE FOR SHORTER HOURS

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 2.—(P)—Pupils of the High School of Commerce went on strike today for shorter hours. Instead of entering their class rooms, they filed into the auditorium and held a protest meeting against the six-hour daily session. Some weeks ago the teachers waited upon the board of education, requesting a reduction in the hours.

TRIO OF SUSPECTS HELD IN PROVIDENCE WITHOUT BONDS

TORRINGTON, Oct. 2.—(P)—Joseph J. Lewis, his wife Vera, and Joseph E. Doyle, all of Providence, R. I., were being held here tonight without bonds while police were attempting to determine the ownership of clothes, including four suits found in the trio's machine. One of the suits had the name of a New Haven clothier.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Both offerings and demand were very light on the wholesale market owing to the Jewish holiday and prices remained practically unchanged.

A firmer market tone has developed for a number of products as the season rapidly draws to a close. Tomatoes, lima and string beans and cucumbers were scarce and higher and in active demand when of high grade. Late cabbage was in better demand and slightly firmer. Peppers are liberal and slow of disposal.

Potatoes were holding steady and unchanged as a rule for natives on most markets of the state. Cobblers are in little demand but the bulk of supply now arriving are Green mountains. A few cars of Green mountains have been received which are being held by dealers at slightly higher prices than native stock.

The apple situation was unchanged though a better quality of stock is generally being offered.

ROGERS OPENS REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2.—(P)—The republican campaign in this section of Connecticut was launched at West Haven tonight with Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers candidate for governor, continuing his discussion of state finances. His address tonight dealt with tax reduction.

More than four hundred were present at a banquet arranged by the West Haven republican league in honor of James F. Lynch, candidate for the state senate from the 14th district.

If men had the courage of their convictions many of them would be convicts.

HOOVER'S ADDRESS

nancial agencies can help the upward movement in our economic forces.

I started with the premise that this question of stability was much more than a problem in academic economics—it is a great human problem, for it involves the happiness of millions of homes. A continued unity of effort both in our present situation and in establishing safeguards for the future, is the need of today. No one can contribute more than our banking community.

It appears from the press that someone suggested in your discussion that our American standards of living should be lowered. To that I emphatically disagree. I do not believe it represents the views of this association. Not only do I not accept such a theory, but on the contrary, the whole purpose and ideal of this economic system which is distinctive of our country is to increase the standard of living by the adoption and the constantly widening diffusion of invention and discovery amongst the whole of our people. Any retreat from our American philosophy of constantly increasing standards of living becomes a retreat into perpetual unemployment and the acceptance of a cesspool of poverty for some large part of our people.

Our economic system is but an instrument of the social advancement of the American people. It is an instrument by which we add to the security of the richness of life of every individual. It by no means comprises the whole purpose of life, but it is the foundation upon which can be built the finer things of the spirit. Increase in enrichment must be the objective of the nation, not decrease.

In conclusion I would again profess my own undaunted faith in those mighty spiritual and intellectual forces of liberty, self-government, initiative, invention, and courage, which have throughout our whole national life motivated our progress, and driven us ever forward. These forces, which express the true genius of our people, are undiminished. They have already shown their ability to resist this immediate shock. Any recession in American fullness is but a temporary halt in the prosperity of a great people.

Wilbur Coon Shoes

"Foot Troubles" are Usually "Fit Troubles"

CORNS, callouses, bunions and weak arches can be traced usually to shoes that do not fit properly.

They will respond to a treatment of the right shoes, fitted right.

To fit perfectly, a shoe must grasp the body or trunk of the foot firmly, cling to the heel, and fit freely across the toes.

That is the way Wilbur Coon Shoes fit. They are available in special measurements, that make it possible for us to fit your feet perfectly. Available in over 200 sizes—1 to 12, AAAA to EEE.

May we show you the Wilbur Coon Shoe that meets your individual fitting problem?

WARNING
Annual Town Meeting

The Legal Voters in Town Meeting of the Town of Norwich, are hereby warned to meet in ANNUAL TOWN MEETING in the Town Hall, in said Norwich, ON MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1930, AT 8 O'CLOCK, P. M. for the following purposes:

To hear and act upon the annual report of the Selectmen and their recommendations, the reports of the Town Treasurer, the Sinking Fund Committee, the Town Health Officer, the Town School Committee, and the Trustees of the Otis Library, to fix the salaries of the Town Officials, to lay a tax to meet the lawful expenses of the Town, including the expenses of the Public Schools, for the ensuing fiscal year, and to fix the compensation of the Tax Collector.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum not to exceed the amount of Four Hundred Thousand ($400 000) dollars at such times and in such amounts during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to defray the debts of the Town accruing before the next Annual Town Meeting and to deliver the notes or other obligations of the Town therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interests of the Town.

Also to authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum of money not to exceed Twenty Thousand ($20,000) dollars at such time during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to pay the Town's share of the County tax heretofore levied upon the Towns of this County and to deliver the notes or other obligations therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interest of the town.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Sixty-five Hundred ($6500) dollars, to be used for the current expenses of the Otis Library.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Fifteen Hundred ($1500) dollars to be used for the care and maintenance of the trees on the highways of the Town.

Also to appropriate a sum not to exceed One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to defray the traveling expenses of pupils residing in this Town who desire to attend the Putnam or Willimantic Trade Schools.

Also to determine whether the Town will hereafter assume the expense of the care and maintenance of thirty-nine electric lights located on the public highway in or near the Village of Taftville; which lights have heretofore been cared for and maintained by the Ponemah Company.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to be used in maintaining a Treatment Station for the care of venereal diseases.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ninety-two Thousand Five Hundred ($92,500) dollars for the purpose of relieving the parents or guardians of children who attend the Norwich Free Academy and are domiciled in the Town of Norwich from the payment of the customary term fees for the School year of 1930-1931.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ten Thousand Five Hundred ($10,500) dollars for the purpose of providing medical inspection and health work for the school children of the Town of Norwich.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain a Street light at the corner of the private ways, known as Edward Avenue and Sylvia Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain two additional hydrants on Town Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known hydrant at the junction of Harland Road and Sachem Plain Road.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to accept a deed of a private way in said Norwich extending from West Town Street to Sturtevant Street and now known as Shiles Avenue from the owner thereof and maintain said private way hereafter as a public highway.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way in the Town of Norwich heretofore known as Perry Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway of the Town.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known as Germania Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway.

Also to approve the action of the board of selectmen in removing the town sign-post heretofore located at the corner of Main and Market streets to a location on the east side of Laurel Hill bridge.

Also to authorize the proper officials of the town to execute and deliver to the Thames Bank and Trust company a proper bond of indemnity and to obtain from the said company a certificate of its capital stock to replace a certain lost certificate which was the property of the town representing certain shares of stock of the Thames National bank owned by the town.

Also to do any other business proper to come before said Meeting.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, this 29th day of September, A. D. 1930.
WILLIAM S. MURRAY,
CHARLES P. BUSHNELL,
Selectmen of the Town of Norwich.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE

All persons liable to pay taxes in the town of Norwich, Conn., are hereby notified to return to the Assessors, on or before the First day of Nov. 1930, a written or printed list, properly signed and sworn to, of all taxable property owned by them on the first day of Oct. 1930. TYLER D. GUY,
JOSEPH B. DOWNES,
Registrars of Voters.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 2d day of October A. D. 1930.

Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

Estate of Patrick Callahan, late of Fall River, Mass., deceased.

Edward T. Murphy, of Fall River, Mass., appeared in Court by counsel and filed a petition praying, for the reasons therein set forth, that administration de bonis non with the will annexed be granted upon the estate of said deceased.

Whereupon, it is Ordered, That said petition be heard and determined at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, on the 8th day of October A. D. 1930, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice of the pendency of said petition, and of said hearing thereon, be given by the publication of this order one time in some newspaper having a circulation in said District at least three days prior to the date of said hearing and that return be made to this Court.

NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest,
HELEN M. DRESCHER, Clerk.

AURELA J. BURNS vs. JOHN T. BURNS, Supplemental Order of Notice. State of Connecticut, County of New London, ss. September 19th, 1930.

Upon the complaint of the said Aurela J. Burns claiming for the reasons therein set forth a divorce and custody of minor children now pending before this Court, having been returned thereto on the first Tuesday of June, 1930;

It appearing to and being found by this Court that John T. Burns, formerly of Norwich, Connecticut, the said defendant, is gone to parts unknown and that notice of the pendency of the complaint was given as required by order of notice heretofore issued, and now the plaintiff asks for a further order of notice in the premises.

Therefore ordered, that notice of the pendency of said complaint be given by publishing this order in the Norwich Bulletin, a newspaper printed in Norwich, Connecticut, once a week for two successive weeks, commencing on or before the 19th day of October, 1930.

By order of Court,
WILLIAM H. SHIELDS, JR.
Assistant Clerk of the Superior Court for New London County.

NEW HAVEN DEALER IN AUTO PARTS VIOLATES NEW LONDON'S VENDER LAW

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 2. — Morris Horwitz, New Haven, was in the police court today, charged with violation of the city's vender's law. The case was continued another week. Horwitz is employed by a wholesale house in New Haven, which deals in automobile parts. A week ago Horwitz was driving about the city taking orders and delivering them at the same time. He had been making a practice for several weeks of selling parts from his truck and when this fact was made known to other dealers the latter made complaint to the police, because Horwitz had not obtained a pedlar's license.

Twenty-four members of the Young Men's Catholic club and a guest, Rev. Raymond J. O'Callaghan, had a pleasant social and business meeting Wednesday night. Following supper Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan addressed the group about future activities of the club. A new board of officers was elected. The board is as follows: President, Alfred J. Cables; vice president, Robert L. Boyle; secretary, Cornelius P. Hayes; treasurer, Edward F. Neilan; sergeant at arms, Joseph J. Leahy. An entertainment will be held at the next meeting, and John Murphy, Leslie Williams and George Cleary were appointed to make arrangements for the affair.

TO "POINT-UP" APPETITE JUST STIMULATE BOWELS

Whenever the end of the day finds you out-of-sorts; food doesn't tempt you and won't digest; breath is bad; tongue coated, just chew a candy tablet before bedtime. Tomorrow you'll be a new person!

A candy Cascaret clears up a bilious, gassy, headachy condition every time. Puts appetite on edge. Helps digestion. Activates bowels.

Cascarets are made from cascara, which authorities say actually strengthens bowel muscles. So, take these delightful tablets as often as you please; or give them freely to children. All drug stores sell Cascarets for a dime, and no dollar preparation could do better work.

RINARDI COMMITTED TO CHESHIRE THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 2—Rosario Rinardi, about 17, residing on Grand street, was in the police court this morning charged with theft and the destruction of private property. It was brought out that the boy caused the fire in the garage of P. Adel, Woodbridge street, a week ago, which caused estimated damage of $30,000. Rinardi, who has a long criminal record for various offenses, principally theft, was committed to the reformatory at Cheshire. He was taken there this afternoon. Rinardi made a complete confession to Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, who arrested him. He went to the garage early in the evening of the night of the fire and requested Harold W. Decker, watchman there, to permit him to remove gasoline from one of the trucks in order that he might supply his own car with fuel. Decker refused the request and Rinardi left. Several hours later Rinardi returned to the garage and unknown to Decker, secured a pail, went to a five-ton truck, which had not been used for two days and opening the pet-cock, allowed the gasoline to run into the container. The garage was not lighted so Rinardi struck a match to inspect the contents of the pail. The gasoline by that time had overflowed, the fumes ignited, causing the liquid to burst into a blaze. Rinardi seized a blanket and attempted to smother the flames, but was not successful for the fire gained great headway and the youth was compelled to flee from the building. He went to Decker and requested aid in extinguishing the fire, but when the watchman reached the garage, the entire interior was ablaze. Decker rushed to the fire alarm box, corner of Truman and Bank streets and pulled in an alarm and the department arriving at the garage, which then was a howling mass of flames, a second alarm was sent in. It was over an hour and a-half before the fire was extinguished. Four of the seven trucks in the building were completely destroyed and the other three were damaged. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh arrested Rinardi later.

The only other cases tried were for intoxication and there were two for this offense. Both men were given suspension of judgment.

Walter Woligurski, 14 Stony Hill, made complaint to the police last night that his bicycle had been stolen from a sidewalk on Bank street. The youth said the theft was committed during a brief time that he was absent from the cycle. It is believed that another youth committed the theft.

Two Prowlers Detained

Joseph Du Trumble and Frank Lakowsky, youths and strangers in New London, are being detained at police headquarters as suspicious characters and they will be in custody until such time as the detective department concludes making a check-up of their movements since they arrived in New London this week. A telephone message was received at police headquarters last night giving the information that two young men were prowling in the yards of residences on Federal street. A description of the youths was also provided. Patrolman Dennis Murphy was on Main street shortly before midnight and observed the youths loitering there with the result that they were arrested. Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey also reported observing the youths in the vicinity of Connecticut College for Women earlier in the night.

Mr. and Mrs. Kimbark Howell, of New York, have taken possession of their residence, 960 Ocean avenue, and will remain there until after the first of next year.

Negro Voters Organize

The Negro voters of the city formed a political organization last night, which will be known as the United Negro Political club. The meeting of the colored voters was held in United Societies hall, Hempstead street. The purpose of the club is to instill in its membership the need for the colored voters taking an active part in political affairs. The speakers were Percy H. Stone, Savannah, Ga., and Harry Daniels, Orangeburg, C. C. Rev. Sinclair Grimstead was chairman and the meeting was attended by about 100 men and women. The following officers were elected: President, Luther A. Eccleston; vice president, Thomas W. Coleman; secretary, William H. Holden; treasurer, James H. Brown. Edward Gilliam was authorized to take charge of listing the colored non-voters and will begin that work without delay.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Many Sales By Tryon's Agency

Unusual and unexpected activity in real estate, in view of reports on nationwide conditions, are indicated in a list of sales made in recent weeks hereabouts by the Tryon Real Estate agency of this city. The agency reports 15 sales the major part involving substantial amounts of acreage and monetary value. Among the purchasers there appears the customary number of metropolitan residents some of these making purchases for summer homes and others for permanent occupancy. The list: 40-acre tract of land in the town of Colchester to Mintz Bros.; on the Boston Post road in East Lyme, a 30-acre tract to Margaret and R. Melville Webster of Long Island, N. Y.; the French property on the Old Basset Bridge road in Mansfield to Ernst M. Brobery, artist, of Flanders, N. J.; olde Colonial house of the early American type with two acres of land in the town of Woodstock to Elizabeth S. French of Windham; a 56-acre farm, 1-2 mile from Columbia lake, to Hellena A. Scott of Brooklyn, N. Y.; a 24-acre poultry farm in the town of Scotland to Harold C. Cline of Hartford; an old Colonial homestead with 97 acres of land in Ashford to Peter J. Masterson, police captain of the 61st precinct, New York city; the Warren property of 52 acres and buildings in North Coventry to Zilah C. Goggins of Lynbrook, L. I., New York; the old Crocker farm of 80 acres in the town of Colchester to Elizabeth Jones of Long Island, N. Y., the McDonough property on Wormwood Hill, Mansfield, to Claude and Lottie Wylie of New York city; the Willoughby dairy farm in Scotland and the Isaac Sherman farm of 120 acres with buildings to W. Lee White, commercial banker of New York city, the Hanchette estate in the old town of Pomfret to Messrs. Norris and Waldman of Hartford; George D. Shedd's poultry farm on Pleasant street extension, town of Lebanon, to Helen S. Bassette of Westford; the Peasley property in North Coventry to E. O. Anderson of the Storrs faculty; and the Frances E. Shaw country place of 60 acres in North Coventry to Alice M. Balch of Hartford.

Palace Theatre

A double feature bill which combines mystery with comedy is now playing at the Palace theatre where it will be shown today and tomorrow for the last times. The Matrimonial Bed is a farce from start to finish, taken from the stage play of the same name, starring Lilyan Tashman, Frank Fay, James Gleason and a host of stars well known to the patrons of this theatre. "The Road To Paradise," is a most unusual drama with Loretta Young, Jack Mulhall and Raymond Hatton. These are the two shows which go to make up one of the finest double feature bills yet offered in this city.

"The Matrimonial Bed" is replete with laughs from start to finish, and the comedy work of Fay and Gleason add in no little way to the complete entertainment.

Everyone is familiar with the double productions which have always been very popular but "Road To Paradise" is the first talkie which has featured this camera trick. Loretta Young plays the part of twin sisters, one a debutante, the other a figure in the underworld. Fate brings them together in the most peculiar way and later they discover they are sisters.

On Sunday the Palace will present Gloria Swanson in her latest success "What A Widow" heralded as greater than her "Trespasser."

ANNONCEMENTS

"Burton's Agency Sells Another"

Henry and Agnes Montie of this city have sold to Thomas and Annie Wignall of Lisbon a new six-room house, all modern, and a one-car garage, located at No. 568 Boswell avenue. The new owners will occupy it for their home and will take possession at once.

The sale was negotiated through the real estate agency of Mrs. Rosa E. Burton.

National Biscuit Co.

The president of the United States and an ex-president both have urged "spending" to keep the country's money in healthy circulation. The spending of every individual helps; the spending of a corporation helps even more, solely because of the larger sum involved. National Biscuit company, ignoring the convenient excuse provided by a year of disappointing returns, is maintaining its enviable dividend record, and is to distribute—or spend—on November 15th, an "extra" of fifty cents per share, or, a sum of approximately $3,000,000. The example is worth consideration; every extra that can thus be "spent" is a step toward the return of prosperity.

The year 1930 has brought its problems to the baker, as well as to nearly all other manufacturers. Unquestionably it has taken days of work and nights of worry to protect National Biscuit from a larger share of the general decrease, but, at the end of the first six months' period, National reported earnings per share estimated at $1.51 as compared with $1.55 a year ago.

In March of this year, National Biscuit's $25 par value shares were exchanged for 2 1-2 new shares with a par value of $10. From the earnings in 1929, stockholders received on their $25 par shares dividends totalling $7.50. Thus far this year, two quarterly dividends of seventy cents have been paid, with two more to be expected, plus the extra fifty cents, making a total of $3.30, or, figured on the basis of the old $25 par shares, a total, for comparison, of $8.25 per share.

The chart of net earnings and dividends paid by the Uneeda Bakers show the two lines in nearly constant parallel. It has been the policy of the company to pay its stockholders as liberally as possible, and still safeguard the surplus, which is the secret of the company's strong position. This continuation of this policy in the year 1930 provides a welcome change from the melancholy news which financial pages now are too regularly recording.

Broadway Theatre

Johnny Arthur, who furnished much of the comedy in "The Desert Song," plays a role in "The Bad Man," which closes its local engagement at Warner's Broadway today.

Arthur plays the role of "Flatbroke," a newspaperman who stumbles into the lair of Pancho Lopez, dreaded bandit cheiftain in Arizona, in search of a thrilling story of Lopez's life for a tabloid paper. He arrives just as Lopez is about to start on a raid on a ranch. At first the bandit is inclined to have him shot, but then decides to fill him up with a Robin Hood yarn about himself, and turn him loose.

Walter Huston plays the role of Lopez in this amusing comedy. Clarence Badger directed.

GREENEVILLE

NOVENA TO ST. TERESA WILL CLOSE TODAY

Much enthusiasm has been shown this past eight days by the large attendance of parishioners and outsiders at both the morning and evening services at the novena of St. Teresa, the "Little Flower," which is being conducted at St. Mary's Memorial church by Rev. George J. Donahue, the pastor, assisted by Rev. Arthur B. Sullivan. The evening services consist of reciting the rosary and a short sermon by the pastor, on some of the most interesting points regarding the life of St. Teresa, and with the services being closed with benediction and the reveneration of the relic of St. Teresa, which was obtained by Father Donahue while in Europe.

First Friday Devotions

Today, being the first Friday of the month besides the feast day of St. Teresa, the masses will be at 7 o'clock, a high mass and a low mass at 8 o'clock. Holy communion will be distributed to the early workers of the parish at 5:30 o'clock. Veneration of the blessed sacrament will take place all day (today) Friday, the regular custom as on first Fridays of the month and at 7:30 o'clock in the evening a holy hour will be observed and the closing of the novena to the "Little Flower" will take place.

Joseph Donnelly, the popular clerk at the Norwich post office, has returned to his home on North Main street, after spending his annual vacation at New York city and Atlantic City.

The Women's guild of St. Andrews Episcopal church held a rally meeting with 25 women attending at the guild room of the church, this being the first meeting of the winter season. Regular business was transacted, with the president, Mrs. Charles Erwin, presiding. During the meeting Mrs. E. J. Norris, wife of the rector, made a few fitting remarks concerning the work that has been planned for the coming season. The pastor also gave a short talk to the ladies. Following the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed with cards played which was followed by a luncheon served under the direction of Mrs. Norris. It was also planned at the meeting to hold a play in the near future.

Mrs. John Casey has returned to her home on Prospect street after spending a few days with relatives in Boston.

Mrs. Richard Stephenson has returned to her home at New Jersey after spending a few weeks with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Brittin, of Boswell avenue.

St. Andrews Men's Club

A very largely attended enthusiastic meeting of men was held in the parish rooms on Monday night. The president expects to announce soon the speaker and musical program for the first meeting of this season to be held Monday, Oct. 20th.

There was a very large attendance of members at the meeting of the St. Andrew's Girls Friendly society Monday, Sept. 29th. Plans were considered for two surprises in the near future.

The annual meeting of Troop 2 was held in the hall of the Third Baptist church on Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected: Secretary, Anthony Leyko; treasurer, Leroy Sebastian; messenger, Teddy Donovan. Lessons were given in signaling and scout stretcher. The meeting closed with the scout oath and law. Sixteen were present.

JAMES WILLIAMS TREASURER OF STORRS SENIORS

STORRS, Oct. 2.—(AP)—James Gwin, of Tyrone, Pa., was elected president tonight of the senior class of Connecticut Agricultural college. He is a track man, member of the student senate, business manager of The Campus, the college publication, and a major in the R. O. T. C.

Other officers elected were: Allan Ashcroft, Stratford, vice-president; Miss Ethel L. Johnson, Torrington, secretary, and James Williams, Norwich, treasurer.

Dismissals at Backus Hospital

Patients discharged at W. W. Backus hospital Thursday were: Mrs. Ovila Vincent and infant daughter, 186 1-2 North Main street; Mrs. Joseph Trembly and infant son, 6 1-2 South Third avenue, Taftville; John Wierzbicki, 89 Asylum street.

OVER $100,000 IN "EXTRAS" TO BE VOTED UPON AT THE TOWN MEETING

Extras totaling over $100,000 in appropriations are included in the call for the annual town meeting to be held next Monday evening. These include $6,500 for Otis library, $1,000 for care of trees, $1,000 for traveling expenses of Norwich pupils attending Putnam and Willimantic trade schools, $1,000 for venereal disease treatment station, $10,500 for medical inspection and health work for school children, $92,000 for Norwich Free Academy tuition fees.

A vote will also be called for giving the town authority to borrow $400,000 on notes for temporary use before the next annual town meeting and to borrow $20,000 on notes to pay the town's share of the county tax.

There are also petitions for the following which have been presented to the selectmen and on which action will be called for at the meeting: Request that the town install and maintain a street light at the corner of the private ways, known as Edward avenue and Sylvia street; request that the town install and maintain two additional hydrants on Town street; request that town install and maintain hydrant at the junction of Harland road and Sachem Plain road, also to determine whether the town will authorise the selectmen to accept a deed of a private way in town extending from West Town street to Sturtevant street and now known as Sholes avenue; request that the private way in the town heretofore known as Perry avenue, be accepted and maintained a public highway of town; request that private way known as Germania avenue be accepted and maintained as public highway.

DISTRICT 40 AND 8 ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

The local district of 40 and 8 held its meeting Thursday evening in the rooms of Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, A. L., in the Thayer building. Robert Davidson of New London was chef de gare in charge of the meeting. Reports of the different officers were read and it was voted that an outing be held on Sunday, Oct. 26, at Lantern Hill, when the 40 and 8 will entertain the 8 and 40 at a clambake. The remainder of the meeting was devoted to the election of officers.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Chef de gare, William Lamphere of Mystic; chef de train, John Bennett, Norwich; com de tendant, Warren Wilcox, Norwich; garde de la porte, Ernest B. Francke, Noank; lampistes, George Rocheleau, Jewett City, Leon Raymond, Norwich, Harry L. Lathrop, Norwich; commis voyageur, Harry L. Lathrop, Norwich; cheminots locoux, Robert Davidson, New London, Maurice Peck, Lyme, Charles B. Gilbert, Norwich.

It was decided that a room be engaged in Boston to be called "The Local 40 and 8 Headquarters," to be located in the Hotel Belmont on Huntington avenue, for the convenience of those attending the convention, where telegrams can be received and comrades can be located.

Installation of officers will take place at the meeting to be held in November. The installing officers will be Chef de Gare Thomas Perkins Sears of Taftville and staff of officers.

The meeting was very well attended and all of the posts in the district were represented.

PLANS ARE MADE FOR THURBER MEMORIAL SERVICE

A memorial service for Christopher Carson Thurber will be held in Trinity college chapel, Hartford, next Wednesday at 8:30 a. m. President Remson B. Ogilby will preside.

Mr. Thurber, who was born in Norwich, Conn., was graduated from Norwich Free Academy, and from Trinity college in 1903. At the time of his death last May he was director of Near East relief's work in Greece. He is the only American for whom the Greek government has ever decreed a national funeral and period of national mourning.

At the memorial service there will be a number of speakers, including Prof. Frank C. Babbitt, under whom Mr. Thurber studied Greek; Harold C. Jaquith, director of Near East foundation and his co-worker in Near East relief.

During the nine years of Mr. Thurber's association with Near East relief, his career was brilliant and marked by spectacular achievements. He directed the transportation of 7,000 little children from Sivas, Turkey, across mountains and snow to the Black sea and accomplished, in doing so, a miracle of feeding and organization. Another time in Constantinople he had charge of 11,000 typhus-stricken refugees in the Selemie barracks of Florence Nightingale fame.

Mr. Thurber's chief concern, however, always was the orphan children. With them and for them he worked night and day, sharing their hunger and vicissitudes.

Connecticut hopes to raise a fund to be known as the Thurber fund, which will be used for the continuation of the work he established in Greece. Miss Katherine W. Reynolds, formerly Connecticut director for Near East relief and now national representative of the new foundation, will collaborate with the Connecticut committee in organising the Thurber fund.

WILL BROADCAST GREETINGS OF AMER. LEGION CONVENTION

Thirteen radio stations, located in all parts of the United States, are to broadcast the American Legion national convention greetings programme, which will be put on the air by the Wallace Silversmiths (Wallingford, Conn.), home of Shaw-Sinon post, No. 73, on Saturday evening, Oct. 4, the day before the opening of the convention in Boston. The programme will begin at 8:45 o'clock, E. S. T., and all those connected with or interested in Legion work are expected to tune in.

The following are the stations to broadcast the programme: WABC, New York city; WNAC, Boston; WCAU, Philadelphia; WMAL, Washington, D. C.; WJAS, Pittsburgh; KMOX, St. Louis; WCCO, Minneapolis; WMAQ, Chicago; WXYZ, Detroit; KMBC, Kansas City; WBT, Charlotte; WDST, New Orleans; KRLD, Dallas.

STORRS COLLEGE HAS $780,000 BUILDING NEEDS

Plans for a $780,000 building programme at Connecticut Agricultural college were outlined Thursday in the announcement by college authorities that they would ask an appropriation for that amount.

A home economics building, an apartment house for members of the faculty and college staff and reconstruction of the college heating system are planned. The heating system, Dr. C. C. McCracken, president of the college said, would cost approximately $435,000, the home economics building $250,000 and the faculty apartment house $75,000.

KUBISKY IS HELD ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

Probable cause being found Stephen Kubisky, 21, U. S. N., was bound over to the January term of the criminal superior court under bonds of $5,000, when he was presented in the city court Thursday morning. Kubisky is charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Miss Marie R. Woods, 16, whom he accidentally shot and killed last month while target practising with a .22 calibre rifle at the girl's home at 277 Laurel Hill avenue. He was found criminally responsible for the girl's death by Coroner Edward G. McKay, earlier in the week. Unable to provide bonds the sailor was taken to jail to await trial.

Kubisky was brought to this city Thursday morning by State Police Officer Frederick Johnson from the submarine base at Groton where he has been held since his surrender to the authorities at the base. He appeared without counsel and on the advice of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, entered a demurrer to the charge. The demurrer was overruled and the sailor bound over.

Kubisky asked to be allowed to read the warrant issued for his arrest. After reading the warrant he took exception to the word, "wilfully" which appeared in the warrant but was informed by the city attorney that it was merely a technical term.

After the fatal shooting Kubisky, panic stricken, ran away, and hitchhiked to Hartford and Boston and eventually landed in New Jersey where he met a shipmate who advised him to give himself up. Taking the advice he returned to the submarine base and surrendered. After the coroner's finding had been announced, holding the sailor criminally responsible for the young girl's death, arrangements were made with the judge advocate general at Washington, D. C., for his surrender by the naval authorities at the submarine base to the local authorities.

SENTENCED FOR THEFT OF CANDY VENDING MACHINE

In the city court Thursday morning John Huggard, Jr., 22, of this city, was fined $25 and costs and given a suspended 30 day jail sentence on a charge of theft. He was arrested about 2:30 o'clock Thursday morning at Laurel Hill by Officer Kotecki.

Huggard and another man took a candy vending machine from in front of the store of Joseph Tomaino on School street shortly before Huggard was arrested. They were going through Water street with the machine, when Officer Kotecki noticed them. When the officer approached them to question them they started to run and Huggard dropped the machine. The officer set chase and caught Huggard. The other man disappeared near the New Haven railroad freight house. Huggard pleaded guilty but informed the court that he had been drinking and did not realize what he was doing.

JAIL SENTENCE ON DRUNKEN DRIVING CHARGE

Found guilty of driving while under the influence of liquor, Lyman Swift, 44, of New London, was sentenced to six months in jail, Thursday morning in the city court. It is his third conviction in a little over two years. He was arrested June 29, 1928, at New London, for driving while under the influence, and was arrested in Norwich, July 10, 1928 on a similar charge.

Swift pleaded guilty to the charge and asked for leniency, stating that he has a wife and two children to support. Judge Arthur F. Libby informed him, however, that the state statutes call for a mandatory sentence of not less than six months, on a third conviction.

Swift was arrested in Thamesville Wednesday night when his machine collided with a trolley and then hit a machine owned by John Kozlowski of No. 110 Geer avenue. The damage was slight.

ASKS FOR OBSERVANCE HERE OF NAVY DAY

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins received Thursday a letter from the U. S. navy department in which the citizens of Norwich are asked to observe Navy day, October 27th. The letter, signed by C. F. Bryant, lieutenant commander, U. S. Navy, says:

The president of the United States has designated October 27, the anniversary of the birth of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, and the anniversary of the birth of the United State navy, to be observed throughout the country as "Navy day."

It is respectfully requested that you bring this matter to the attention of the citizens of your city by proclamation, or other suitable method.

It is believed that on Navy day, the American flag should be displayed on each and every flag-staff in your city.

GAVE DEMONSTRATION OF SUPER SAFETY AIRSHIP

At the luncheon meeting of the Norwich Lions club Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel, John F. Cooley of this city, gave a demonstration of his new super-safety airship. Mr. Cooley used a model of the plane in the demonstration, explaining the various features of the craft. He showed pictures of the plane and gave a detailed account of its operation. President Louis M. Crandall conducted the meeting and Melvin Worth was the song leader. There was the usual large attendance.

Two Suits on Common Counts

Susie A. Bachese of New London has brought suit in the superior court against Angelo Bachese, also of New London, seeking damages of $4,000. The suit is brought on the common counts. Another suit on the common counts is that of Max N. Abrams of New London against Nicholas Zahacefski of Colchester. He seeks damages of $700.

P. O. INSPECTOR PENDLETON PENSIONED BY GOVERNMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NORTH STONINGTON, Oct. 2.—Charles H. Pendleton of Westerly, postal inspector, now in his 80th year, has been pensioned by the United States government in whose service 40 years of his life have been spent as postoffice clerk, railway postal clerk, and for many years U. S. postoffice inspector.

Mr. Pendleton has traveled widely throughout New England, as well as other states and at one time was sent on government business to the Pacific coast. He has been cited frequently for work as detective. Notable among such cases was one extending over a period of years and of a most insidious nature, occurring in the city of Providence. This was unraveled by Mr. Pendleton and a fellow inspector and received a full page "write-up" with illustrations in a newspaper.

Among the numerous congratulatory letters received was the following from W. B. Spilman, chief inspector at Washington: "In transmitting the inclosed letter of commendation and good wishes of the postmaster general, incident to your retirement from the service, I cannot refrain from adding a personal word. As the result of your diligent and faithful service there are sections of New England, particularly Rhode Island, in which the postal service shows indelibly the Pendleton imprint of strict construction of regulations, unquestioned devotion to duty, short shrift for dishonesty, disloyalty and unfaithfulness. I am pleased to congratulate you and the service on your faithful work, and to express the hope that you may live long and prosper."

The week following Mr. Pendleton's retirement he was bidden to a banquet in Boston, given in his honor by the 40 postal inspectors of the New England district. At this banquet he was presented with a purse containing $146 in gold. Later the postal clerks of Providence presented him a like sum of gold.

Mr. Pendleton's maternal and fraternal ancestry were both of Pendleton Hill, where he spent many of his boyhood days on the farm of his Grandfather Chapman. He is a brother of Col. Edwin Pendleton of Washington, D. C., of James Pendleton, president of Industrial Trust Co., Westerly, of the late Eugene Pendleton and of Miss Ellen Pendleton, president of Wellesley college.

Mr. Pendleton is now in his 80th year, vigorous and active, and with many plans for the future in work for himself and others.

SUIT AGAINST LANDLORD FOR $25,000 DAMAGES

Suit for $25,000 damages has been brought in the superior court by Mrs. Mary Anna Dombroski of New London, against her landlord, Max N. Abrams of New London. The plaintiff alleges that because of a defective stairway in the house she rented from Abrams, she fell, July 9 last, and was seriously injured. The house is located at No. 72 Shaw street, New London.

Workmen's Compensation

Workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner A. J. Bailey:

Ashland Cotton Co., of Jewett City, employer, with Fred Kusek, 18, of Jewett City, employe; for injured right forearm sustained on Aug. 28, 1930, at the rate of $8.85 per week.

Corticelli Silk Co., of New London, employer, with Santo Cortina, 37, of New London, employe; for sprained back sustained on Aug. 12, 1930, at the rate of $17.50 per week.

Atlantic Coast Fisheries Corp., of Eastern Point, employer, with Louis Buckley, of Groton, employe; infected right hand sustained on July 11, 1930, at rate of $10.27 per week.

MOTOR ACCIDENT VICTIMS BRING DAMAGE SUITS

Several new damage actions arising from automobile accidents have been brought and filed in the office of the superior court in this city. Anna S. Curtiss of East Lyme has brought suit for $10,000 damages against Joseph Greenwald of Miami Beach, Fla. Plaintiff claims that Aug. 14 last she was residing in an automobile operated by Julia S. Smith of East Lyme on the Boston Post road, East Lyme, and that she was seriously injured when the defendant's machine collided with the Smith machine. Julia S. Smith has also brought suit against Mr. Greenwald for $10,000 as the result of injuries sustained in the accident.

Rubin Lanham of Groton has been made the defendant in two suits in which total damages of $7,000 are claimed. The actions are brought by Corben C. Shute of Philadelphia and Alexander N. Hood of Connellsville, Pa. Both claim they were injured when a machine driven by Shute and in which Hood was riding, figured in a crash with the defendant's machine at Nooseneck Hill in Rhode Island. The accident happened July 26 last.

Damages of $10,000 are sought by Andrew Palencar of Stonington from Albert R. Christenson of Roselle, N. J. Mr. Palencar claims that Aug. 23, last, the defendant's machine collided with his automobile. Plaintiff claims he was injured and his machine damaged as a result of the crash.

Annie K. Nichols and William Nichols, Jr., both of Waterford, have filed suit against Louis Mildrem of Lyme, claiming they were injured in an automobile accident in New London Oct. 11, 1929, when a coupe operated by the defendant collided with a machine in which they were riding. Negligence on the part of the defendant is charged in both suits. Annie K. Nichols claims $1,200 and William Nichols, Jr., claims $1,500 damages.

BRINGS FORECLOSURE ON OCEAN BEACH PROPERTY

A foreclosure suit has been started in the superior court by James A. Coffey of Plainfield against John F. and Mary A. Burns, husband and wife, of New London. Mr. Coffey alleges that he holds a note for $9,600 given by Mr. and Mrs. Burns on June 26, 1923, to Alexander W. Dougherty, Jr. The latter assigned the note to the plaintiff. Property located at Ocean Beach, New London, was mortgaged to secure the note.

DECREASE IN ESTIMATE OF COST OF OPERATING THE GOVT.

President Hoover Announces That the Present Fiscal Year Should Show a Decrease of $67,899,000—The September 30 Statement Showed a Surplus of $52,292,000 For the First Three Months of the 1931 Fiscal Year—There Has Been a Decrease in Customs Receipts, Income Tax and Miscellaneous Internal Revenue

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—President Hoover announced today that the October 1 estimate of the cost of operating the government during the present fiscal year showed a decrease of $67,899,000 under the estimate made last July 1 of $4,202,754,000.

The president said revised estimates by the treasury indicated the cost of government during the remainder of the 1931 fiscal year would be $4,134,855,000. He said other cuts were in prospect but did not enumerate them.

The September 30 statement of the treasury showed a surplus of $52,292,000 for the first three months of the 1931 fiscal year. At the end of business on October 1 total receipts of the government for the three months were $868,940,213 while total expenditures were $816,647,958.

The statement showed customs receipts had declined from $161,000,000 in the three months of 1930 to $94,937,161 in the same period of the present year. Income tax receipts had declined from $609,000,000 a year ago to $554,000,000 in the present year while miscellaneous internal revenue had dropped from $161,000,000 to $156,000,000.

The receipts of the government this year were approximately $150,000,000 less than in the three months last year but the expenditures also were about $150,000,000 less than a year ago.

"GLOOMY DEAN" HORRIFIED BY "LUXURY SPENDING"

OXFORD, England, Oct. 3—(AP)—Describing himself as "an utterly unrepentant early Victorian," the Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, popularly known as "the gloomy dean" of St. Paul's, today violently attacking "luxury spending," especially in the United States.

He spoke to a meeting connected with the national savings movement and repeated his previous assertion that "two years of American play would suffice to pay the whole of our national debt."

He also urged that part of England's present economic difficulties was due to excessive sums spent by Englishmen in unproductive fields.

"I was brought up to think that a good citizen was a man who put by as a rule one-third of his income, invested in sound securities, and in his old age looked forward to a moderate competence which he could leave his children.

"We have lived to see a very different state of things. We have lived to see the virtue of prudence utterly derided. Everywhere we see enormous sums spent on pleasure and amusement.

"This is more or less a world-wide phenomenon. There is one country, however, the United States, in which it is most marked.

"The amount last year spent on amusements in America was estimated at $21,945,000,000. More than the whole aggregate income of the people of this country.

TWO BANDITS OUTWITTED BY MAN THEY ROBBED

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—Erick Schwager, battered but unbowed, overtook two robbers and recovered a $1,480 payroll today by the simple expedient of riding the elevator while his assailants trod the back stairs.

Schwager, manager of the Bartholomew Holding corporation, was making up the payroll on the 11th story of an East 42nd street building when two men entered, hit him on the head, grabbed the money and made for the stairs.

The manager reached the ground floor first, locked the front door and marshalled attendants. When the robbers appeared, one was captured, but the other escaped through the rear door.

SIX MEN INDICTED ON MAIL FRAUD CHARGES

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—A federal grand jury returned indictments today against six men on charges of mail fraud which grew out of an inquiry into charges that Manhattan Electrical Supply company stock was manipulated.

The six defendants including a member of the New York Stock exchange, also were charged with conspiracy in boosting the price of the company's common stock from $27.50 to about $53 a share. Evidence before the grand jury showed brokers and investors lost between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000 when the allegedly artificial boom in the stock's price collapsed.

COSTE AND BELLONTE LAND AT ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3—(AP)—The French trans-Atlantic flyers, Major Dieudonne Coste and Lieutenant Maurice Bellonte, visited the home city of Colonel Charles A. Lindberg today and viewed the trophies presented to the man who made the first solo non-stop flight across the Atlantic.

They landed their travelworn biplane, the Question Mark, at an airport at East St. Louis, Ill., across the Mississippi river from here, at 3:07 p. m., coming here from Kansas City.

They plan to leave tomorrow before noon for Memphis, Tenn.

CONFESSED PART IN SLAYING OF LINGLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Frank Bell, prisoner in the county jail, was called before a coroner's jury tonight to tell his version of who killed Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Tribune reporter. In suddenly re-opening the Lingle inquest, Coroner Herman Bundesen said Bell had confessed taking part in the slaying plot and had named two confederates.

Coroner Bundesen said Bell had admitted to police that he drove Joe Traum, northern Indiana gang leader, and Richard M. Sullivan to Michigan avenue and Randolph street just before Lingle was killed and that the two got out there and met a blonde young man who fired the fatal shot.

BANK GUARD CONFESSES PART IN THEFT OF $64,600

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 3.—(AP)—Police announced tonight that Carl Bailey, guard for the American Trust company, had confessed that he had three men from Monroe, N. C., stage a hold-up of the bank's money truck Wednesday which resulted in the theft of $64,600.

CHINESE BANDITS SLAY WOMEN MISSIONARIES

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—News which horrified all England was received in a cable to the London headquarters of the Church Missionary society today, saying that two of its women missionaries, Miss Edith Nettleton and Miss Eleanor June Harrison, had been shot by Chinese bandits who had held them captive since last June.

The message was very brief:

"Nettleton and Harrison shot. Consul and Sills returning Foochow."

The envoy referred to is the British consul at Foochow, A. J. Martin, who had gone upriver from Foochow to negotiate the release of the women. Sills is the Rev. Alfred Sills of the Christian Missionary society, who accompanied Martin on his mission.

Tonight the foreign office said it had received a message from Martin while he was in the interior, stating briefly that he had received word from Kienyang saying Miss Nettleton and Miss Harrison had been shot.

The women were captured at Chungan, northern Fukien province, last June as they were traveling to Kienningfu. Long negotiations followed for their release and at one time the bandits sent what purported to be one of Miss Nettleton's fingers to the British consular authorities, threatening death to the women if $10,000 ransom were not paid.

A MISTRIAL CAUSED BY FORGETFUL JUROR

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—A forgetful juror caused a mistrial today in the case of former Kings County Judge W. Bernard Vause, accused of income tax evasion.

Judge Byers in Brooklyn federal court called off the trial after it was discovered one of the jurors had sat on the grand jury which indicted the former judge.

This juror, John F. Conerty, told the court that when he was selected for jury service he forgot about indicting Vause last June. He was absent from some of the grand jury sessions, he said, and the Vause case might have been considered in his absence.

The mistrial further complicated a tangled legal maze involving Vause, who resigned from the bench last June. He is under sentence of six years in federal prison for mail fraud in connection with the affairs of the Columbia Finance corporation, which failed for $400,000. County indictments charging him with grand larceny on 38 counts in connection with the Columbia Finance corporation's failure are pending. An appeal from the federal sentence also is pending.

PRESIDENT HOOVER TO SPEND THE WEEK-END AT HOME

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Back from his two-day trip to Cleveland and Philadelphia, President Hoover had the week-end to spend at home before he departs again Sunday night to speak twice in Boston on Monday and again on Tuesday at Kings Mountain battlefield, South Carolina.

He was considering going tomorrow to his mountain lodge in Virginia, where his son, Herbert Hoover, Jr., is taking medical treatment for a tubercular infection.

An accumulation of work lay on the chief executive's desk upon his return early today from the Ohio city, where he addressed the American Bankers' association.

Because of this, he was undecided whether he would be able to motor to the Rapidan river lodge. If he does, he will return late Sunday and leave a few hours later for Boston.

REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT REPORTED IN BARCELONA

MADRID, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Although the government here denies reports of a revolutionary movement in Barcelona and insists that tranquility prevails, dispatches from the city indicate that there is great unrest there.

The newspaper La Nacion says the arrest of two communists, Helios Gomez and Miro, was connected with an extensive revolutionary plot, and declares that republicans and communists are attempting to incite student strikes and other walkouts.

Barcelona authorities, the paper continues, are considering the declaration of martial law throughout the province.

COURT DECISION IN FAVOR OF PROF. ALBERT LEVITT

HARTFORD, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Prof. Albert Levitt, of Redding, scored another victory over the attorney general of Connecticut today.

Judge Allyn L. Brown, of superior court, granted Mr. Levitt's motion to dimiss the petition of the attorney general for a re-hearing on the issuance of a mandamus writ requiring the attorney general to proceed against the public utilities commissioner for failure to enforce the grade crossings elimination law. The decision of Judge Brown also denied the attorney general's motion to strike out Mr. Levitt's motion.

Both motions were argued together on Sept. 16

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

TOKYO, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Minister of the Navy Takeshi Takarabe, who was a delegate to the London naval conference, tendered his resignation to Premier Hamaguchi. The premier did not indicate whether the resignation would be accepted.

LISBON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Political circles expect that legislative elections in Portugal may be ordered before the end of the year.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The most astute minds of Scotland Yard lent their aid tonight to postal inspectors in an effort to track persons responsible for an explosion today at Mount Pleasant, London's greatest postal depot, in which four persons were injured, a mail truck was blown to pieces and letters were strewn over a wide area.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Reuter dispatches from Lwow say that the discontent of the large Ukrainian element in southeastern Galicia, now Polish territory, has been manifesting itself recently in various forms of terrorism, including the burning of farm buildings and the destruction of communication lines.

ROGERS WOULD RECOMMEND CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

HARTFORD, Oct. 3.—(AP)— Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, of New London, republican nominee for governor, today promised to recommend a constitutional amendment, if he is elected governor, to remove uncertainty on handling of acts of the general assembly by the governor.

Over the telephone from New London, Lieut. Gov. Rogers gave the following statement:

"As I understand it the decision of the supreme court just rendered establishes a different procedure on the part of the executive of the state in dealing with acts passed by the general assembly than the one which has been recognized for a number of years past.

"Of course, if the supreme court has definitely marked out a course to be followed it will be recognized and carried out by succeeding governors including myself, if elected.

"It would seem to be desirable for the adoption of an amendment to the constitution of our state removing all future uncertainty, which, if elected, I shall recommend to the next general assembly."

SEATTLE COMMUNISTS PREACH SEIZURE OF GOV'T BY FORCE

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 3.—(AP)—Communists hold nightly meetings here, preaching seizure of the government by force, County Prosecutor Ewing D. Colvin and Chief of Police Louis J. Forbes told the congressional committee headed by Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, which opened investigations here today.

The police chief said the communist movement in this region is found principally in logging camps and that more than 50 per cent of the known communists here are foreigners, mostly Finns and Russians. In reply to questions by Representative John E. Nelson of Maine, Forbes said there were no known Japanese or Chinese reds.

Communists advocated seizure of the city hall and the police department in demonstrations this past summer, the chief added.

Colvin, who is retiring this week as prosecutor, said he had taken no action against the communists because he wanted "to get those behind the scenes" and had been unable to obtain evidence exposing them.

FORMER INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTOR SURRENDERS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3—(AP)—Samuel T. Curson, former deputy internal revenue collector of Los Angeles surrendered to federal authorities today on a secret indictment charging him with manipulating the 1927 income tax return of Richard Dix, motion picture actor.

Figures used by Curson in making the return, the indictment alleged, enabled Dix to escape payment of $15,000. United States Attorney McNab said Dix will be summoned for questioning.

"Mr. Dix will have to explain many things in connection with his sworn return," McNab said, "and there may be additional criminal or civil action."

The indictment alleged Dix, whose real name is Ernest C. Brimmer, received a gross income of $241,827.48 in 1927 and was entitled to deductions of $32,672.05, leaving a tax of $43,517.60 due.

WARNS GOVT. TO HEED DEVELOPMENT OF AVIATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—A warning that unless the government heeds the development of aviation the nation will some day suffer from it was sounded tonight by Col. William E. Easterwood, Jr., of Dallas, Tex., donor of the $25,000 prize won by Coste and Bellonte for their Paris to Dallas flight.

Speaking before the Association of Advertising Men of New York, he urged organization of the air units of the military and naval forces into a separate branch under a separate secretary for aviation.

Col. Easterwood, who recently made a study of aviation aboard as a member of the aviation committee of the American Legion, ranked the United States third among the powers in air strength. France, he said, can muster 10,000 fighting planes overnight.

LESS ACREAGE BURNED IN NATIONAL FORESTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—(AP)—Despite the high fire hazard in national forests occasioned by the summer's searing drought, 81 per cent less acreage was burned this year than in the similar period of last year.

The forest service said today that with the peak of the normal fire peril passed in several regions, fire-fighting costs in the national forests so far this year have aggregated $1,011,120, a decrease of 52 per cent for the same period a year ago.

The average fire this year covered only 24.4 acres as against 131 acres a year ago.

POLICE AND POLITICIANS ALLIED WITH GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The belief that there is a "well established three-cornered alliance between the Chicago police department, the corrupt politicians and the criminal element" was expressed by the September grand jury as it concluded its investigation into the affairs of racketeers and gangsters tonight.

J. R. Clark Appointed Ambassador To Mex.

Chosen To Fill the Place Vacated Last Week By Dwight W. Morrow

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP) — J. Reuben Clark, of Salt Lake City, was appointed late today to succeed Dwight W. Morrow as ambassador [illegible] Mexico.

Announcement of the appoin[illegible] was made at the white house [illegible]row resigned only Tuesday [illegible]duct his campaign in New [illegible] for the senate.

Clark, who served as counsellor for the embassy under Morrow, is a former under secretary of state. He is credited with a wide knowledge of Mexican affairs and his appointment was described tonight by Ambassador Tellez of Mexico as a "happy one."

The choice was regarded as in line with the announced policy of President Hoover of seeking men with wide experience in Latin American affairs for those posts. Clark has been mentioned widely as the likely choice for several months.

Secretary of State Kellogg named Clark under secretary of state in 1928. On March 3, 1929, the eve of President Hoover's inauguration, the last revolution broke out in Mexico. Clark, who was in Washington, gathered the press dispatches describing the Mexican revolt, and worked all night to prepare a memorandum on Mexican conditions which during his first day of office aided President Hoover in the task of defining a United States policy toward the revolution.

Three months later, Clark gave up his work as under-secretary to become personal adviser to Ambassador Morrow. In that capacity he gained an intimate knowledge of Mexico and the problems of that republic.

Mrs. Brown, Executive

Mrs. Brown, housekeeper of scarcely more than a generation ago, was a skilled laborer. The Mrs. Brown of today is an executive. Freed from drudgery she has become a manager.

The advertisements in the daily newspaper have enabled her to be a better director of the affairs of her home than any woman of any past generation. She is primarily an intelligent buyer. She spends 85 per cent of the family income. The care with which she reads the advertisements and the wisdom with which she acts on them determine the health, happiness and prosperity of her household.

She studies every new and every accepted product that might benefit her business of home management. She compares values. She is an expert in getting 100 cents worth of comfort, protection and satisfaction for every dollar she spends. She reads the advertisements every day. On them Mrs. Brown's efficiency depends.

MATRON OF REFORMATORY AT GLEN MILLS, PA., SLAIN

GLEN MILLS, Pa., Oct. 3—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Marie Ribout, a matron and instructor at Glen Mills reformatory, with five wounds in the breast, was found today in her cottage on the state reservation. Two of the wounds, which, police said, had been inflicted either by bullets or a pointed weapon, were close to the heart.

More than 600 inmates and about 50 employes at the institution were kept within bounds of the reservation tonight on orders of Delaware county authorities.

The body was discovered by the woman's husband, John Ribout, also a state employe, about 5 p. m. Deputy Coroner George H. Rigby said she had been dead about an hour.

The authorities directed that no one was to leave the grounds of the institution until the investigation had been completed.

HOMICIDE CHARGE FOR COLLAPSE OF BUILDING

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Meyer Fine, head of a wrecking company tearing down four buildings adjoining a tenement in Greenwich Village which collapsed yesterday and killed five occupants, was arraigned today on a charge of homicide.

District Attorney Crain charged the collapse was the result of the failure of Fine's concern to shore up the tenement property.

Magistrate Weil held Fine in $5,000 bail for a hearing on Oct. 17.

Fine issued a statement saying, "We complied with all the rules, regulations and laws of the building department. The wrecking of the building was supervised by city inspectors and we followed all suggestions by them in connection with the work."

CUBAN SENATE APPROVES PRESIDENT'S PROPOSAL

HAVANA, Oct. 3.—(AP)—President Gerardo Machado's message asking for suppression of constitutional guarantees and virtual establishment of martial law in the Havana region during the congressional election campaign was approved late tonight by the Cuban senate.

Acceptance by the house of representatives was taken for granted. The house convened at 11 p. m. waiting for approval of the bill by the senate.

The provisions of the bill may be in effect by daybreak tomorrow. The official gazette, which must publish all legislative acts before they become effective, was being held open to print it.

19 SECRET INDICTMENTS IN LOUISIANA LIQUOR CASE

OPELOUSAS, La., Oct. 3—(AP)—The federal grand jury which has been considering new evidence in an allegedly immense liquor smuggling syndicate involving the schooner I'm Alone concluded its sitting tonight by returning 19 secret indictments. The grand jurors adjourned after a two-day session.

Tammany Leaders' Offer Not Acceptable

Prosecutor Todd Declared T[illegible] Would Have to Sign [illegible]onditional Waivers

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP)— Seven Tammany district leaders who also [illegible] city office capitulated today to Mayor Walker's mandate that they withdraw their refusals to waive immunity before the special grand jury investigating charges of judicial corruption here.

Their offer to testify, however, was promptly refused by Special Prosecutor Todd, in charge of the grand jury's inquiry, who said their proffered waivers were "limited or qualified." He declared they would have to sign unconditional waivers before the grand jury would accept their testimony.

A few minutes before the 4 o'clock deadline which Mayor Walker set for them to waive immunity or quit their city posts, the Tammany men announced their readiness to accede to the demand.

They addressed seven identical letters to the foreman of the grand jury and seven to Mayor Walker, declaring they were ready to "testify" to any of my acts or conduct in the discharge of my official duties and waive immunity with respect thereto."

Todd declared he considered it "significant" the offer was "limited to their official acts and conduct, although it has been made clear by Justice McCook in his instructions to the special grand jury that the attorney general, with his present limited authority from the governor, is not in a position to present to the grand jury any evidence in reference to the official acts or conduct of any persons."

DISCHARGE ANNOUNCED OF DRY ENFORCEMENT AGENT

PITTSBURG, Kans., Oct. 3. — (AP)—William M. Joerling, special federal prohibition investigator, today announced the discharge of Willis A. Buck, an enforcement agent, storm center of a recent controversy between Vice President Curtis and Major Maurice Campbell, former New York prohibition director.

Buck, who had been a federal agent for several years, was dismissed September 30, Mr. Joerling said. Dismissal followed his suspension September 27.

Two months ago Buck was transferred from Crawford county, Kansas, where he had been stationed most of the past year, to Oklahoma. Joerling said the charges against the agent included being absent from his station without leave, alleged collusion with law violators and an alleged assault without justification on a private citizen in Oklahoma.

ACCIDENTS IN THE HOME EXCEED THOSE IN INDUSTRY

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3.— (AP) —Authorities on home safety today outlined plans before the national safety congress for widespread campaign under women's organizations for safety in the home, where, it was said, accidents exceed those in industry.

Child training was stressed as one of the greatest factors in bringing about home safety by the Rev. R. W. Little of Albany, N. Y. A warning against the implanting of fear in a child's mind was made by Dr. Ada Hart Arlitt, of the University of Cincinnati. She advocated the teaching of the danger of certain things but agreed with other speakers that fear as often caused accidents as prevented them.

MOTORLESS PLANE GLIDED OVER CITY OF ELMIRA, N. Y.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Oct. 3.—(AP)— A motorless plane sailed over a city today for the first time in the history of gliding. Wolf Hirth of Germany, one of the experts attending the national glider meet here, piloted it over Elmira at 2,000 feet and dropped roses on the city in appreciation of the hospitality extended the glider fliers.

It was a big day otherwise for the gliding birdmen. Two nationally famous aviators, C. S. "Casey" Jones and Capt. Frank M. Hawks, qualified for first class glider pilots' licenses, and August Haller, of Pittsburgh, set a meet record for a distance flight. He landed at Sayre, Pa., 13 1-2 miles away, in an hour and 58 minutes.

FORMER U. S. SENATOR VARE HAS SEVERE COLD

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 3.—(AP)—Former U. S. Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania is ill at his summer home on South Berkeley square, Chelsea, with a heavy cold.

First reports were that he had suffered another stroke, but these were subsequently denied by his daughter, Miss Beatrice Vare. Dr. John J. Shaw, of Philadelphia, is in attendance.

W. GREEN URGES INCREASED PURCHASE OF COMMODITIES

President of the A. F. of L. Asserts That For the First Time in Many Months Business Opportunity is Opening—Declares That the Outlook For Employment is Better and That Means Increased Buying Power—Tells Business Men How They Can Hasten Revival and Improve Their Own Trade

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. — (AP)—Increased purchase of commodities was urged today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, as a means of stabilizing business conditions.

The suggestion was made in the monthly survey of business issued by the labor federation.

"Business men," Green said, "can hasten revival and improve their own trade without undue risk by such policies as these:

"1. Cut overhead costs (without reducing wages) by improving equipment and eliminating waste.

"2. Order ahead; start to work up a normal spring supply.

"3. Improve quality of product and reduce prices.

"4. Stimulate trade by advertising and special efforts."

Green added these measures "will increase employment and put products within reach of this year's low incomes" and wage earners "can help produce better [illegible] lower cost by improving the quality of their work and increasing efficiency."

"For the first time in many months," Green said, "business opportunity is opening. Fundamental adjustments have been made, favorable signs are appearing. Our foreign trade shows signs of improving, wholesale prices are more stable, retail prices are down nearer the point where workers can buy, the outlook for employment is better and that means increased workers' buying power. Stores see their customers coming back. Opportunity is here for those who are ready to make the best of it."

Green asserted that the course of business in the "coming four weeks will determine the prospects for next winter" and that "if we want to avoid a winter like last year's we must plan for it now by using every intelligent means of promoting business revival."

COMMISSION DISCUSSED ALCOHOCOL REGULATIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—(AP)—The industrial advisory counsel appointed by Commissioner Doran to cooperate with the bureau of industrial alcohol in working out problems arising under the prohibition law perfected its organization here today and discussed the new alcohol regulations.

Henry S. Chatfield, president of the National Oil, Paint, and Varnish association of New York, was chosen chairman.

The committee of sixteen was named by Doran to advise the bureau regarding the new regulations drawn up under the Williamson law which placed supervision of the industrial alcohol bureau jointly upon the treasury and the department of justice. After considering the new regulations under which industrial alcohol will be manufactured and sold, the committee had Assistant Attorney General Youngquist, Assistant Secretary Lowman and Commissioner Doran as its luncheon guests.

Doran told the committee that all legitimate users of alcohol would receive adequate supplies and said that the government dealing with doctors, druggists and manufacturers were based upon the principal of a square deal.

GUILTY OBTAINING MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETENSES

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Elmer S. Huckins, the Hancock, Wis., promoter, whose "investments" for a time are reputed to have paid the fabulous dividends of 26 and 52 per cent, was convicted by a jury in district court today of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Defense attorneys indicated they would appeal. The conviction carries a maximum penalty of seven years' imprisonment.

The state based its case on a complaint of Elwood Royster of Cedar Rapids, that Huckins had persuaded him to invest money in an enterprise which Huckins said was the sale of defective cigars in wholesale lots. The defense offered no testimony. George Huckins, a son, was previously convicted on a similar charge and has appealed.

WATERBURY MAN SOUGHT FOR SHOOTING OF WIFE

WATERBURY, Oct. 3—(AP)—Napoleon Norman, 61, was still being sought by police here tonight for the shooting of his wife, Mrs. Rose Norman, 60, and her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Theriault, 39, in their home at 285 Grand View avenue this morning. All trace of Norman was lost when he rushed out of the house and though it was believed he had entered the woods a short distance from the scene of the shooting, posses who hunted the section all day were unable to find him.

Hospital officials stated tonight that both victims of the shooting would recover. Mrs. Norman was shot twice in the head and her daughter was wounded in the shoulder when she ran to aid her mother.

DAY OF MOURNING IN DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Oct. 3—(AP)—Today, one month after the hurricane, the government and the populace observed a day set aside for national mourning.

Impressive services were held in the cathedral in memory of the dead.

Afterward thousands of persons journeyed to the Plaza Comombina for other ceremonies in memory of the dead who were buried or burned there in the days following the catastrophe.

Steady rain fell all morning.

Some of the emergency hospitals are concluding their work, their patients having recovered. The provisioning problem has been simplified and the lodging of the homeless met by the construction of barracks in an elevated part of the city.

HAVE DECIDED NOT TO HANDLE CARGOES OF RUSSIAN OATS

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Oct. 3—(AP)—The Aberdeen and District Corn Merchants association has decided not to handle any cargoes of Russian oats coming to this port.

Earlier in the day a committee of the Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine area executive of the National Farmers' union of Scotland decided to issue an appeal asking grain merchants, millers and others not to deal with imported cereals at the present time. This action followed a report that a vessel was en route to Aberdeen with a cargo of 750 tons of Russian oats.

The appeal said that owing to the large quantities of home grown grain available for distribution, imported oats would have a disastrous effect on the community.

U. S. S. MONTCALM IS RIDING OUT THE STORM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The U. S. S. Montcalm, an ocean tug, after running into heavy seas off the coast of Florida which caused it to radio to the navy department for aid, was proceeding tonight under favorable conditions to Charleston, South Carolina, its requests for convoys cancelled.

On the way from its base at Guantanamo, Cuba, for a regular overhaul at Charleston, the ship encountered heavy seas and rough weather early yesterday afternoon. Its message for help was picked up by the Tropical Radio Co. at Miami and relayed to the navy department.

The U. S. S. Concord, a light cruiser flagship of the destroyer squadrons of the scouting fleet, en route from Newport, Rhode Island, to Charleston, was ordered to proceed immediately to the Montcalm's position. The Concord reported heavy weather which would delay arrival until after dark.

Meanwhile the S. S. Orbita, bound for Europe via Bermuda, messaged she was steaming to aid the Montcalm and render such assistance as might be necessary in saving lives.

At 6 a. m. the Montcalm reported she was riding the storm comfortably head to sea, with no mechanical trouble, and a few hours later requested no ships be sent to her vicinity.

The navy department immediately broadcast to all ships that the Montcalm no longer needed assistance, and at the same time directed the Concord to proceed to Charleston.

BEQUESTS IN WILL OF THE LATE DANIEL GUGGENHEIM

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The will of the late Daniel Guggenheim, copper magnate, was filed for probate today, leaving $2,000,000 to each of the testator's children, M. Robert Guggenheim, Harry F. Guggenheim and Gladys C. Straus, and naming the widow as residuary legatee. No estimate of the total estate was given.

Trust funds of $250,000 are established for Mrs. Guggenheim's sisters, Mrs. Rose E. Quicke and Cora G. Rothschild, and his niece, Mrs. Nettie E. Knox.

Trusts of $50,000 each are established for Mr. Guggenheim's sisters-in-law, Mrs. Salvina S. Grant and Mrs. Claudia S. Frankel.

One million, five hundred thousand dollars is left to the Daniel and Florence Guggenheim foundation, a charitable organization, and the executrix is authorized to make grants in aid of the education of the children of certain of the Guggenheim employes. As well as being residuary legatee, Mrs. Guggenheim is named executrix. In case of her inability to act, Mr. Guggenheim's brothers, Murry, Solomon R. and Simon Guggenheim, are named to act in her place.

TRUCK CRASHED INTO TREE; SIX PERSONS SHAKEN UP

NORTH HAVEN, Oct. 3—(AP)—Six persons were bruised and shaken up and four others escaped injury today, when a bus in which they were passengers, crashed into a tree.

Tony DeLucia, of Atlantic City, N. J., who was en route to the national American Legion convention at Boston, was the most seriously hurt. He suffered a severe cut on the nose which required four stitches.

Carroll B. Wetherbee, of Belmont, Mass., driver of the bus was arrested on a reckless driving charge and released in $500 bonds for a hearing October 13. Sheriff Carlson quoted him as saying that he dozed off at the wheel.

All the occupants in the bus were taken to Springfield and Boston in another bus.

TO DELVE INTO COLORADO OIL SHALE LANDS MATTER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—(AP)—The department of justice today announced it would continue its "inquiry to ascertain the situation in the interior department" concerning charges of maladministration of Colorado oil shale lands despite the refusal of Ralph S. Kelley, former Denver federal lands chief, to cooperate with the department.

The statement came after Chairman Nye of the senate lands committee had conferred with Kelley and said he thought the former Colorado official was "quite thoroughly justified" in his charges.

Party workers have been busy the past week in the interests of their candidates for the annual town election to be held Monday. Bets on a 2-2 basis in favor of a sweeping republican victory were being placed by several of the residents Friday. First Selectman Charles A. Kramer who was renominated by the republicans has won wide support among members of both parties as a result of his conservative and business-like transaction of the town's affairs during the four terms he has been in office. In last year's election, he ran way ahead of the rest of his ticket, defeating his democratic opponent by 116 votes. There are now seven hundred and ninety-eight names on the voting list, eighty-three of which were made this year. Of this number about five hundred are normally republican votes.

Mrs. Lester Robbins and her brother Frank S. Rathbun of West Hartford visited Friday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Swan Rathbun.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Case and Mr. Case's father, James S. Case are on a several days' motor trip through northern New England. During Mr. Case's absence, John H. Conrad is substitute carrier on the rural mail route to the Gardner lake section.

Mrs. Emma Conrad returned to her home on Norwich avenue Friday, considerably improved, following several months' treatment at Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London.

Oats without hulls, believed to have been first introduced in Ohio by Joseph Hertel, who lives south of Van Wert, have aroused considerable interest among farmers in Van Wert county. An eight-acre field of hull-less oats, grown by Hertel, was planted late and ripened ahead of other varities planted earlier.

MORE THAN USUAL INTEREST IN TOWN ELECTION IS ANTICIPATED MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 3—The stage is being rapidly set here for the second bi-ennial election of officers of the town of Windham to be held here Monday with voting from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m., at the four voting districts.

Circumstances arising from the fact that an adult of the town books is now well underway have served to create unusual interest in the forthcoming elections and a record vote may be the result. There are 6,491 voters in the town. It is the first town election in 31 years that Frank P. Fenton does not head the democratic ticket for town clerk and treasurer. Following the withdrawal of Mr. Fenton from the candidacy which he had unanimously received at the regular democratic caucus, the vacancy was filled by the democratic town committee by the nomination of Mrs. Alice D. Stoughton. Under persistent rumors that Mrs Stoughton, who has been assistant in the town treasurer's office for eight years was requested to withdraw from the candidacy under pressure, a second replacement was made by the committee in the nomination of Thomas A. Shea. Mr. Shea had been democratic registrar of voters for the past 10 years. At the regular caucus he was defeated for renomination to that office by John J. Sullivan.

The new democratic standard bearer faces strong opposition from Harold C. Lincoln, republican, a well-known furniture dealer and undertaker who has been associated with his father in conducting the J. C. Lincoln company. He has never been in the political field before.

A considerable amount of new timber is seen in the two major tickets. The republican line-up follows: Assessors, George E. Gifford and Alphonse L. Gelinas; board of relief, C. Arthur Keeney and John H. Wilcox; selectmen, Albert L. French and Guy S. Richmond; town clerk and treasurer, Harold C. Lincoln; agent of town deposit fund, George H. Spencer; auditor, Charles J Dondero; tax collector, Gerard E. Loiselle; constables, Wilbur G. Stevens, Ralph J. Lussier, Fred L. Lewis and John F. Thompson; registrar of voters, A. Linn Weatherhead; school committee, Dr. Frank E. Guild, Raymond A. Parker and Leslie F. Hartson (term of four years); Stanley J. Sumner (term of two years).

Democrat: Assessors, M. Eugene Lincoln and Alexis Caisse; board of relief, Charles H. Palmer and John C. Barstow; selectmen, William A. Buck and Jeremiah C. Healy; town clerk and treasurer, Thomas A. Shea; agent of town deposit fund, George L. Shepaum; auditor, John M. Bransfield; tax collector, Alvin V. Nelson; constables, William Guilford, Wilfred A. Blanchette, James W. Simpson and Thomas Mara; registrar of voters, John J. Sullivan; town school committee, William B. Sweeney, Aime J. Martineau and James F. Twomey (four year term); John Reilly (two year term).

The republican nominees for selectmen are newcomers in the political field. Mr. French is a real estate man and previously was manager for many years of the local branch of Swift & company. Mr. Richmond is a well-known progressive resident of Windham Center. Both these men are conducting an active campaign. Mr. Buck, now concluding his first term as first selectman and Mr. Healy, who has been member of the board for several years are pointing to their past record in office for re-election on the democratic ticket.

Three of the four candidates for assessors are elected. George E. Gifford, republican and the two democratic candidates have been on the board for the past two years. Alphonse L. Gelinas, running with Mr. Gifford on the republican ticket has held high town and city offices in past years.

There are also three of the four members of the board of relief elected. C. Arthur Keeney, third selectman for the past two years and John H. Wilcox of the Willimantic Trust company are republican opponents against Charles H Palmer and John C. Barstow, the former having been a member of the board the past term.

The republican candidate for tax collector, Gerard E. Loiselle, is now serving his second term as a city assessor while his democratic opponent, Alvin V. Nelson, is a new arrival in the political arena. The offices of auditor are not competitive.

There are five of the eight candidates for town school committee who are seeking re-election. They are, Dr. Frank E. Guild, veteran member and chairman of the board, Raymond A. Parker and Stanley J. Sumner republicans, William B. Sweeney and John Reilly, democrats.

UNION

There was a light frost in some localities Monday morning, Sept. 29. Wednesday morning October 1, the frost was more severe in some parts of the town while on the hills very little harm was done.

The prolonged drouth is causing more and more discomfort. There are some places where water has to be carted or trucked in barrels, from distant pond or brook, for cattle. Wells are either dry or failing and fortunate are people who have good springs, even at a distance.

The local teachers are attending a course in social studies which covers fifteen weeks. A meeting is held each Tuesday in Abington. All of the teachers under Supervising Agent Calvin Stanley in the towns of Pomfret, Eastford, Woodstock and Union are attending. Mr. Howe, instructor in New Britain Normal school, has charge of the meetings, four of which have been held.

After the summer vacation, the first meeting of the Union Home Economics club was held in the town hall Wednesday afternoon of last week. Mrs. Sara W. Dimock, home demonstration agent, gave instruction and help in hat renovation. A program of work for the coming year was considered. The next meeting is to be held morning and afternoon on Wednesday, Oct. 8. Mrs. Dimock will give more instruction and help in reblocking felt hats if those attending bring their hats. Help will be given in renovating velvet hats, if those wanting assistance will bring the hats and velvet. The meeting opens at 10:30 and the covered dish dinner will be at noon.

A. E. PENRY DIES SUDDENLY FROM HEART DISEASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 3.—Arthur Eugene Penry, 53, was found dead in his room at his home in East Killingly shortly after 6 o'clock this morning, victim of a heart attack and a complication of diseases from which he had been suffering. He had been ill for a week past.

Mr. Penry lived alone, but for the past few days, during the course of his illness, a woman had been staying there to care for him. She discovered his body lying on the floor of his room a few minutes after she had previously looked in at him when he was still alive. The body was viewed by Dr. F. P. Todd, medical examiner.

Mr. Penry was born in East Killingly, a son of Calvin and Louise Penry. He was a laborer and during the past summer and early fall had worked on the highways of the town in the district of Selectman A. D. Sayles. He leaves two brothers, Edward, resident in Danielson, and Frank, of Sterling.

From every political camp in town today there issued warnings to voters to be careful about marking ballots in Monday's election. It is forecast that there will be many split tickets. Splitting tickets is a tricky business, and leaders fear many electors may lose their votes on account of improper marking unless great care is taken. For this reason both republican and democratic leaders are suggesting that any voter who is in doubt as to his or her ability to mark a ballot properly should take advice from someone in whom they have confidence.

One point that is being particularly stressed is that only two of the five candidates for selectmen may be voted for by any single elector. Voting for more than two invalidates the ballot insofar as the vote for selectmen is concerned. If a name is written in the blank column for selectmen only one other candidate for that office may be voted for.

The slight discoloration of the city water the past few days and the rather brackish taste that has been generally noted for a day or two is due to the fact that employes of the Crystal Water Co. have been making a periodical cleaning of the reservoir wells. This is done about twice each year, and the work for the fall is now completed. While the cleaning was going on, water from the Hygeia reservoir was going out through a bypass into the mains. It is now coming out in the usual way—from the well, through a screen and into the mains.

It was estimated today that as many as 60 former service men will be in Boston Tuesday to witness the great parade of the American Legion, assembling in that city now for the annual national convention. The local men will go individually or in groups. They do not plan to take part in the parade, which is expected to take eight hours to pass a given point. One reason for this is that the Connecticut section will not begin to move until about 5 p. m. Delegations from states farthest from Massachusetts will be given the right of the line, while the nearby states' delegations will be well toward the rear.

Arthur DeForest, who is a delegate from Danielson, representing Volture No 124, 40 and 8, will leave for Boston on Sunday.

Advance guards of the assembling hosts of Legion men, Boston-bound, were noticed motoring through Danielson today, and on Saturday and Sunday this particular traffic is expected to be heavy through this town.

The following program is to be played by the Killingly High school band at the concert it is to play on Davis park Monday evening: March, Here They Come (Weidt); overture, Spirit of Youth (Sordillo); cornet solo, Evening Star (Wagner), by Milton Phelan; march, Wien Bleibt Wien (Schrammel); brass quartet, The Rosary (Nevin), Milton Phelan, Mildred Young, Pauline LaMarche and George Seaver; overture, Youth Triumphant (Gibbs); march, Our Director; brass quartet, Selections, Gerard Gorman, Norman Winslow, Milton Phelan and Jack Huntington; march, Connecticut March.

Manager George DeForest of the Danielson soccer team of the Eastern Connecticut soccer league said this afternoon that at a meeting at English hall in Taftville last night there was considerable opposition to [illegible] main objection appeared to be that he has what some of the other league managers regarded as ringer players in the lineup. This Manager DeForest denies, at the same time admitting that they know what the soccer game is all about and are good men. [illegible] however, Danielson is in. Also two additional teams—Baltic and Jewett City—making an eight-team league. The other entrants are Taftville, Putnam, Wauregan, Plainfield and New London.

The season's opening here will be Sunday afternoon at the Paco grounds, off Cottage street. The New London Rangers, regarded as one of the fastest outfits in the league, will furnish the opposition.

GILMAN NOMINATED FOR STATE SENATOR BY DEMOCRATS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 3.—Tonight in the town hall, at a democratic senatorial caucus for the 28th district, Alexander Gilman, former postmaster of Putnam, and a resident of that city, was nominated to make the run against Walter Brown, the republican nominee. The nomination first was offered to Frederick E. Bitgood of Danielson, but he declined to accept on account of the state of his health. The convention was entirely harmonious and was presided over by E J Keagan of Thompson as chairman and F. E. Bitgood of Danielson as clerk.

Colonel Henry W. Babson, veteran of the Civil war, will be in Melrose, Mass., with relatives Saturday for the observance of his 87th birthday Tuesday next. He plans to be in Boston to witness the great parade of the American Legion hosts.

Frederick E Bitgood will be moderator at the annual town meeting on Monday, it being the democratic party's turn to select for that place this year.

Rev. Henry F. Chagnon, who is to be transferred from All Hallows' parish, Moosup, where he has served as an assistant, was a resident of Wauregan in his youth, and some of his sisters still live there. Likewise, Rev Henry L. Chabot, who is to be transferred from St. Ann's parish, Waterbury, to All Hallows' at Moosup, is of Wauregan, he being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Chabot of that place.

Two more business days remain in which to make deposits in our savings department and receive interest on them from Oct 1. The Windham County National Bank.—adv.

In Monday's annual town election here the polls will open at 8 a. m., and close at 6 p m. Given clear weather it is expected that the vote will be the heaviest cast in a town election in recent years, this due largely to the battle for places on the board of selectmen.

Members of Killingly grange have invited the members of Highland grange of South Killingly to attend the meeting of the local body next Monday evening.

Next Tuesday afternoon, the members of the Fortnightly club are to meet with Mrs. Arthur G. Bill of Maple street.

Judge W. Fenner Woodward will return to his home here Saturday after having been a patient at the Hartford hospital for nearly three weeks past.

Mrs. A. E. Withington, who fell a fractured her right arm while at work in her home on Spring street Wednesday, was reported today as resting comfortably.

It is announced that recent additions to the scholarship fund of the Killingly Woman's club total $179 25

John Z. LaBelle, Ballouville, a republican candidate for selectman in this town, is vice-president of the Windham County Farmers' association and a director of the Eastern Connecticut Poultry Producers. He is also a member and secretary-treasurer of the Killingly Theft Detecting society.

In common with other towns throughout the state, Killingly's republican caucus will be held next Thursday evening here in Danielson, to name candidates for representative, justices of the peace, etc. In the last session of the legislature A. W. Williams of Danielson and William Hunter of Goodyear, republicans, were the representatives, as they were also during the previous session.

An evening course in poltry raising is offered without charge to interested persons in the agriculture department room at Killingly High school. Walter G. Bruce, instructor in that department, is in charge. Sessions are to be held every Thursday evening, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Both men and women are eligible for enrollment.

NO. GROSVENORDALE

An alarm was sounded Wednesday evening about 9.30 for a brush fire on the so-called Pond Lilly road, off the state road just north of this village. When the firemen arrived the fire had been extinguished by passing motorists.

Taken to Jail.

Two men taken into custody Wednesday evening by Officer Raoul Blanchette on charges of intoxication and disturbance of the peace, appeared before Judge Percy P. Tourtellotte Thursday morning. They gave the names of Roy and Bourke of parts unknown. They pleaded guilty and were fined $20 and costs, and being unable to pay, were given a jail sentence of 46 days. They were taken to Brooklyn jail by Officer Blanchette.

Funeral services for Mrs. Catherine Goyette were held at St. Joseph's church Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. The solemn mass of requiem was chanted by Rev. Father Lavallee with Rev. Fr. Boilleau deacon and Rev. Fr. Cassey of St. Mary's parish, Putnam, sub-deacon. Delegates from the Ladies' of St. Anne were Mrs. Mederic Seney, Mrs. Adelard Lachapelle, Mrs. Lamontagne and Mrs. Menoche. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. Mrs. Goyette, who was 42, is survived by her husband and a daughter.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church met with Mrs. Wyman Rawson Wednesday afternoon. Miss Thayra I. Walker was in charge of the program, arranged from "The Friend."

Miss Mary Minarik of Thompson road, Webster, Mass., driver of a sedan, was summoned before Justice of Peace P. P. Tourtellotte Wednesday night on a charge of failure to grant right of way made against her by State Police Officer Lionel Poirier following a collision at Kenney's corner, West Thompson, Wednesday. Miss Minarik pleaded guilty. Her trial was continued to October 8. She was driving south toward Putnam and was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Barbara Minarik, Jacqueline Motyka, Mary Kulik, Mary Ryan and Angele Duslak. According to the police Ernest R. Barker, 72 Vine street, East Providence, driver of a White truck owned by the General Baking Co., proceeding from Thompson failed to be granted his half of the road by Miss Minarik, whose car struck his and overturned it. No one was injured except for scratches and bruises.

Alfred Nobrega, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Nobrega, observed his ninth birthday Wednesday with a party. His guests were: Adelard Hamel, Roger Fournier, Philip Charbonneau, Mary Ernestine and John Nobrega.

HANNER BEGS TO MAKE RESTITUTION BEFORE STARTING 5-YEAR SENTENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 3—Pleading guilty to two counts of obtaining money under false pretenses, Frank Hanner, of Willimantic, alias Frank Sousa of Boston, Mass., was sentenced by Judge Newell Jennings in superior court in this city today to serve a term of not less than five nor more than six years in the state prison at Whethersfield. When previously arraighed, Hanner entered pleas of guilty to 10 counts of fraudulent issuance of checks, the majority of which were written on drafts of the Uncas National Bank and Trust company of Norwich and the Pheonix National Bank and Trust company of Hartford. These charges were nolled by State's Attorney Howard C Bradford after Hanner through his attorney, Public Defender Harry E Back, of Danielson, consented to plead guilty to the revised charges and accept the prison sentence. At the prison, Hanner is to be treated for his abnormal mental condition, declared by physicians to be incentive for his fraud activities. The sentence was passed in separate allotments. On the first count he received a prison term of not less than two years nor more than three and on the second he was sentenced to serve three years. The second sentence to begin at the expiration of the first.

Hanner, a mere boy, wept bitterly as he stood before the bar and heard sentence pronounced. Before repairing to the prisoner's docket he begged for permission to address the court. His request was granted and in a few words he implored the court to allow him to make full restitution for his fraudulent activities "What I did before I was married I am willing to suffer for, but I'm married now and my wife needs me, I beg of you to allow me to make full restitution for what I did after I was married, then the law can give me the punishment to the limit, because I deserve it."

In imposing the minimum sentence provided in the statutes for offenses of this nature, Judge Jennings said that in view of the past record of Hanner showing his extensive operations along these lines he was prompted to reconsider the case and carefully weigh all facts before imposing sentence in order that he could dispose of it in the best interests of the young man. Hanner after hearing sentence turned away from the bar and walked to the prisoners docket and after bidding farewell to his young wife, a Taftville girl, he was taken by deputy sheriffs to the county jail to await transfer to Whethersfield prison.

PROPERTY CHANGES RESULT FROM VIADUCT CONSTRUCTION

Early next week the last cement work on the new bridge will be completed, which will be the north and south approach balustrades to the new Leonard street. This street, which is to be of water bound macadam, with cement walks on both sides, will be finished within a week. From the residential viewpoint, the property owners on South Main street have received a decided benefit. From any viewpoint, their property has been materially enhanced in value. The stream of heavy trucking, buses, vans, tankers, with all the other vehicular traffic which has rattled and roared through South Main street will be routed, within a couple of weeks, over the new Quinebaug viaduct. A real estate authority gave his opinion Friday that if offered for sale, the South Main street residences would now command a fancy figure. The street is to be open in all points just as it is today with the single exception that there will be a closed railroad crossing at the east end. In regard to snow, the borough will take over South Main street, which has been a state highway, as soon as the viaduct is open to traffic, and will keep it clear of snow and in repair, in connection with the regular street maintenance system. Property owners, who will now have quieter and more attractive homes, with no convenience interfered with except the railroad crossing, are the Fisk Rubber Co., the Barry estate, Wallace H Payne, Mrs. F. S. Leonard, John Sharkey Lloyd G. Buckingham, Miss S. K. Adams, R. J. Guy, Frank I. Ray and Mrs. Alice Anthony. Wolf's garage and the Adams Motor Co. will be in the dead end of South Main street, when the crossing is closed, but may not be in so bad after the change of traffic goes into effect. The old Lisbon bridge, which has just been replanked, will remain open for the accommodation of such residents of Sylvandale as shall prefer to come over it and to the new bridge via Leonard street. The new Sylvandale street, which will be off the state road, will then come under the highway system of the town of Lisbon. When it comes to future repairs on the Lisbon bridge, it was said Friday, that doubtless the town of Griswold would be unlikely to assume further responsibility. When it comes to passing around the commendation items, and many will be due, both the contractor, M. A. Gammino and the state of Connecticut, there will be none who will merit such action in a greater degree than State Engineer Lucian H. Beebe. The whole works have been under his watchful eye and he has been right on the job every minute of every day for a year. Mr. Beebe is connected with the office of Division Engineer John Smith of Norwich and hails from Waterford.

Friday's exercises at the Riverside grammar school included the following program: Room 3, Julia Nowakowski, leader; address of welcome, James Larrabee; song, "You're Very Welcome Everyone," entire class; poem, "After Vacation," William LaPoint; piano selection, "The Glow-Worm," Olga Zegeer; oral compositions, Life in the New England Colonies previous to the Revolution, Sophie Pliska; Life in the Middle Colonies, Blanche Grobofski; Life in the Southern Colonies, Anthony Vanchu; The Causes of the Revolution, Alice Papenski; poem, "The Uprising in '96," describing the battle of Bunker Hill", by Thomas Buchanan, read by John Bensuk; piano selection, "The Norwegian Cradle Song," Norton Gardiner.

A chicken pie supper served in the Congregational church vestry Thursday was well attended, the receipts being over one hundred and fifty-one dollars. The proceeds are to be divided between the Ladies' society and the Missionary society. George A. Ross donated the chickens and ice cream. The tables, vestry and parlors were elaborately decorated with dahlias, marigolds, cosmos and zinnias from Mrs. Andrew McNicol's gardens. The supper was in charge of Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, Mrs. F. E Robinson, Mrs. G. A. Ross, Mrs Abraham Zegeer and Mrs. Andrew McNicol, assisted by Miss Kate Ross. Mrs. E. H. Hiscox was in charge of the waitresses, Mrs. William Hill, Mrs. Joseph Gill, Mrs. H. T. Jeffers, Mrs. H. A. Tomlinson, Mrs. F. D. Ballou, Mrs. Fred Whalley, Mrs. E. A Faust, Mrs. Walter Marshall, Mrs. C. D. Wolf, Mrs. W. A. Broadfoot, Mrs. W. H. Payne, Mrs. W. A. Richardson and Mrs. Andrew McNicol.

The Willing Workers class of the Methodist church, Mrs. J. W. Carter teacher, was assisted by several women in serving a supper of baked beans, brown bread, cabbage and potato salads, rolls, cake and coffee Thursday in the vestry. The table decorations were petunias and asters. The members of the class who served at the tables were Evelyn Clark, Anna Bugbee, Harriett McCluggage, Bertha Davis, Edith Maryott, Janet Maryott, Marian Thornton, Bessie Medick, Hazel Johnson and Helen Hart. The women who assisted were Mrs. Albert Harris, Mrs. Harry Davis, Mrs. L. D. Howe, Mrs. Ella Geer, Mrs. Merton Bugbee, Mrs. Nellie Wharton, Mrs. Mary Howes and Mrs. Dora Johnson. The receipts were over fifty dollars.

Miss Esther Crouch, of Ledyard, is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dawley.

A Rally day service is to be held in the Sunday school room in the Congregational vestry Sunday morning at 12 o'clock. A special program is to be given by the children of the school. The Cradle Roll of twenty-one members has received special invitations and will occupy the parlor. The home department is also especially invited and invitations of varied sorts have been sent to each class and church family. Each department will receive different favors at the close of the program. The missionary box for birthday money for those who have had birthdays during the last month will receive donations of money amounting to the number of years, from several persons. The platform is to be decorated in keeping with the harvest season. At the regular church service preceding the Rally day service there will be special choir music, including a solo by Miss Sadie Thompson, under direction of the chorister and organist, Mrs. Walter Benjamin.

Stanley Malek writes home from Alliance college, in Cambridge Springs, Pa., where he is a freshman, of the fun the college had in a form of harmless hazing. The freshmen were boliged to procure a big team wagon and acting as the moving power, draw the older boys through the streets of the town. The road was entirely given over to the hilarious stuednts who also staged a pillow fight, and were liberally pelted with soft fruit from nearby stores. In turn the older boys gave the younger ones a free ride back.

Frank Barber of Boswell avenue, Norwich spent several days last week with his niece, Miss Martie Barber.

SOUTH WINDHAM

The annual meeting of South Windham Congregational Sunday school was held Sunday at the close of the regular session. Miss Edith Baker was elected secretary, Vincent Johnson, treasurer; Miss Avis Cobb, elementary superintendent; Mrs. J. F. Cobb, superintendent of cradle roll and devotional exercises. Rev. Joseph F. Cobb, formerly of Norwich, is the superintendent of the school. The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed that the school had a successful and interesting year. Thirteen members, approximately one-third of the membership, were perfect in attendance during the year. Bibles were presented for perfect attendance to six children, Allene, Charles and Robert Backus, Louise and Herbert Johnson and Alfred Card. Little Clinton Card, who is only four, received a Bible story book. Alfred and Clinton Card are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Card. Mrs. Card was formerly Miss Ida Adams, of Norwich.

Vincent Johnson was given a book for perfect attendance, and Walter Johnson, who was absent only on account of illness, was given honorable mention. Officers and teachers present every Sunday were: Miss Edith Baker, Mrs. Joseph F. Cobb, Miss Avis Cobb, Miss Myra Crandall and Miss Ethel Southerlin. The superintendent, Mr. Cobb, was absent only when keeping preaching engagements in other places.

American wooden pencils are exported to 78 countries and the refillable type to 100.

PUTNAM

MRS. DE CLARK GRANTED DIVORCE; HUSBAND IN PRISON

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 3—Mrs. Pedro DeClark, colored, 66 School street, Putnam, was granted a decree of divorce this morning in superior court by Judge Newell Jennings, from her husband who on last Friday was sentenced to serve a prison term ranging from 8 to 15 years. DeClark was convicted of a statutory charge involving attacks on his minor daughter. The divorce action of Mrs. DeClark was presented by State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford, who prosecuted the state's case against the husband of the woman. The court granted Mrs. DeClark legal separation under a special statute which provides that when any married person shall have been convicted of an offense against chastity, such offense would be grounds for a divorce and the aggrieved may petition the court before which the conviction was obtained, at the same term upon serving notice to the person so convicted.

The offending husband put in another appearance in court this morning after notice of his wife's intended action had been served upon him. Before opening the case Judge Jennings inquired of Public Defender Harry E. Back, if DeClark objected in any way to his wife's intentions. Mr. Back informed the court that he had no interest in the matter whatever. The decree was immediately granted without a single word of evidence being introduced by the plaintiff.

At the adjournment of the session DeClark was taken in custody of Sheriff C. A. Gates of Willimantic to the county jail where he will be held until the adjournment of the criminal term of court, after which he will be transferred together with other prisoners to the state prison at Whethersfield to commence his long sentence.

REV. E. J. BOILEAU TRANSFERRED TO WATERBURY PARISH

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct 3—Diocesan orders issued Thursday by Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, have affected the clergy at St. Mary's church, in the transfer of Rev. Ernest J. Boileau, curate there, and principal of St. Mary's parochial school for the past two years, who has been assigned to the assistant pastorate of St. Ann's church in Waterbury. Father Boileau will terminate his ecclesiastical duties at St. Mary's tomorrow morning and will report to his new assignment Saturday afternoon to prepare for the celebration of his first mass there on Sunday morning. Father Boileau said tonight that his new appointment proved to be as great a surprise to him as it did to members of the church. Father Boileau is widely known outside of church circles. He is held in high esteem by both the French and English speaking element of the parish and his loss will prove a great one to the pupils of St. Mary's school, whose educational needs he has directed for the past two years. Fr. Boileau became curate at St. Mary's on Sept 7 1928, being named to succeed Rev. W. Arthur Routhier who was transferred to St. Anthony's church in Bridgeport.

In a sense Father Boileau through his transfer received today is returning home, for Waterbury is his birthplace and it was from St. Ann's church that he received his call to the clergy. After deciding upon a priestly life he spent eight years in study at Montreal college and two years at the Seminary of Philosophy at Montreal and a year at Lavalle university in Quebec. He also spent a year in Algiers, Africa, laboring as an novitiate with the white fathers. Returning to this country Father Boileau studied at the Fulpician seminary in Washington and completed his studies two years later at St. Mary's seminary at Baltimore. His reward for his long years of devoted study, which number 14 in all, was his ordination to the priesthood which took place in Hartford, May 23, 1923.

Mrs. Minnie L. Dexter Given Decree

Mrs. Minnie L. Dexter, of Franklin street, was granted a decree of divorce from her husband Harold L. Dexter. The action which was uncontested was granted on grounds of desertion. Mrs. Dexter testified that she was married in Providence on March 24, 1917. She said she was 17 years of age at that time. Her husband she said, frequently left her and remained away for long periods. She said his last act of desertion occurred three years ago and that he had not communicated with her during that time, although he informed her of his whereabouts after she had instituted divorce proceedings. Witnesses testifying in behalf of Mrs. Dexter were, her mother Mrs Threasa J. Tourtellotte of Franklin street, Mrs E. T Perrin of Bradley street and Mrs. Ida M. Hall.

Mrs. Julia Mooney, wife of Henry Mooney, of Mechanicsville died today at the Day Kimball hospital where she recently underwent a major operation. Mrs. Mooney was 71 years of age. She was born in Moosup, but had resided practically all of her life in Mechanicsville where she was widely known. She is survived by her husband.

The condition of Mrs. Edgar M. Warner of South Main street, who is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, was reported as improved today. Mrs. Warner is suffering from a heart attack.

William E. Moss of Mechanics street was in Fall River this week where he visited with Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston, a patient at the Truesdell hospital there. Mr Moss said that he found Chief Thurston to be cheerful and still fighting determinedly to win back his strength and health snatched from him more than a month ago when stricken with serious illness.

There is a large number of students attending the evening school classes now in session at the State Trade school. Courses are available at the evening school in all of the trades.

A large number of school boys have enrolled in the recently organized Putnam chapter of the American Air Cadet corps, which is operating under the direction of District Supervisor L. G. Cullen of New London.

Rev. Joseph Vasey, new pastor of Congregational church and Mrs. Vasey, who arrived in this city Wednesday, will be formally received by the members of the parish at a reception to be tendered in their honor next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The function will be in the church parlors.

The republicans of the town will lead the field again when they meet in caucus next Thursday evening to name their candidates for representatives to the legislature, judge of probate and justices of the peace. Only one possible contest is looming up at the present and that concerns the party's choice for legislators. Leon T. Wilson of Laurel street is the only candidate thus far to declare himself in the race. There is considerable speculation among the republican electors as to who will be chosen to occupy these berths, since the names of several men are mentioned in rumors as being aspirants for the nomination. Judge Henry N Benoit, present judge of the town probate court according to information obtained today is certain of re-nomination and other minor office holders are quite confident that no opposition to their renomination will develop at this caucus, so the political situation for the present at least, is one over which tranquility prevails.

Severe frosts were experienced in this section of the county today as thermometers sagged to new levels of 31 degrees and lower.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

Mr. and Mrs. Cosmer Young of Danielson have been in town recently. Mrs. Young was a former resident here.

Mrs. Julia Boulet has been a Norwich visitor. She is a guest of Mrs. Adelbert Rice where she made her home before going to Willimantic to reside.

Rev. and Mrs. George Reese of Eastford were here Thursday.

Harold Hatfield is employed in Webster, Mass.

Protection lodge of Odd Fellows met at Odd Fellows' hall Thursday evening. A transportation committee, consisting of Everett Dawley, Fred Lyon and Milton Winsor was appointed, to provide ways of getting members to the lodge room to attend the meeting who have no regular way of transportation. Members will notify the committee. The grand lodge visitors are expected to make an official visit Nov 6th.

Ernest Wilde is employed nights in a mill in Webster, Mass.

Luman Bennett is employed in a drug store in Moosup.

Mrs. William Doty has returned to Boston, having spent a few days here.

Miss Murial Holdridge of Norwich has been the guest of Mrs. Edith Hatfield.

Elmer Rider is improving in health at Eldorado Springs, Missouri.

EASIER THAN FIGHTING FIRES

Out on the end of Cape Cod, surrounded by a considerable amount of woodland as well as water, Provincetown has made a successful fight against a threatening forest fire. That town is in a position where it gets all the breezes that blow and well might there be worry over the safety of the community in case of fire under existing dry conditions. A fire in that locality must have given the remaining artists something different to work on but it must have created much uneasiness among the residents, much uncertainty as to whether their homes, their business houses, their public buildings, were going to go up in flames and smoke.

Provincetown had opportunity to realize that it was menaced and if it never knew before by personal experience what an encroaching forest fire means it knows now, and by knowing it has additional reason for recognizing the value of those simple methods of fire prevention by which such danger can be avoided.

There are plenty of other towns which are seriously handicapped when it comes to combating forest fires. In view of the drought which has prevailed in this part of the country for weeks, the situation is one which calls for consideration on the part of all individuals before a fire actually develops.

All forest fires cannot be prevented but a large majority of them can be. This preventive work can and should be done individually. Anyone who travels through the fields and woodlands today needs no one to point out the fact that everything is as dry as if it had been in a kiln, ready to burst into flame at the application of a match or other firebrand, and, once it gets going aided by wind, there's immense difficulty and tiresome work in trying to stop it. It may easily mean the destruction of standing timber and quite as easily the burning of buildings and communities, with possible loss of humanity and livestock.

The experience of Provincetown should be sufficient to impress everyone, including those driving along wooded highways and discarding firebrands, that caution needs to be taken and that too much attention cannot be devoted to the prevention of fires. Fire prevention is easier and preferable to fire fighting.

WOOD FOR THE POOR

In these days when many are out of work and are faced with the necessity of making some provision against the cold of the coming months, the donation of the standing timber on several acres of woodland, to the poor of Bristol, by the Bristol Airport, Inc., must be regarded as a gracious act.

The gift was made through the city of Bristol, which plans to clear the land by employing men out of work and then the fuel will be distributed through the charity commissioner.

Going to waste on many acres of land in the suburbs of Norwich and other cities are hundreds of cords of firewood waiting to be cut up by those who need it. Such wood may not be standing timber but, rather, trees which have died from the blight, fallen limbs or trees which have been cut down for one reason or another and left where they have fallen. It is, nevertheless good firewood and would provide good fuel when other is lacking. It needs to be worked up and would not serve to fatten the family pocketbook directly, but it would furnish a means of meeting certain fuel requirements in times of stress, and it is believed that the owners of land on which such firewood rests would be willing to donate it to those who can show a need for it.

Such wood is going to waste. No attempt is being made to cut or market it. The question of transportation might be a serious one except for those in the neighborhood but in every section there are those who might employ their time in providing against the cold of winter by developing a woodpile. It doesn't overcome unemployment but it would help many to meet the situation more easily, for the fuel problem is a big one in every household. It is open to the claim that a woodpile saved is a woodpile earned.

THE BORER PROBLEM

In spite of all that has been done or because of what has not been done, the corn borer is still with us. A pest of that kind is not easily eliminated. It flourishes on the encouragement it receives from those who are not in sympathy with the efforts to check it and it takes every advantage of the leniency that is displayed toward it. It is constantly working, though the endeavors to control it develop periods of enthusiasm and laxity.

During the past few months it is probable that many have become acquainted with the corn borer who never knew what it looked like before. If the experts are correct, this season of the year is the greatest producer of the destructive pest, for it is claimed by the Rhode Island commissioner of agriculture that while the early corn crop is infested to possibly 20 per cent, the late corn crop shows an 80 per cent infestation, and this has prompted an appeal for the elimination of the late crop as a means of more successfully combating the borer.

Fighting the corn borer means something more than a flourish of the hand. It calls for the active participation of all who are corn growers. There is need of the best cooperation that can be given, by the small as well as the large producers of such a crop. They cannot fail to recognize the protection that it means to them, and in keeping down the pest and removing all traces of material which may harbor it through the winter they are putting up barriers against another season.

Many corn producers use the stalks for fodder. That disposition of them makes it impossible for the borers to find habitation in them during the winter. But there are others who do not convert them into silage and there is the stubble, which offers haven for the cold months.

No one likes the corn borer. No one likes the destruction it causes and the depreciation of the corn crop. It is commonly agreed that the sooner it can be eliminated the better. That being so, there should be the necessary contribution of aid which will supply the desired solution. Such a common problem among corn producers can be solved by common assault. With everyone doing his part, the pest will have cause to worry.

VON ELM'S ATTITUDE

In the attitude he has taken regarding amateur golf, it is to be expected that George Von Elm will find encouragement in the views of others. Just how many others will elect to follow him into the professional class is uncertain. Some will, but most of the amateurs will not.

Whether it is golf or tennis, there comes a time in the experience of many amateurs when they take exception to the line of distinction between an amateur and professional. Roughly speaking, the former is the one who accepts the prizes other than cash for winning, while the latter is willing to take cash as well. They do not have to look dress or play differently.

When the golf association officials establish the line beyond which the amateur must not go, there may be contrary opinions concerning it, but they have been settled upon to decide and, having made a decision, it is to be expected that it will be respected. Otherwise there could be no limit to what constitutes an amateur. Certainly it could not be expected that a few of the best should be allowed to overstep the line at will and have it overlooked. The only way to do is to establish the rules and see that they are obeyed.

Von Elm objects to the financial drain that comes from remaining in the amateur ranks. He chafes at the restrictions of an amateur. He is one of the country's clever golfers, and there is nothing to prevent him from going out and getting all the money he can win by capturing money prizes, if he so wishes. When he decides to do that he takes himself out of the amateur ranks, which may regret his loss but cannot force him to remain. He must understand that there is no objection to the earning of money in other ways, ways which may be opened up because of the fact that he is one of the prominent amateur golfers, but when he steps over the line and becomes a professional he denies himself the position he holds as an amateur and must govern himself accordingly. It may be that his announced attitude will bring the golf association to change its rules, but there is no indication of such a step thus far.

THE TREATY EFFECTIVE

How Japan could do otherwise than to ratify the London treaty and participate with the United States and Great Britain in the naval agreement was hard to understand, but there were those who made a determined fight against the pact.

Japan received advantages in the agreement which came close to what its delegates sought. These were disregarded by the element which considered that it was being handicapped and because of that aroused more or less sympathy with the demand that approval should be withheld. It was because of the manner in which this group waged its fight and stimulated opposition that delayed the Japanese decision.

Japan is one of the countries which has had much to say about the benefits attached to the Washington treaty. That limitation of armament has been of great financial benefit to that country. It has inspired a strong demand for a continuance of such a policy and, even now, Japan is seeking ways of curtailing rather than increasing expenditures. With other leading nations joining hands with Japan in this agreement, a substantial reason for preventing its participation in an endless naval competition is furnished. Thus while Japan can build up to its limit under the treaty, it is not faced with the necessity of any such expenditure.

Now that all the three participants have signed the London treaty becomes effective. The delays which have occurred in building operations in anticipation of such action are justified. This doesn't mean that naval construction will not follow, but it does mean that each of the countries knows the limitations and can let economic conditions govern outlays without arousing the suspicions and forcing unwarranted expenditures by the others.

EDITORIAL NOTES

October is doing its best to stimulate the walking clubs.

It is only the bootleggers who now have anything to say about the nut-brown October ale.

The man on the corner says: Arguments are liable to warm up regardless of the season of the year.

When the department of justice officials report uncovering a rum ring doing a $15,000,000 business, somebody must be getting a drink.

It might not be difficult to determine the weather conditions of the week-end a year, or even two years, ago by counting up the number of auto accidents.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Much is made by science of the conservation of energy, and it is justified in so doing; why should we not, then, be conservative of the light as well? Was it merely a popular whim that led most communities throughout the country to go back to standard time last Sunday? or was the underlying object the conservation of light? One of the great teachings of science is the conservation of energy, but along practical lines it is just as important to conserve the light if the world is to do its work under the most favorable conditions. The sun is now on his annual pilgrimage into the south temperate zone. He has been slowly going that way since June 21, but we hardly realize it until the equator is crossed, Sept. 21, the time of the autumnal equinox. Then we fully realize the shortening of the daylight, and we put our timepieces back to get a longer period of sunlight. Think how much that means for 123 millions of people!

A very cute parallel was made in a certain magazine lately between two great products of the country which our people of all nationalities greatly enjoy, namely, chocolate and wheat. This is the exact statement: "If the candy makers produced more chocolate drops than the people could eat, year after year, and then asked the government to buy up the surplus the nation would laugh at them. Yet the wheat farmer is doing something like that. The so-called debenture plan is simply a proposition to pay export bounties on surplus wheat, and some other products of the land. Suppose the manufacturer of sewing machines—of which the people of the country are not now buying—should ask the government to take the surplus off their hands what a howl would come from the farmer sections! But has not the maker of sewing machines the same claim upon the debenture plan as the farmer?

The writer is not a farmer. He never has been and he never expects to be. This at least is one bright outlook for the future of the soil. It seems, however, that the same underlying principles that apply to other occupations apply equally well to farming. For insance, if manufacturers of boots and shoes, cotton and woolen goods found that they were overstocking the market year after year with their productions, they would after a time change off unto some other commodities for which there was a shortage, and consequently a growing demand. Why are vast areas of the soil of the United States devoted to wheat exclusively? Why not diversify the crops according to the popular demand? This widespread howl about a glutted wheat market is no new thing! Why don't these western farmers get onto themselves and give the public something out of the ordinary line? Would it not be better for the land to have a larger rotation of crops?

From whatever standpoint you view human life, you will find that it is a constant fight from start to finish. The little innocent babe no sooner arrives than he must begin to fight for his very existence. With all our boasted skill in the mastery of disease still the rate of mortality among babies during the first six months of their existence is something frightful. But no sooner do they get a grip on life than they have to face the great world of accidents because of their inexperience. As life advances new dangers present their powerful appeals. With many it is harder to escape from the temptations of the moral world than it is from the physical. This unfolding human being sooner or later must come face to face with this great world of injustice and wrong, even in this great nation of ours. George Heath has well expressed this in his great hymn:

> "My soul, be on thy guard,
> Ten thousand foes arise!"

Of course what has been written in the above paragraph is not a true picture of human life in its totality. But some of its features have been the experience of every man that ever came into the world. It may be that trials and temptations rightly dealth with are a means of making life triumphant. If there was nothing in human experience to call forth the heroic and the resistive our moral muscles would soon become soft and flabby. The great men of the world have been the men who have refused to let the lower instincts crowd out the noble and divine; their main purpose in life has been more and more to grow uniformly, even if slowly, into the likeness of Him who knew no sin. These are the men and women of all the ages—and let us devoutly thank God their name is Legion—who have not failed to "let their light so shine that men shall see their good works." This old world of ours is safe as long as we have in it men and women of such spirit.

There used to be—and perhaps to some extent is now—a wrong impression as to what constituted personal holiness. A general never wins a battle by turning his back on the enemy and running away. Of course, there may be good reasons why he should change his position, even if it involves, for the time being, turning his back on the enemy. But mere manoeuvering never wins a battle. The real Christian knows that when he comes face to face with what is manifestly wrong that he must not only face it, but fight it in the great name of his Lord and Master! If history is to be relied upon, the monastic system of Europe in the middle ages that drew men from the active pursuits of life to the quietude of spiritual seclusion up in the mountains was not an unqualified success. Of course there ought to be seasons of spiritual reflection, but not at the expense of putting the enemies of the Cross down. The genius of Christianity is this: "Fight the good fight with all thy might!"

From our modern viewpoint the early Puritans went too far in their condemnation of many innocent earthly things. Possibly if we had been reared in a spiritual environment similar to theirs, and had seen about us the travesties on sacred things which made them so indignant, we might not be more liberally-minded than they. But shutting up our senses against the charm and beauty of this world, or steeling ourselves against all the joys of material fellowships will not improve our capacity for spiritual culture. God has not made this material world so beautiful, nor human fellowships so delightful, nor physical glories so fascinating to be spurned as inconsistent with high moral and spiritual living. There never was a time when the people of God were engaged in so many enterprises looking toward the spiritual redemption of mankind, and never was there a time when the good things of life were so fully enjoyed.

Announcement was made today of the organization of Seaboard Continental corporation, an investment company of the general management type which is to be publicly financed through an offering of six per cent guaranteed convertible gold bonds. Public offering of the bonds is expected shortly.

SESQUICENTENNIAL OF ANDRE'S DEATH IS MARKED BY NEW LIFE OF ARNOLD

PART TWO

(This is part two of a new life of Benedict Arnold, published under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies in the Dictionary of American Biography. It is here reprinted on the sesquicentennial of the death of Maj. John Andre, British adjutant-general, who was shot by the Americans on Oct. 2, 1780, for his part in Arnold's attempt to betray the patriot cause. This instalment of Arnold's life-story concludes the account of events leading up to his treason. The final instalment, next Tuesday, will describe his dealings with the British, which resulted in the death of Andre, and the aftermath of the tragedy.)

By November of 1776, his private affairs having become involved in his absence, Arnold received permission from Gen. Gates (now in command of the northern army) and also the consent of Washington to go home. He passed the winter in New England.

On Feb. 19 1777, occurred one of the first events which embittered him against the American cause. Congress promoted five brigadier-generals to be major-generals, all of whom were junior in rank to Arnold (Journals of the Continental Congress, VIII, 133).

He was beside himself with indignation—but he was not less angry than the commander-in-chief, who immediately demanded an explanation from congress and emphasized the extraordinary character of Arnold as a leader of men (Spark's Washington, IV, 351). Congress gave the lame excuse that Connecticut already had two major-generals, upon which Washington commented, "This is a strange mode of reasoning."

Arnold was dissuaded from resigning by a personal plea from the commander-in-chief. It is not too much to say that for the sake of the common cause, Arnold swallowed an injustice which others would not have tolerated. (Ford, Writings of Washington V, 270-71 and 403-6).

Repel an Invasion of Connecticut

In the spring of 1777 he was about to start for Philadelphia to defend himself before congress, when he heard of the invasion of Connecticut by Gen. Tryon. The object of the expedition was the destruction of the military stores at Danbury. The militia were rallied but did not arrive in time to save the arsenals.

Arnold rode to the scene of action, gathered what troops he could, met the enemy at Ridgefield, and opposed his 500 militia against 2,000 British. As usual he was in the thick of the action, and his horse fell dead, hit by nine bullets.

Arnold drew off his troops with great skill and followed Tryon on to Norwalk, where, having been reinforced by artillery, he again attacked. The British got back to their ships just in time to avoid capture. This action drew from the continental congress warm praise and secured for Arnold the delayed promotion to a major-generalship, without, however, restoring his rightful rank above that of the five previously appointed.

Is Cleared of Charges

Arnold went to Philadelphia, where the continental congress was considering some charges which had been made against him. They were proved groundless, the result of a personal spite on the part of a fellow officer who had had a grievance against Arnold since the days of Fort Ticonderoga.

Congress exonerated Arnold, but still failed to restore his rank above the five. Washington wrote the president of the congress expressing his pleasure at the promotion but again bringing up the question of rank.

The delay was probably due to another investigation under way as to Arnold's accounts and his actions as to private property at Montreal. An officer in command of starving troops in an enemy's country might, one would have supposed, be permitted some latitude, but Arnold's enemies in congress declined to consider the circumstances.

Not receiving the satisfaction which was certainly due him, Arnold finally sent in his resignation. Congress received it in July on the same day that it received a letter from Washington telling them that Burgoyne had started south on his momentous expedition from Canada and that Arnold must be sent at once to help block him. Arnold, again upon the personal request of Washington, withdrew his resignation and left for the northern headquarters, where his services were so sorely needed.

Relieves Fort Stanwix

The British campaign of 1777 involved three elements. Burgoyne was to march south from Canada. Howe was to march north from New York and join him at Albany. St. Leger was to go up Lake Erie to Oswego and come down the Mohawk valley, meeting the other two at Albany.

The American hopes for defending the Mohawk valley depended on holding Fort Stanwix. By Aug. 3, St. Leger had surrounded that fort.

On Aug. 12, Arnold reached Schuyler's headquarters and was immediately sent off with 800 men to relieve Fort Stanwix. With fewer men than St. Leger, he rushed forward with the utmost audacity, and sent on ahead a half-crazy man and a friendly Indian to tell St. Leger he was coming with an immense army. The speed of his approach and the wild story of his messenger had the effect of driving St. Leger's Indians and tories away in confusion.

When Arnold arrived the siege was raised and St. Leger was in full flight back to Oswego. This almost bloodless victory demonstrated the terror which Arnold's name held to the British.

Without waiting a moment he turned his army about and hurried back to Schuyler, now superseded by Gates. In September Burgoyne was face to face with the American army. Arnold's command participated in the battles of September 19 and Oct. 7, at Freeman's Farm and Bemis Heights, which sealed the fate of Burgoyne's expedition.

Important Services at Saratoga

A distinct impression has been left with posterity that the fire and dash of Arnold in those battles had as much to do with the American victory as had the careful disposition of troops by Gates. Arnold's biographer, Isaac N. Arnold, has put the extreme case for his subject, giving him the principal credit for the triumph of the American arms (Arnold, pp. 163-212). This has been questioned by F. D. Stone (Pennsylvania Magazine, IV, 383); and by J. A. Stevens (Magazine of American History, IV, 81-91).

Possibly Arnold was not present at the battle of Sept. 19, but there can be no doubt that he led the troops in person and was wounded on Oct. 7, although probably acting as a volunteer. There can also be no doubt that Burgoyne thought in terms of Arnold as much as he did in terms of Gates.

After Burgoyne's surrender Arnold was carried home to Connecticut where his own people were warm in their recognition of a "fighting general," and congress belatedly restored to him his proper rank in the army.

In May of 1778 he was sufficiently recovered to rejoin the army under Washington at Valley Forge. In June the British evacuated Philadelphia, and at Washington's order Arnold became the commander at that city.

Here he met and fell in love with Margaret Shippen, at that time the darling of Philadelphia society. He married her in April, 1779, and took her to "Mt. Pleasant," a magnificent country seat which he purchased upon the banks of Schuylkill.

Philadelphia society was accustomed to the gaiety and extravagance of the British army, and Arnold seemed to have felt obliged to keep up an appearance of social activity which was impossible on the small pay of a continental officer. He was soon seriously in debt.

In Trouble Again

During the period of his command at the headquarters in Philadelphia, he got into trouble with the civil authorities in Pennsylvania on several minor points. In addition it was now charged against him that he utilized his military office for private gain, and that he had made use of soldiers of the Pennsylvania militia for menial services and for his own personal work.

These charges, which seemed to result from a combination of Arnold's hasty temper and the oversensitiveness of the Pennsylvania authorities were brought to the attention of congress, who referred certain of them to the commander-in-chief. Arnold demanded a court martial to clear him of the allegations.

The court martial was ordered in May of 1779, but to his irritation was delayed until December. The court, while finding him not guilty of most of the charges, decided that he had violated the articles of war in permitting a vessel to leave a port in the possession of the enemy and enter a port in the United States, and further that he had been imprudent in the use of the military forces for his private purposes.

For this they recommended a reprimand by the commander-in-chief. Washington's execution of the recommendation of the court martial was a model of combined firmness and regard for Arnold's better nature and his feelings.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Spills a Load of Nuts

> Danger lurks where least suspected.
> And oft appears when least expected.
> —Old Mother Nature.

It never does to be so intent on one thing that everything else is forgotten. It is dangerous. It has cost the lives of many of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. It caused Impy, the black Chipmunk, to lose two pockets full of sweet little beechnuts. He was lucky, very lucky, that he did not lose his life as well. He might have. Yes, indeed he might have.

You see, this was Impy's first harvest. He was working very hard indeed to fill the storerooms in his snug home. There were many other nut harvesters and so Impy worked fast, wholly intent on getting his share. As a matter of fact, he had his share and more, too.

Now, there were other people interested in that harvest—people who themselves did not eat beechnuts. They were not interested in the beechnuts, but they were interested in some of the little people who were gathering the beechnuts. One of these was Sharpshin, the Hawk. He was especially interested in Striped Chipmunk and Impy and little Mrs. Impy. Unseen by them, he watched until he knew just which way they went and how they went, as they hurried to and fro, now with their pockets filled and again with their pockets empty. Then he bided his time. It came soon. Impy, with both cheeks stuffed with beechnuts until he couldn't get another one in, started for home. He was so intent on getting there that he didn't even look around for possible danger. He forgot that there was such a thing as danger.

"Look out!" shrieked Striped Chipmunk suddenly. "Look out, Impy!"

Impy didn't stop to look. He simply dodged behind a tree and he was none too soon. There was the sharp whistle of wings as Sharpshin swooped and barely missed him. Sharpshin turned quickly and came swooping back. Striped Chipmunk dodged around to the other side of the tree. Once again he was barely in time. Then Impy did a wise thing. He emptied both pockets of the nuts they contained. He realized that he couldn't dodge with his cheeks swelled out as they were with those pockets full. Neither could he run as he might have to run. He did it none too soon, for Sharpshin was joined by Mrs. Sharpshin and Impy needed every bit of his speed and dodging ability.

Striped Chipmunk dodged around to the other side of the tree

For a few minutes it was breathless work. Sharpshin would swoop and Impy would dodge around the tree, only to be swooped at by Mrs. Sharpshin. It began to look bad for Impy.

It was just about this time that Buster Bear came along. He came shuffling along lazily, for he is given to being lazy. He was feeling extremely good natured. He had had his fill of sweet beechnuts. There was nothing more he wanted. He stopped close by the tree, around which Impy was dodging. Impy saw his chance. He darted out right under Buster Bear. Buster was back to him at the time and didn't see him. Sharpshin and Mrs. Sharpshin screamed their rage and disappointment. They didn't dare swoop at Impy there. Buster Bear thought they were shrieking at him, so he growled at them. As for Impy, he watched his chance and presently got safely away. As soon as he dared, he went back to those nuts. They were not there. You see, Chatterer the Red Squirrel had watched the whole performance and he had taken those nuts at the very first opportunity.

YOUR HEALTH

The Fear Of Knowing

By Hart Ellis Fisher, M. D., Chief Surgeon, Chicago Rapid Transit Company, Chicago.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Is it a fact that the average individual is afraid to know the truth about his physical condition and postpones seeking medical advice, trusting that fate will be kind and spare him pangs of worry? Personally, I do not believe this to be true, but we as Americans are apt to be optimistic in our views on life and we realize that all we are told is not the truth, notwithstanding the source of information.

Fear is a mental state, prevalent in all humanity, and is responsible for a great deal of unhappiness in life. When much thought is given to fear, its counterpart, worry, appears. In truth, it is worry over imaginary fears that is really the most dangerous mental state. Fear is apprehension of evil or the dread of something apt to happen which will mar the peace of mind. Worry is harassed with anxiety or care. The two go hand in hand. The state of fear, however, has one advantage in that it aids in disciplining words and actions and makes humanity amenable to the laws of mankind. It is fear of punishment that stays the would-be transgressor of the law, and in a certain class of people, all that prevents wrong-doing is fear of punishment. Any person who is normal mentally has this fear instinct and it is only those whose mental plane is low who are ignorant of fear. A man is said to be brave in battle, but the courage given him is through the fear that he will not do what is right, and he urges his will power to sustain him in the emergency. Some of the most heroic deeds are performed under the fear stimulus.

It is not a crime for a person to be fearful of his conduct but there exists a great amount of imaginary fear productive of needless worry, with accompanying ill effect upon physical health. How many people pause to give thought to the state of fear which exists in daily life? Our advent into this world is preceded by fear on the part of our parents who are afraid the child will not be normal or will not be the sex desired. The ordeal of childbirth causes fear for the life of the mother. This wear is often stimulated by senseless tales told the expectant mother of the terrifying experiences of others. When the fears of childbirth have not been realized, then worry and fear again take up the attention of the father and mother. These over-watchful parents are harassed with the thoughts of possible sickness, and anxious attention is given to each trivial condition or unusual occurrence.

When the child enters school, there is the new worry that he may not compare favorably with other children. When his mental training has progressed to the point where he begins to think of himself, he frequently awakens to the consciousness of his own fears. He may have been urged beyond his mental capacity by over-anxious and indulgent parents, with the result that his education suffers. Apprehensions become as real to him as his meals and is it any wonder that so imbued with fear he will not make his grade? As he grows older, his fears grow. Perhaps he will not be able to complete his education. After graduation his fear is that he might not be successful in his life's work. When he has embarked upon a career, he has the fear that he will not make good on his job—that he might lose it and become a failure. These thoughts are with him every day and perhaps every night.

Is it possible for a person whose mind is distracted by fear and worry to give efficient attention and effort to work in hand? No. It has been shown that this results in accompanying reduction in efficiency of the mechanism of the human body. There results dysfunction of various organs, productive of many symptoms. Distraction of mind due to these two mental states has caused numerous accidents both fatal and disabling. The mind was somewhere else instead of on the work at hand. Headaches, dizziness, increased blood pressure, upset stomach conditions, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, disruption of intestinal and urinary functions, and many other symptoms are manifestations of fear and worry. Improper functions of organs due to fear and worry are conditions rarely ever relieved by medicines or by the knife of the surgeon.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—There may be something to this talk so ironically voiced here in the east about the west "where they grow real men."

Otherwise how do you account for immediate developments in the careers of those two bearded elder statesmen, Senator Frederick Gillett of Massachusetts and Representative Henry Allen Cooper of Wisconsin?

Gillett will touch his 79th annual milestone next month. Cooper was 80 this month. Both first came to congress as house members in 1890, 40 years ago, but Cooper had tried and failed to break in two years before that.

Both have been here ever since, except for two years when Cooper was missing due to a 1918 defeat. And besides Gillett, nobody now "on the hill" recalls personally the congressional arrival of Wisconsin's grand old man, not even that political patriarch, Senator Simmons of North Carolina.

One Continues

And what are these two octagenarians doing about it in this good year of 1930? At a mere 79 Gillett, despite about the lowest golf score in the senate, has folded up his political tents and departed voluntarily to private life. His years are his public excuse.

But years mean nothing to Henry Cooper. He virtually celebrated his 80th birthday by arranging at the primaries to come back to the house next year for his 19th term.

Nineteen two-year terms! That's 36 years already served in the house and two more to go—38 out of a total of 80. Apparently that's just sort of attaining his political majority to Henry Cooper.

Untarnished

The real reason for Gillett's retirement, of course, must be doubt that he could have been elected. Forty years of untarnished political victory is a proud record. Why take a chance of spoiling it?

Nobody thinks his age influenced him. He's too young at 79 with his slender, erect figure, his sandy, pointed beard and his ruddy, sunburned face.

Cooper's much fuller beard is as white now as is his hair. He also is slender and erect. You would pick him out certainly as a G. A. R. man, so soldierly his bearing.

But Cooper does not happen to be an ex-soldier. His battlefields have all been political—and still are. Nor will his political valor as leader of the anti-war forlorn hope in the house in 1917 be soon forgotten. It cost him that two year break in house service.

And who could forget him as valiantly yet hopelessly leading his little band of platform dissenters at the Coolidge-ized Cleveland convention of 1924?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Impetigo at Goodyear

Mr. Editor: I wish to correct the report in your paper of October 1st concerning impetigo in the Goodyear schools. The news item is greatly exaggerated and has caused the teachers and parents of Goodyear much uncalled-for embarrassement.

Our attendance records for the month of September show only 12 cases of exclusion from school for impetigo.

Kindly correct the error at your earliest opportunity.

What Lisbon Could Do

Mr. Editor: Not long ago I read in The Bulletin an account of a Lisbon town meeting wherein Edward F. Burleson was given an unanimous rising vote of thanks for the many years he had served and is still serving as an official of the town without compensation, and the meeting it seemed wanted to do more for a man who had done so much for them, so they abated his taxes for a year.

Mr. Burleson did not accept any abatement of his taxes, although it was a substantial gift as he is one of our largest taxpayers.

The writer of this letter would like to know if there is another instance in the whole state where a man has served his town faithfully, ably and continuously for nearly 50 years without any remuneration whatsoever.

There is still one way in which the people of Lisbon could show their appreciation and that is to send this man, the town's greatest benefactor, to the next legislature and make that action unanimous, also.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Practicing the Presence of God.

It is good for me to draw near to God, Psalm 22:28. Let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of faith, Hebrews 10:22.

There is one thing we must not overlook which is almost essential to a life of blessedness. It is the being frequently alone with God. We can have Him with us in life's activities in any full degree only when we give ourselves time to commune with our Heavenly Father and let Him come in and fill our souls. The time need not be long but it should be habitual, preferably in the early part of the day when our minds are fresh and our hearts unburdened.

Every one of us needs this time with God, and when we get it the effect is as when one looks at the sun. You gaze a moment at the sun and then look about you on the earth, and everywhere you see the sun, up the street in yonder doorway among the hurrying people; you seem to have brought the sun down by your look and now you see it all about you. This same thing is what happens to the disciple of Christ when you recognize the religious values of a quiet hour and give yourself time to be filled with the spirit of the Master. In the midst of the thronging people who press upon your daily life when you enter the doorway of your office, store or shop, or duties pursue you in the home, everywhere you are conscious of His presence and His glory radiates from your every act or word. Your life will overflow to those about you and they will seek the same source of living waters.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Berlin Construction Company, Inc., Berlin.

On January 1, 1901, the name of Berlin Construction company was placed on a small brick building located about 500 feet from the main line railroad station at Berlin Junction, ten miles south of Hartford.

The men who formed the company were well known from their former connection with The Berlin Iron Bridge company, and were D. E. Bradley, George H. Sage and Seymour N. Robinson.

This brick structure had been built and used as an office by one of the brick companies in that vicinity, a company which has long since gone out of existence.

But from that beginning, with only a leased office, no land and no shop, has grown the present organization which owns and occupies about seven acres of land east of the present railroad station, with fabricating shops and power plant of modern design and equipment. The designing, fabricating and erection of steel frames for bridges, buildings, coal handling structures, in fact nearly everything made of structural steel is the business of the concern, which employs a large number of high-class engineers, draftsmen, shop men and erection crews.

There is hardly a manufacturing plant in Connecticut which has not had its need supplied, at one time or another, from Berlin. It is not only in this state that the company is well known, but all over New England, and occasionally in other parts of the country and abroad, where some of its output has been shipped.

The present officers of the company are:

Charles F. Chase, president; L. H. Brumbaugh, vice president; W. H. Fitzwell, secretary; Charles W. Heusted, treasurer.

All stockholders are employes who have been with the company at least 25 years.

SCHOOL NURSE WORK COST $10,482 IN YEAR

Expenses of the school nursing department of the town of Norwich were $10,482.72 in the past year, according to the financial report made by Dr. Harrison Gray, chairman.

His report follows:

Balance Oct. 1, 1929 $44.19; appropriation from town $10,500.00; total $10,544.19.

Salaries (4 nurses) $6,346.68; clerical work $300.00; Dr. Gray $240.00; dental hygienist $1,140.00; dental supplies $126.62; dental assistant $135.75; physical inspections (3 doctors) $750.00; drugs and office supplies $161.36; printing $83.55; carfare $62.00; repairs, gas, oil, etc. $305.08; exchange car $350.00; conventions, etc. $50.00; insurances $81.66; free tonsil and adenoid operations $340.00; auditing $10.00; total $10,482.72; balance Oct. 1, 1930 $61.47—$10,544.19.

Work Of Nurses

The following detail of the work carried out is given in the report of Miss Rose K. Durr, supervisor:

The aim of the school health program is to protect the physical health of the child, to detect early symptoms of physical defects and to encourage their correction.

To establish preventive methods, to lessen communicable disease and to give the children instruction for health and hygienic living.

Routine classroom inspections are made weekly and children showing evidence of communicable disease are recomended for exclusion.

Before returning to the classroom, children who have been absent five days or more are inspected and readmitted by the nurse, if not attended by the family physician.

Home co-operation is most necessary to obtain correction for physical defects and treatment for disease. 1328 visits to homes were made.

Toxin-antitoxin for the prevention of diphtheria was administered by the doctor assisted by nurses to 1,657 children.

Eighty-six children were taken by this department to the Wm. W. Backus hospital for tonsil and adenoid operations.

Class rooms visited, 1,448; schools visited, 854; class inspections, 4,356; number of children inspected, 154,460; inspections for contagion, 1,704; impetigo, 284; pediculosis, 66; excluded for illness, 137; excluded for uncleanliness, 67; referred to family physician, 109; pupils weighed and measured, 19,826; parents notified, 701; follow-up visits to homes, 1,328; follow-up visits to schools, 23; class talks given, 428; first aid (school and office), 7,583; certificates issued, 242; telephone calls, 44.

Dental Work In Schools

Dr. Edward Kirby, school dentist, makes the following report of that branch of the work:

As in former years the dental hygienist has examined and given prophylactic treatment to all children desiring same.

Dental defects were recorded and notes were sent home to parents advising dental treatment.

The following is the dental report submitted by Miss Bissett:

Children charted 1,098; use of brush, daily 155; use of brush, occasionally 386; notes sent home, 618; state of teeth, clean, 89; state of teeth, fair, 344; state of teeth, dirty, 665; number of cavities, deciduous, 6,301; number of cavities, permanent, 1,860; taken to school dentist, 37; class room talks, 86; home visits, 84.

Secretary's Report

Mrs. Susan C. Gildersleeve, secretary for the school nursing advisory committee, which consists of Dr. Harrison Gray, town health officer, chairmn, Mrs. Harrison Gray, Mrs. Charles C. Gildersleeve, Dr. Edward J. Brophy, Edward J. Graham, Dr. A. C. Freeman, William S. Murray and Dr. Edward Kirby, makes the following report:

The committee of school nursing and the nursing staff remain the same as last year.

Let us remind ourselves that school nursing is changing from day to day, not only the scope of nursing but the character also.

The nurses in all their contacts with the children are stressing health to a greater degree than ever before, and parents are coming to realize the value of the periodic health examinations for their children.

Early in the year a very attractive little circular was sent into the home of every school child, ten per cent or more underweight, giving most helpful suggestions for diet and daily rules to be followed. This is only one of the many ways in which the nurses are trying to give a more constructive type of health service, and for best results urge the hearty support of every parent in our city.

Miss Esther Cramer, dental hygienist, resigned at the end of the school year, and Miss Marion Bissett, was engaged to fill this position. Wishing to arouse a deeper interest and to secure better co-opporation in dental hygiene work, a leaflet stating very clearly facts pertaining to teeth and necessity of regular visits to the dentist, were given all children of first, second and third grades, with very satisfactory results.

The nursing staff have taken advantage of the various educational opportunities thoroughout the year. During the winter all of the nurses attended lectures on "Abnormal Psychology" by Prof. Morris of Connecticut college, given at the Wm. W. Backus hospital. In July, Miss Tongren attended the Mental Hygiene Institute at Connecticut college. Round tables with the New London county social workers, Norwich social workers, and the visiting nurses have proved most helpful. Other health conferences have been attended whenever possible.

$500 FIRE DAMAGE AT WEST THAMES ST. HOUSE

The house owned by Irving Friedman at No. 178 West Thames street was damaged to the extent of $500 by fire early Friday morning. The fire which is believed to have originated from a defective fireplace, was discovered shortly before 4:30 o'clock by Frank Grieves, who lives on the second floor. He was awakened by the crackling of the flames and sent in a telephone call to the fire department. Engines No. 6, No. 5 and Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan responded.

The fire started beneath the flooring on the second story and crept through the partitions to the top of the house. The ceiling of the ground floor apartment was also damaged and there was considerable damage from water.

Resigns As Organist.

Dr. J. Lawrence Erb, organist at the United Congregational church, who has had a year's leave of absence, has notified the church authorities of his resignation of the position for this year.

For His 71st Birthday

Last Saturday evening at their cottage in Niantic, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wibberly gave a party for E. W. Souter for his 71st birthday. Mr. Souter received many gifts, cards and congratulations during the day.

OBITUARY

Joseph E. Hastedt

After a long period of ill health, Joseph E. Hastedt, well known in local fraternal circles, and residing at No. 22 Sunnyside avenue, died in this city late Thursday night. His illness did not become alarming until about a week ago.

Mr. Hastedt was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hastedt and was born 35 years ago in Hoboken, N. J. At St. Patrick's church, April 22, 1915, he was united in marriage with Agnes Sullivan and since their marriage they had made their home in this city.

For 18 years Mr. Hastedt had been employed as a glass-blower at the plant of the American Thermos Bottle Co. He was a prominent member of Norwich lodge, No. 950, L. O. O. M., and of Norwich aerie, No. 367, F. O. E., and was prominently identified with local sporting events. Several years ago he was a promoter of boxing in Norwich.

Surviving are his wife and four children, Joseph, Agnes, Eleanor and Janis, and two brothers, William R., and August Hastedt, all of Norwich; his mother, Mrs. Henry Hastedt, and four sisters, Mrs. Henry Dunnerwald, Mrs. James Brutelle, Mrs. Madeline Shelter and Mrs. Charles Morgan, all of Jersey City, N. J. He was popular with his many friends and acquaintances who were deeply grieved to learn of his death and who extend heartfelt sympathy to the surviving family.

SEARCH FOR JUDGE CRATER CLUES LED TO LEBANON COUNTRY CLUB

George Schiller's country club in the town of Lebanon, off the Norwich-Colchester road, sprang into the newspaper limelight Friday in the search for Supreme Court Justice Joseph C. Crater of New York, missing since Aug. 1, when it became known that Connie Marcus, a New York milliner, had been spending some time at the Schiller farm.

District Attorney Crain of New York heard a report that Connie Marcus had talked to Mr. Schiller of a conversation she had had with Judge Crater in which the judge had told her he was going away because of trouble in the affairs of a hotel for which the judge had acted as receiver. Late Friday morning District Attorney Crain was in telephonic communication with Mr. Schiller to inquire about the rumored conversation, but the Lebanon man was not able to be of any help towards supplying a clue towards the reason for Judge Crater's disappearance. He told the New York district attorney that no such conversation with Connie Marcus had ever taken place.

All through Friday Mr. Schiller was besieged with telephone calls and personal calls from New York and other newspaper men who were on the trail of possible developments in the Crater case. Some of them intimated that they proposed to follow up their search in sanatoriums or asylums in this state.

According to Mr. Schiller, Connie Marcus had been a visitor at the country club on two different occasions earlier in the year and came there again on the 11th of August shortly after her name had been brought into the Judge Crater case. She remained at the club until Aug. 20th when she left and went to visit her sister in Memphis, Tennessee. Subsequently to that she came back to New York and appeared before the grand jury which was pursuing the Crater investigation.

WEST SIDE RESIDENT IS HELD IN CANADA

When Boleslaw Wisniewski, who is a resident of the West Side section, told a Canadian immigration inspector at the Canadian-United States border that he was not a native in Uncle Sam's country, he opened the door for trouble that is still keeping him detained in Canada at Rock Island where the authorities want proof of his birthplace and subsequent residence.

To his Norwich acquaintances Wisnewski is better known as Benny Butts. He was one of a party who went to Canada on a vacation trip. The others got back into the United States all right, but Benny is in Canada yet and will probably be there until papers can be sent there to effect his release. These are being prepared by Attorney Thomas M. Shields, whom Benny's friends have engaged to get their friend back into Norwich, where he lived ever since he was about a year old, He was born in Poland Dec. 28, 1905.

BURGLARY AT YANTIC; THEFTS FROM AUTOMOBILES

A robbery at the store of W. W. Bentley at Yantic and several petty thefts from machines in the city were reported Thursday and Friday to the state and local police. State police are working on the robbery at the Yantic store, from which a quantity of groceries was taken Wednesday night. Entrance was gained through a rear window which was smashed.

Thursday there was a brush fire in the vicinity and while men were extinguishing it they came across a Ford coupe which had evidently been abandoned, as the number plates had been removed. The state police were notified and investigating found the groceries stolen from the Bentley store.

Thursday night a medical case was stolen from a coupe owned by Dr. H. E. Higgins and which had been parked on Ferry street. Also Thursday night blankets and small articles were stolen from machines parked in Durkee lane next to the Bulletin office.

ZONING BOARD RESERVES DECISION ON APPLICATIONS

Two applications in which there was no opposition were heard Friday morning before the Norwich zoning board, which reserved decision.

John Dydo told the board he intends to buy the property at 337-341 West Main street from Harold and Carrie V. Pierson and wants to maintain an automobile repair shop in the building there, which he will fix up.

Arthur E. Shedd asks permission to erect a building for use in connection with the sale of gasoline from a pump at 557 Main street. This is in a Class A residential district.

SUES FOR PAY FOR PURCHASE OF COWS

Suit for $4,000 damages has been brought in the superior court by Isaac Merion of 36 Truman street, New London, against Benjamin Tauber of Uncasville, according to papers filed with Clerk John H. Walker.

Merion alleges that on Feb. 14, 1928, at the request of Tauber, he purchased various and divers bovine animals for Tauber in New Haven and delivered them to the defendant. Tauber, at his farm in the town of Montville. Tauber has not paid him, Merion alleges.

Former Norwich Boy In Quartet

The Harmony male quartet of Worcester, Mass., favorite radio artists will appear in a concert of Negro spirituals and folk-songs, Sunday night at the First Baptist (West Side Community) church. The quartet has given concerts throughout New England and are noted for their singing of the spirituals without use of piano. The quartet is composed of Le Roy Paye, first tenor, formerly of the Biddle university quartet; Elmer Booley, baritone, former member of the Washington, D. C. Glee club; William L. Abbott, bass, former bass of the symphonic Glee club, New York city; and Thomas F. Spivery, former Norwich boy and member of the Tuskeegee Institute Glee club.

Mrs. A. Hubbard of Boston, director and pianist, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and a popular radio artist of W. B. Z. A. in Boston, is the director of the quartet.

Congratulations To Miss Bundy.

Three lovely baskets of flowers, with telegrams and personal calls, brought congratulations Friday to Miss Mary E. Bundy upon her election as secretary of the chamber of commerce. The flowers were from the directors, the former president, Frank R. Murdy, and the girls in the office force, Miss Anna Ward and Miss Helen Plante.

Compensation Claim Refused.

On the grounds that injury received by Charles F. Taylor, of Groton, which resulted in his death, was received while on a vacation trip and not in the course of his employment, Commissioner A. J. Bailey has refused the workmen's compensation claim made by the widow, Bertha F. Taylor, of Harwich, Mass. Mr. Taylor was superintendent of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries corporation.

Attend Rotary Conclave

Joseph C. Worth, William G. Park, Lucius Briggs, F. Russell Smith and John Sellman were the Norwich delegation who attended the banquet Thursday night which opened the Rotary district conclave at Swampscott, Mass.

Small Brush Fire

A small brush fire on Spring Garden avenue on land owned by the city of Norwich called out the fire department at 4:45 o'clock Friday afternoon. Little damage resulted from the blaze, put out by brooms by members of Engine No. 6.

DIVORCES GRANTED IN FIVE UNCONTESTED CASES

Five uncontested divorces were granted by Judge Christopher L. Avery at the short calendar session of the superior court in New London Friday morning.

Samuel S. Heavilin of New London was given his freedom from Rose Wheeler Heavilin of Oakland, Cal., on grounds of desertion. They were married Dec. 26, 1925.

Leatha Zeller Hewitt of Stonington was given a decree against Preston R. Hewitt of Fishers Island on grounds of cruelty. They were married Aug. 4, 1923.

Christina Gordon of Norwich was given a divorce from Allan G. Gordon of Norwich on grounds of a statutory offense. They were married Aug. 7, 1920. The defendant was before the last session of the superior court on a statutory charge on which he was placed on probation.

Eunice Taft Chase of Norwich was given her freedom from Sterril M. Chase of Norwich on grounds of cruelty. They were married Aug. 31, 1928.

Grace E. Rice of Norwich was given a divorce from Leroy Edwin Rice of Brattleboro, Vt., on grounds of desertion. They were married Feb. 5, 1923. The mother was given the custody of a minor child.

Two petitions which were continued were Florence Fitzpatrick Ford against Harry B. Ford and Victoria Pyzo Carnathan against Christian Robert Carnathan.

WILL MAKE INSPECTIONS IN FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

According to an announcement by Fire Chief Henry R. Taft, Norwich will carry out an observance of fire prevention week, Oct. 5 to 11, by carrying out an inspection of residence and business properties as far as possible. A report of the results will be made for official record and the cooperation of the citizens is asked in clearing out all rubbish and unnecessary accumulations of inflammable materials.

The yearly fire loss, reaching almost a half-billion dollars, affects the economic condition of the country and is shared by everyone. In addition, over 10,000 people lose their lives and many more thousands are injured.

According to official statistics, 80 per cent of all fires have been found to be the result of carelessness, or poor building construction.

Proclamations issued by President Hoover and by many state, county and city officials, call upon every citizen, every organization and society, to lend their support to the observance of national Fire Prevention week.

Here are a few suggestions:

Clear out all rubbish from premises and clean chimneys, flues and pipes of accumulations of soot.

Have an experienced electrician do your wiring and make electric repairs. Such professional service is important, and safest and cheapest in the end.

Do not overload the electric circuit because you want more outlets for devices.

Carefully dispose of matches and tobacco. They cause the largest number of fires

Gasoline and other volatile liquids are dangerous cleaning fluids. Use only safe compounds.

Never use a lighted flame to locate a gas leak. Soapsuds applied to suspected places will reveal the leaks by bubbles.

Use metal cans for ashes.

Shield walls and ceilings from stoves, heaters and pipes.

Open fire places should be screened.

Turn off gas lights when not in use.

For repairing, use fire-resistive materials.

Learn where the nearest fire alarm box is located and what to do in case of fire.

Make a list of these and all other fire possibilities, then determine to make your property, and the lives of those who share it with you, safe against danger.

NO CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE IN JOHN MURPHY DEATH

No criminal negligence was found by Coroner Edward G. McKay in the death of John Murphy of 148 McKinley avenue, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident on the Military highway on Sunday morning, September 14th. He died three days later at the W. W. Backus hospital. Murphy was driving a machine owned by Francis Diffley at the time of the accident. The coroner's finding, announced Friday, says:

This accident happened on the Norwich-Groton road in the town of Groton a few hundred feet north of the northerly line of the submarine base property. The highway at that point runs generally north and south, and is surfaced with macadam. It is about 18 feet wide and runs generally over level ground. South of the point of the accident the road turns towards the right. The highway fence that the deceased collided with is a short piece that protects a culvert. The ground west of the highway is rough ground with rocks and small trees.

At 1 a. m., or Sept. 14, 1930, the said John Murphy started from Norwich in the car owned by Francis Diffley. Accompanying him was Vincent LaRochelle. Murphy and Diffley were accompanying LaRochelle to the submarine base, where he is stationed. Diffley started to drive when they left Norwich and drove as far as the state hospital along the Norwich-Groton road. When they reached this point Murphy asked permission to drive the car and it was granted. He drove the car from the hospital down to the point of the accident. There was nothing unusual in the way he was driving. The weather was clear and the road surface was dry.

When the said Murphy reached the point of the accident he was driving along the right hand side of the road. Suddenly the car seems to veer off the road and strike the highway fence. From that point on the car was out of control and struck the rocks and bushes near the side of the road. When the car finished moving it was headed diagonally toward Norwich. All of the occupants of the car had been thrown out and were more or less injured. Murphy was unconscious and was picked up and brought to the hospital at the submarine base. He was given treatment there and remained under observation until the next day. He was then transferred to the Backus hospital, Norwich. His injuries were of a serious nature and he died three days later although all medical aid was unavailing. The cause of this accident is not clear. Both occupants of the car, besides Murphy, stated that they noticed nothing out of the ordinary in the manner in which Murphy was driving. He had operated the car without mishap from the state hospital to the submarine base. Whether or not he had taken his eyes momentarily from the road is unknown. The car appeared to have gone suddenly from the road without cause.

I am satisfied and find that the death of John Murphy was not caused by the criminal act, omission or carelessness of any other person or persons.

OPPOSE MORE GASOLINE PUMPS ON WASHINGTON ST.

Considerable opposition developed at a hearing held Friday morning by the joint zoning board of the city and town relative to the petition of Harry L. Lathrop of No. 271 Washington street for permission to erect two additional gasoline pumps at his garage, repair shop and filling station in the rear of his house. The opposition was voiced by the board of park commissioners, with residents of upper Washington street and others. Decision was reserved by the zoning board which held the hearing in the mayor's office at the court house.

Mr. Lathrop was the only one who spoke in favor of the petition. He informed the board that he proposes to erect two more gas pumps at the filling station which is now equipped with but one pump. Necessity calls for various kinds of gasoline, he said. Mr. Lathrop said he felt he has a right to expand his business and improve his porperty.

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins asked Mr. Lathrop if he intended to have two pumps or two outlets put in. Mr. Lathrop explained that he wants to install two new pumps. He sells about 1,000 gallons of gas a month and would average more than that if he had additional pumps.

Mayor Robbins asked if he had ever been given permission by the zoning board to erect a filling station. Chairman W. S. Murray replied that Mr. Lathrop was engaged in business there before the zoning laws went into effect and did not have to secure permission from the board.

Opposition to the petition was voiced by Charles R. Butts, a resident of the vicinity and president of the Norwich Savings society. Mr. Butts told of Mr. Lathrop's previous attempt to have a gasoline filling station erected on his (Mr. Lathrop's) premises, the zoning board turned down the petition and their action was sustained by the superior court and supreme court of errors. Mr. Butts said there are now about six signs near the street entrance of the Lathrop property advertising gasoline and oil, Mr. Butts expressed the opinion that the granting of the petition might be a wedge that would lead to further changes. He claimed that Mr. Lathrop is not entitled to the granting of the petition.

Henry F. Parker of the board of park commissioners stated that he agreed with Mr. Butts, feeling that an extension of the business should not be permitted. Mr. Parker stated that the park board, of which he is president, is decidedly against the petition. The entrance to the park adjoins Mr. Lathrop's property. Mr. Parker said there is no necessity for a new station or an extension of the present station. It would create a hazardous and dangerous traffic condition at that point.

Howard L. Stanton, former chief of the fire department, and a resident in that section of the city, said he opposed the petition for the interest of the city. "I like to see the approaches to the city kept as well as possible," he said.

Miss Susan Hyde, of Washington street, spoke in opposition stating that the move was but an entering wedge for more business on the street. Henry D. Johnson, member of the park board and a resident in the neighborhood, spoke in opposition. The zoning laws were made to protect property owners and they should be enforced. The Misses Blackman, Miss Matilda Butts and F. S. Bunnell, residents in the vicinity opposed the petition.

Mr. Lathrop said if anyone wanted to buy him out he would sell. "I have to work for a living," he said. Mr. Lathrop said he has always tried to keep an attractive place. There are as many of his neighbors for as against the petition, he said. The erection of the two pumps will not change the property, he said. He told of starting up the business and said that at that time he was the only one in the vicinity in that business. He said he couldn't understand why the petition was opposed. He said he accommodated his customers night and day and said that some of them were at the hearing.

SUPPLEMENTARY JUDGMENT FOR $17,360.97 GRANTED

A supplementary judgment for $17,360.97 was granted by Judge Christopher L. Avery to C. E. Woodbury and others against Thornton Woodbury at the short calendar session of the superior court in New London Friday.

The money is the balance left over from the proceeds of the sale of the Woodbury property in Ocean avenue after $22,460 was paid to the city of New London for back taxes. The property was sold by order of the superior court and the taxes paid by order of the court last week.

A motion for a more specific statement was granted in the case of Greenberger against Hyman & Sons, Inc.

Continuances of one month were ordered in the cases of Byron against Green and others and Haubt against Buksar and others.

A motion to erase for want of jurisdiction was denied in the case of Freberg against Jennins, 3rd, and others.

An order authorizing payment of insurance premiums was entered in the case of Turner against Bridgman corporation.

The semi-annual report and statement of the receiver in the case of Jensen against New London County Agricultural society were approved.

A continuance of three months was ordered on in the case of Moser against Griffin.

Motions in several other cases were postponed or went off the list.

G. E. C. Club Met

The weekly meeting of the G. E. C. club was held Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Mary Galligan of 482 Main street. After the business meeting plans were talked over for future meetings. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Miss Anna John.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S RASH
Doctor Recommended It
"A friend recommended Resinol for a rash which covered my baby's body. I thought that I had better take her to the doctor, however. After examining her the doctor looked up and said, "Have you tried Resinol?" I hadn't so he said, "Try it. I think you will find it is just what you need." I did. Result—my baby is entirely free from skin trouble, rash, or any eruption of any kind. I always keep a jar of Resinol on my baby tray." (Signed)—

CARDS HOPES REVIVE AS WILSON RETURNS TO LINEUP FOR TODAY'S GAME

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3—(AP)—Just when the clouds looked the darkest over the Cardinal world series horizon today, a rainbow burst through that sent Red Birds chins up and fired players and fans alike with renewed determination to halt the march of Connie Mack's Athletics.

The rainbow was the announcement by Manager Gabby Street that Jimmy Wilson, first string Cardinal catcher, would be back on the firing line tomorrow when the third game of the fight for the baseball championship of the world opens at Sportsman's park.

Wilson, considered one of the best handlers of pitchers and batters in the National league, has been out of the game several weeks and his absence has been mentioned as one of the big reasons for the poor showing of the Cards in the series so far. His return, even the dejected Cardinal fans insisted, promised a return of the fighting Cardinal spirit that enabled them to come from far behind in the National league race to victory. In addition to being a smart catcher, Wilson owned a reputation for hitting in the pinches, one of the outstanding shortcomings of the Red Birds so far. His average stood at .320 this season, until he was incapacitated by an injured leg in the final series with the New York Giants.

No little dejected over their favorites' two setbacks in Philadelphia, St. Louis fans tonight took the renewal of the classic here soberly and hopefully. Only a small but loyal delegation greeted the Cardinals on their return today and tonight the city didn't look much different than a convention city except that there was probably less noise. All of the largest and most prominent hotels were jammed but what celebrating there was came from the Athletic fans section.

Absent were the usual groups noisily arguing over the merits of the two teams. Cardinal fans kept a discreet silence when Athletic boosters praised Grove, Earnshaw, Simmons, Foxx and Cochrane.

But there was hope and a lot of it in the Cardinal camp, especially because of the return of Catcher Wilson.

All seats for tomorrow's games were sold tonight except the customary bleacher and pavilion seats, numbering 6,500, which will not go on sale until 8 a. m. tomorrow. A line formed at the bleacher gates this morning and was headed by a St. Louis electrical worker, who brought a box, a tarpaulin, some sandwiches and an extra shirt for the long vigil. He was joined by others tonight.

Manager Street, glum but determined, tonight said he intended to stick by the lineup that won the National league pennant except for Wilson, who will supplant Gus Mancuso.

"Bill Hallahan will lick the A's tomorrow and we'll be right back into the fight feet first," he said. "We haven't surrendered by a long shot."

INDOOR SEASON OPENS AT DANIELSON TUESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 3.—What promises to be a real live wire series of amateur boxing bouts, running through the fall and winter season, will be inaugurated here next Tuesday evening at the town hall. The eight bouts scheduled for the evening will be the first of the indoor season.

Louis Peloquin, who has made such a splendid record staging amateur and professional fights here, is again at the helm, and the fans will have the benefit of his uncanny skill in matching them right. Promoter Peloquin gauges the ability of the battling boys so carefully that seldom ever is there a one-sided match or a slow one.

Next Tuesday night a flock of fast amateurs will be on the card. Those who go down to see what's doing will have the pleasure of looking on while that cyclone of a Patsy Flynn of Worcester mixes things up with a hard egg, one Mike Klowik of Holyoke. Klowik is rated one of the hardest hitters in the middleweight division, and he will have to be just that to get anywhere with this Flynn, who could make fur fly in the professional ranks.

Another sizzler should be the go between Gene Billings, the Goodyear boy who has been flattening them and often since essayed a comeback after an absence of nearly three years from the ring. He takes on another Baystater, John Kroul of Holyoke, a winner of first prize in the tournament held at Westfield, Mass., two weeks ago. These boys are in the 150 lb. class.

Opponents in the six other bouts will be picked from this list: Russell Martin, 150, Webster; George Vigeant, 150, Webster; Andy Fuller, 150, Putnam; Ray Ballou, 130, Holyoke; Young Plasse, 130, Webster; William Leom, 132, Danielson; Harry Woods, 130, Worcester; Charles Goulet, 126, Putnam; Anselm Bernier, 126, Danielson; Kid Stone, 126, Worcester; Kid Tourney, 112, Webster; John Barry, 112, Worcester; Ray Landry, 123, Danielson; Young Bonin, 123, Holyoke; Joe Jackson, 105, Goodyear; Kid Brouillard, 105, Danielson.

This show promises plenty of action.

WINDHAM CONFIDENT ON EVE OF CHAPMAN TILT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 3.—Windham high dwelt in confidence tonight in preparation for the opening of its interscholastic football campaign at Recreation park here Saturday afternoon with Chapman Tech of New London providing the opposition. The players are in good trim and ready to go at the sound of the opening whistle at 2:15 o'clock sharp. The Crimson eleven showed up well in a scoreless game with the alumni last week. The team will suffer somewhat from the loss of the services of Bergeron, rugged guard, who will be out of the playing for the season with a fracture of the hand sustained in practice this week. Coach Thomas A. Callaghan will put Bocash in and hold Twerdy for emergencies. The strength of the visiting team is said to be in its backfield, which is well supported by Bucko and Hewitt and in two big tackles. The contest will be a conference game and should bring some hard-fought action from both sides. Professor Kinsey, of Storrs, will be referee.

TEACHOUT HOLDS WHITE SOX AS CUBS WIN EASILY

CHICAGO, Oct. 3—(AP)—Bud Teachout, a kid left hander, started a baseball game against Red Faber, 43 years old, and veteran of seventeen seasons with the White Sox, and when it was finished Teachout was still there but Faber had been succeeded by two other hurlers, and the Cubs had a 12 to 1 victory in the Chicago city championship series.

Teachout allowed just four singles, and only in the eighth, when three of them were bunched for a run, did he have trouble. Carl Reynolds, one of the ranking American league batsmen, drilled the southpaw for a single in the first but from there on until the seventh not a hit was collected off his stuff.

The kid southpaw's task was made easier by the emphatic hitting of Rogers Hornsby's Cubs, who slammed Faber, Jim Moore and Young Ed Walsh for 18 hits of all sizes and shapes. Hack Wilson had a double, two singles and a pair of walks, Gabby Hartnett got a triple and two singles, and Lester Bell got three singles and was hit by Walsh.

Faber kept away from the Cubs in good shape, outside of Charlie Grimm's homer, for the first three innings. In the fourth, however, he started to wobble and in the fifth was driven from the box. His successor, Jim Moore, lasted less than one inning, and while Walsh stuck to the finish, he was batted hard and frequently.

Today's victory put the Cubs out in front by two games to one and made it possible for them to finish the set and win the title on their own field.

Guy Bush probably will pitch for the Cubs in the fourth game tomorrow, with Garland Braxton doing it for the White Sox.

KILLINGLY HIGH CLASHES WITH PLAINFIELD TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 3.—The Killingly high school football team will meet one of its old rivals, Plainfield, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at Quinebaug field. Although Killingly was defeated in its first game, the team feels confident of overtaking Plainfield. Plainfield defeated Killingly 6 to 0 last year.

The probable starting lineup: Killingly—Le, D'Varcus; lt, Leo; lg, Levell; c, J. Haveles; rg, Morse; rt, Kimball; re Palmer; qb, Anderson; lhb, A. Haveles; rhb, Balavitch; fb, Dascoll. The Killingly school band will make its first appearance at a football game at this tilt and hopes to make a big showing. The band will march through the town before the contest.

Seventeen stolen Washington automobiles were located by police cached in the woods of nearby Virginia.

Game starts at 2:30 o'clock

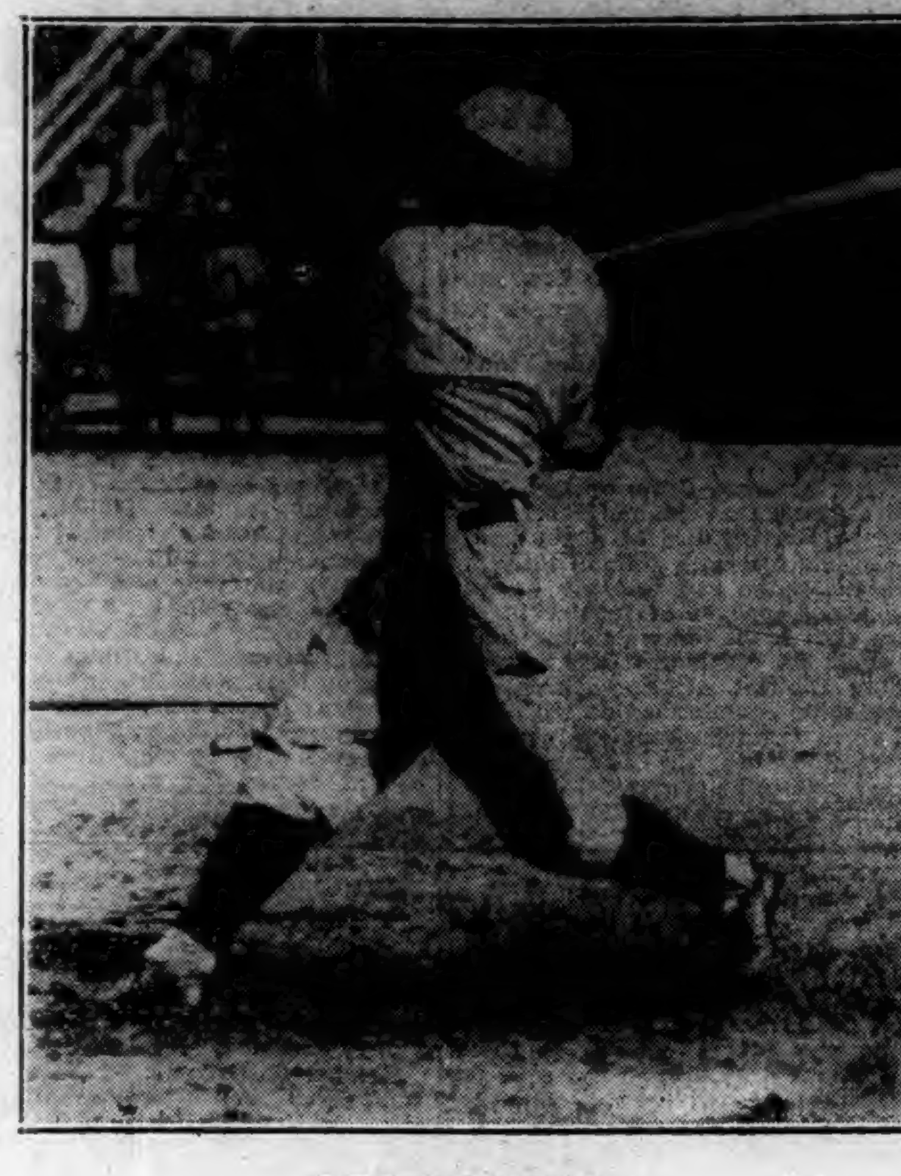
Martin park, Sunday afternoon, will be the scene of the second game of the city series between the Polish Citizens, City league champs and the J. B. Martin outfit and another large crowd is expected. Last Sunday, the Martinmen were victorious when the Cits defense blew up in the seventh and eighth innings. The score of that game was 11 to 4.

However, the followers of the Citizens (and they are many) contend that it will be a different matter tomorrow. They claim that the Cits were due for a bad spell after the brilliant ball they put on display in their winning series with the New London Kaceys and that, having removed all this bad baseball from their system, they will be more than a match for the Velvetmen. Another point that is causing some degree of optimism in the Cits' camp is that Johnny Greene, who pulled a George Earnshaw against the Kaceys any time he faced them, will do the firing on the morrow. Greene allowed just two runs in 27 1-3 innings against the Whalers.

Both teams will play practically the same lineups as on last Sunday. There may be a new face in right field for the Citizens, but that is all. Either Lefty Analon, from Providence, or Lefty Lucier, local boy, will do the pitching for the J. B. outfit. Analon was the winning pitcher last Sunday. The rest of the lineup includes such heavy stickers as Artie Couillard, Carlie Krausse, Mondi Normandin, Jimmy Murphy, Nap Liberty, Meddie Dugas, etc.

Hank Morin and Tommy Simcox will call them and it was announced by the J. B. Martin management Friday evening that returns on the world series game will be announced during the course of the tilt.

A ROYAL WELCOME FOR HIM TODAY



LEFTY DUGAS
Pittsburgh Outfielder

LEFTY DUGAS DAY AT TAFTVILLE PROMISES TO BE BIG EVENT

Today Taftville, Norwich and surrounding towns turn out to welcome home Lefty Dugas, Taftville boy who recently made his debut in big league baseball as a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The welcome home party starts promptly at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Town Pump in Taftville with a parade through Front street to Providence street and thence to the ball park at the upper end of Providence street.

The parade formation will be: Taftville Fire department; Taftville Police department; Italian band; Sacred Heart Young Men's club; Shyma baseball team; Lefty Dugas in person, in new sports car; Jim Troland's All-Star baseball club; Clown section; St. Jean de Baptiste societe; Boy Scouts; Army-Navy club; American Legion; Lafayette club; St. Louis societe; Knights of Columbus.

The Ball Game

The parade will be dismissed at the ball park and the baseball game between Troland's All-Stars and the Shyma club will take place. This game will be well worth seeing as some of the best known players of the present and past will be on the diamond. Jim Troland's club will be picked from the following: Mondi Normandin, Middy Dugas, Steffy Cimikoski, Carlie Krauss, Leo Jarvis, Lloyd Jarvis, Hal Cummings, Charlie Lamorey, Chip Dugas, Rabbit Gauthier, Joe Snow, Eddie Nevins, Johnny Tillman and Mack Hillis.

The Shymas will pick from the following: Lefty Dugas, Tom Duff, Pat Collins, George Shefflot, Ray Yerrington, Jimmy Murphy, Pete Finn, E. Lemieux, W. Burelle, Sammy and Pete Raymond, W. Faucher, J. Dudek, J. Wilk, P. Bunk, F. Ulick, N. Lemieux, G. Raymond, E. Benoit, R. Bordeni. It is thought Red Desautels, catcher for the Detroit Tigers, will be present also.

And last, but not least, Hank Morin will officiate behind the bat.

So that fans attending the game will miss nothing of the world's series play there are to be three radio sets in operation at the field.

Following the game there will be a banquet at the Shyma club hall at which there will be varied forms of entertainment. The speakers will include Father Mandler, as toastmaster; Father DesSureault, Father Bellerose, Father Jette, First Selectman W. S. Murray and Lefty Dugas, himself. Chip Dugas and Chip, Jr., are to furnish one of the evening's novelties. Music will be furnished by the Musical Aces.

Dancing is scheduled to follow the banquet. All indications point to a real bang-up good time for all who attend, as nothing has been left undone to make it a success.

SEVERAL BIG INTERSECTIONAL GAMES SLATED FOR TODAY

By TED VOSBURGH
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—Some of the biggest intersectional football games ever staged on an early October Saturday are on tap in different parts of the country tomorrow as the big fellows of the gridiron lose no time in tackling foes of their own size.

Knute Rockne's latest Notre Dame creation opens against the galloping Mustangs of Southern Methodist University at South Bend, Ind., in a game that is sure to hold a major share of the spotlight.

Some idea as to how much of a chance Rockne's 1930 entry has to duplicate its unbeaten performance of 1929 will be gained from its showing against the formidable eleven from Dallas, which was barely nosed out for the championship of the southwest conference last season.

Several other strong teams from the southern part of the country are sallying forth to seek their fortunes in intersectional combat.

Among them are Tulane, Southern Conference champion last year, which tackles Northwestern at Evanston; Vanderbilt, opposing Minnesota at Minneapolis in another interesting test of Southern Conference football against the Big Ten variety; Baylor, a powerful Southwest Conference outfit which has high hopes of beating Purdue, the Big Ten titleholder, at Lafayette, Ind.; and Maryland, one of the less highly rated members of the Southern Conference group but a thorn in the side of Yale in recent seasons.

This Maryland aggregation, containing many of the men who figured in last year's surprising 13-13 tie with the Bulldog, invades the bowl at New Haven in one of the two outstanding games scheduled for the east. The other head-liner in the eastern section is Pittsburgh vs. West Virginia at Morgantown.

One of the best games in the middle west brings together Ohio State and Indiana at Columbus, a pair that battled to a scoreless tie last year. Illinois entertains Iowa State; the Wolverines of Michigan get a chance to show their mettle against Michigan State; and Iowa plays host to Oklahoma A. & M.

Nebraska and Missouri, figured as two of the best in the Missouri valley, are arrayed against Texas A. & M., and Colorado university, respectively, in intersectional games.

The quality of the opposition for the big fellows rises also on the Pacific coast, where Southern California plays the dangerous Oregon State combination, California meets Washington State, and Stanford takes on Santa Clara.

Half a dozen Southern Conference games are in order. In the east most of the outstanding teams are dallying with practice opponents.

Harvard, for example, has booked a double-header with Vermont and the U. S. Coast Guard Academy, fearing that the Green Mountain boys alone would not give them sufficient opposition. Princeton, however, is not at all certain of beating little Amherst.

The Army and Navy both meet southern antagonists, the Cadets playing Furman and the Middies making their debut against William and Mary.

Niagara, with a strong small college team, hopes to extend Cornell but the possibility of an upset is considered remote in such games as Syracuse-Hobart, Colgate-Bethany, New York university-West Virginia Wesleyan; Pennsylvania-Swarthmore; Columbia-Union; Dartmouth-Bates, Brown-Worcester Poly; Lafayette-Muhlenberg; Carnegie-Thiel, and Fordham-Buffalo.

OCKFORDS PLAY PUTNAM GRIDSTERS ON SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 3.—Any chance of an argument concerning the Eastern Connecticut semi-pro football championship may be settled right off the reel Sunday afternoon at Mercer field when the local Ockfords tackle the Putnam outfit.

The Ockfords, after a convincing victory in the opening game last Sunday, are confident of making it No. 2 on the Sabbath, but the Putnam team comes highly touted and may be just the one to extend the local boys to the breaking point. They have several former high school, prep school and college stars. Included in the Ockfords' squad are a few Norwich boys, including Frank Herbert, Jim Gay, Butch Mileski, etc.

BALTIC SOCCER PLAYS FIRST LEAGUE GAME SUNDAY

The Baltic Soccer team plays its first Eastern Connecticut league game on Sunday at Baltic with the Jewett City team as their first opponents. The game with Bradford originally scheduled was called off because of the league game. Baltic's team will be chosen from the following players: Taylor, Blanchette, Greenhalgh, J. Basties, Folsey, Dudley, Stewart, Duhaime, Depot, Robitaille, Ridgeway, Ornes, Seddon, Simineau, Robinson, Deschamps, Coady and Prive.

MACK WILL PROBABLY GAMBLE ON HIS YOUNG PITCHERS TODAY

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The rampant herd of White Elephants, under the command of Mahout Connie Mack, rumbled truculently into the enemy's stronghold late today, confident they will continue their wild charge toward another baseball championship in the third game of the world's series tomorrow at Sportsman's park.

The Pennsylvania special bearing the Athletics rolled into St. Louis after a 21-hour trip from Philadelphia, but the world's champions who have struck terror so far into the camp of the Cardinals aroused only curiosity among the citizens. Instead of running to the cyclone cellars, hundreds of the populace stood by and cheered.

With two straight victories packed away, half the number needed to clinch the winner's money for the second successive year, the Athletics feel certain they will end the battle in St. Louis, despite the efforts of their veteran leader to discourage any over-confidence.

The A's would like to make it four straight to celebrate the third clean sweep of National leagues forces in a four-year span and at the same time square accounts for the trouncing the old White Elephants absorbed at the hands of the Boston Braves in 1914. They will be satisfied, however, if they manage to take two out of the three contests scheduled here.

Mack has decided definitely not to attempt to win the series by relying solely on the two pitching aces who have beaten the Cardinals so far — Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw.

There was much speculation on the train today as to Mack coming back with Grove for the third game and Earnshaw in the fourth, but those closest in the veteran's counsel understood he had decided not to run the risk of sending Grove back to the mound after only two days of rest.

As a result the A's will gamble on taking their third straight game tomorrow behind one of the lesser lights of their twirling staff, probably Bill Shores, a strong young righthander; possibly George (Swede) Walberg, a fast left-hander. Eddie Rommel, Leroy Mahaffey and even old Jack Quinn are possibilities, if Mack starts casting about on the day of battle for a surprise choice, but the odds are strongly in favor of Shores or Walberg.

Under this plan of strategy, Mack will start Grove again on Sunday and nominate Earnshaw for Monday's game, if the series is still on.

The A's expect to face Wild Bill Hallahan in the third game. Hallahan has been Manager Gabby Street's selection right along and it is altogether possible that the speed-ball left-hander may be the man to turn the tide of Cardinal fortunes, at low ebb as they went away from Philadelphia last night. He has a world of fast stuff.

The world's champions have combed the offerings of two seasoned right-handers, Burleigh Grimes and Flint Rhem, with a long-range barrage that has been extremely effective. The A's made only twelve hits off these two flingers but they made them count for eleven runs. Not a hit has been wasted by the heavy artillery, featuring Cochrane, Simmons, Foxx, Dykes and Miller. These sluggers were stopped cold in the second game by two relief men, Lindsey and Johnson, but not until after the damage had been done.

The A's have no fear of Hallahan, least of all their truculent backstop, Cochrane, who has been a special target of Cardinal "jockeying" and so far been "dusted off" at the plate by both Grimes and Rhem.

"Let 'em keep trying that 'snozzle ball' on me," said Cochrane, "and I'll belt a few more out of the park." Mickey has hit a homer in each game so far, setting the pace for the sluggers.

This is the first world's series appearance of the A's in St. Louis but they will be on familiar ground at Sportsman's park, where they play their regular season games. The field has been a happy hunting ground for American leaguers in previous world's series battles. The Yankees, in their two visits, won two out of three here in 1926 and two straight in 1928.

The Cardinals made a great recovery to win the last National league victory in 1926 and they hope to stage another comeback, even though the odds are all against them. They must take four out of five games to capture the series. In 28 years, only two other teams have done so, the Boston Red Sox of 1903 and the New York Giants of 1921. Both did it, however, in an eight-game series.

BANTAMWEIGHT TITLE IS AT STAKE IN PARIS

PARIS, Oct. 3—(AP)—Al Brown, "the Panama ghost" and Gene Huat of France, meet tomorrow night for twelve rounds in what is described here as a "battle for the bantamweight championship of the world."

This is the first bout of real importance staged by the American promoter, Jeff Dickson, since his return from the United States early in September.

Fight fans here feel that tomorrow night's winner should be recognized as the undisputed champion among the bantams. Brown is recognized as the present champion by the majority of the American boxing commissions and other fistic bodies. Both men have agreed to weigh in at 118 pounds.

SUAREZ GETS VERDICT OVER RAY MILLER

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Justo Suarez, ball of fighting fury from the Argentine, marched to the fourth straight victory of his North American invasion tonight by defeating Ray Miller, blonde left hooking star from Chicago, in the ten-round feature that reopened Madison Square Garden to boxing for the winter.

A crowd of 11,267 saw the black-haired South American, conqueror of Joe Glick, Herman Perlick and Bruce Flowers in his first three engagements, batter out a decisive though uninspiring victory over his lighter opponent. Suarez had a 4 1-2 pound advantage, scaling 136 to Miller's 131 1-2, and he used every bit of his poundage to force the fighting all the way.

Santa Beats Bertazzolo

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Jose Santa, six foot, nine inches Portuguese heavyweight, a crude battler, outpointed Riccardo Bertazzolo, of Italy, by a wide margin here tonight in the Argonne A. A.'s feature ten-round bout. Santa Europe's latest gigantic ring importation, weighed 263 pounds and his opponent, one of Primo Carnera's three-round victims, scaled 211.

Merger of the Metropolitan Sound Studios, Inc., and the Christie Film company was announced in Los Angeles.

One aspect of the unemployment situation was revealed the other morning by a local woman. In her opinion the unemployment situation is not due to unrest but to too much rest.

The sergeant was dozing at the desk at headquarters when he was disturbed from his cat nap by the rude jangling of the telephone bell.

Sergeant: "Hello."

Feminine voice at other end of wire: "Is this police headquarters?"

Sergeant: "Yes, mam, this is police headquarters, what can we do for you?"

Feminine voice: "Will you please send an officer right up to my house, No. —— street?"

Sergeant: "What is the trouble?"

Feminine voice: "There's no trouble, but I want an officer up here right away."

Sergeant: "But, madam, if there's no trouble we can't send an officer."

Feminine voice: "I thought the police were supposed to help people when they were in trouble."

Sergeant: "They are and if you tell me what's the trouble I'd be glad to send an officer, but I must know why first."

Feminine voice: "Well, if you must know, I want an officer to come up here and get my big bum of a husband out of bed so that he can get out and look for a job. He won't get up for me."

Sergeant: "I'm very sorry, madam, but the police can't do things like that. That's out of our line of duty."

Feminine voice: "Well, if you won't send up an officer I suppose I'll have to let the big bum sleep. Good bye."

And the sergeant hung up the receiver, remarking to a brother officer, "What in heck will they expect us to do next?"

MAYS, QUINN AND RUSSO WIN AT NEW LONDON

NEW LONDON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Bobby Mays, of New London, pounded out a ten-round decision over Amando Aguila, of Chile, in the feature fight at Thames arena tonight. Mays weighed 136 pounds; his opponent 140 1-2.

Angelo Tejire, Tampa, Fla., 147 1-2, scored a technical knockout in the third round over Jimmy D'Zuro, of the coast guard, 147, in one of three six-round bouts. In the other six-rounders, Joe Russo, Westerly, R. I., 154, defeated Tony Mayqual, of the coast guard 149; and Jimmy Quinn, Norwich, 126, got a decision over Johnny LaBera, Waterbury, 128 1-2.

Benny Gelenis, another coast guard sailor, lost a decision to Carmen Knapp, New Haven. Both weighed 137 1-2.

Walker Flattens Fontaine

ST. PAUL, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, knocked out Del Fontaine, Canadian champion, in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout here tonight. The title was not at stake as each weighed four pounds over the middleweight limit of 160.

LONGWOOD SEES GAIN FOR DEMOCRATS IN THE HOUSE

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 3—(AP)—Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati speaker of the house of representatives said here tonight that the democrats would make some gains in his branch of congress but that the republicans would retain control.

Normal democratic districts that went republican in the Hoover landslide of 1928 are likely to return to the democratic fold as a natural reaction, he said, but the outlook is not for sweeping democratic gains in normally republican territory.

Prohibition, he said, has become a major issue in many congressional races.

Ohio was described by the speaker, who is a republican, as "safely republican." He said he had no reason to worry as to his own re-election.

NEWEST WALLPAPER FASHIONS SHOWN

New fashions in wallpaper were shown last month at the National Wallpaper Manufacturers convention in New York city.

Manufacturers have been seeking to make a more substantial product and produce faster colors. Washable wallpaper is being shown generally this year. There were a number of displays showing paper with oil colors which will allow removal of ink spots and other stains. There is a demand for a scenic paper in which there is no repetition of design.

Other manufacturers noted a trend away from naturalism in the designs. And increasing demand for Colonial is also noted. Some makers attributed this to the vogue for early American furniture. All agree that the 1930-31 buyer will have a chance to use more individuality than persons who have done decorating in the past.

DAVENPORT SOLVES THE GUEST PROBLEM

The predicament which arises in the home where there is no guest room is easiest solved by a davenport bed.

There are many times when an extra bed would be exceedingly convenient but frequently it is not possible to have an extra room.

The davenport bed in the living room is the solution to the problem.

Most of the time it serves as an indispensable piece of living room furniture, enjoyed by all the family.

It is attractive in appearance and when not made up as a bed in no way suggests a place designed for sleeping.

Oak Floors Will Add Dignity to Home

The well laid oak floor in the home should be regarded as an heirloom and valued as such.

Nothing gives the appearance of richness and dignity so desired in the modern home of today as a good oak floor. Shafts of sunlight cross the grain and bring out the natural beauty of the figure. The graceful lines of the furniture are reflected in the polished surface and when rugs are sparingly and gracefully placed, leav- is all that a home lover can desire. ing a wide floor expanse, the effect

ACADEMY OPENS HOME CAMPAIGN

The Academy football team will play its second game of the season this afternoon at the campus meeting Bulkeley high of Hartford. Plenty of good-hard football should be on display from the time of the kick-off at 3 o'clock on.

The Academy will be protecting a three-game winning streak in this tilt, for in addition to copping the opening game of this season last Saturday at New London with Chapman Tech, a 13 to 7 victim, the Wildcats had finished the 1929 season with two victories against Stonington and New London Bulkeley. The Hartford visitors will be striving for their first victory of the campaign in their second game. Last week, they lost to East Hartford, 9 to 0, after holding that team on even terms for three quarters.

The school band will make its first football appearance this afternoon. This organization was formed last fall, too late for the grid campaign. It is planned to make it a feature of the Wildcat contests with stunts planned for the halves, etc.

The probable Academy line-up will be Jerry Fitzgerald and Joe Sheridan at ends, Les Crowell and Cote at tackles, Capt. Ernie Stevens and Goldberg at guards, Mike Abugle at center, Zictorac at quarter, Geer at fullback and Golembeskie and Cotter at halves.

SEVERAL CASES ADJUSTED AT LONG SESSION OF WESTERLY TOWN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 3.—The third district court held a lengthy session today which lasted into the afternoon with two recesses when Judge Oliver H. Williams disposed of court matters as follows:

New writ entered before the calling of the docket—Robina Wills vs. Arthur A. Guarino. Continued two weeks.

John P. Squire Co. vs. William Riddell, alias Riddell's Market. Book account for $144.22. If unanswered, continued one week.

Criminal docket—State vs. Lewis Abramson, of Pawtucket, R. I., charged with auto speeding on the Nooseneck Hill state highway when he was reported to have had a clocked speed of 58 miles per hour on Sept. 20. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $15 and costs. He gave notice of an appeal to the November term of Washington county superior court and gave $100 bonds for his appearance.

In the case of James A. Stone, taxi driver, of Newport, R. I., charged with operating an automobile so as to have caused the death of a person on the Boston Post road, which case was continued from Sept. 19, was again granted a continuance to Oct. 17. The state reported that a material witness, residing in Philadelphia, was unable to be present and will come into court on the date set. The taxi driver's operator's license has been suspended.

Joseph Tavernesto, 45 Pierce street lane, was before the court, charged with assault on his wife, Dominica Tavernesto. The complaining witness, his wife, was not in court and had to be sent for. On the witness stand she proved somewhat "hostile" to the state and said that she had forgiven her husband. Pressed by the state she said that her husband had banged her in the head and she had slept outdoors on the porch that night. The defendant on the stand denied hitting his wife and said that he had "forgiven" his wife. Chief Brown and Officer Paul McCarthy told the court of being called to the home by reason of frequent quarrels. Judge Williams said that he was of the opinion that the defendant was guilty of perjury. At the end of the lengthy hearing he was put in charge of the state probation officer, Enos Emmett.

Civil trial was held in the case of Thurman F Eldredge vs. Leonard H. Main, Jr., of North Stonington, in the suit brought to collect for gas stove and gas tanks furnished the home of the respondent to the amount of $90.50. The bookkeeper testified to the accounts against Mr. Main and was cross-examined by his attorney, George R. McKenna. Attorney John Ferguson appeared for Mr. Eldredge and brought out the fact that the original account was made to Mr. Main and not his wife. Mr. Main had testified that in the various checks he had sent Mr. Eldredge his wife had given him the money with which to meet the payments. Judge Williams rendered his decision for the plaintiff to collect in the sum of $90.50 and costs.

Other civil matters were disposed of as follows:

General Equipment Corp. vs. Frank H. Bliven. Discontinued as settled without costs.

Peter Kempl vs. Konrad Andrekson. Continued two weeks.

Crandon Bros., Inc., vs. Reuben T. Holland. Continued nisi.

National Cash Register Co. vs. Walter Cekala. Continued one week.

Kibbe Bros. Co. vs. James A. Koulbanis. Continued one week.

Mary E. McCarthy vs. F. T. Callon. Defaulted and passed for proof of claim.

Isaac Prosser vs. Effie Simmons. Plaintiff submits to decision for amount of claim.

D. A. R. CHAPTER HEARS ABOUT THE RED FLAG

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 3.—In the regular meeting of the Daughters of the Revolution held on Thursday, Rev. Henry K. Vye, of Cranston, gave an address on "The Red Flag or the Star Spangled Banner" at the Memorial Library building, under the auspices of Phebe Greene Ward chapter, D. A. R. More than 100 members and their friends were present.

Rev. Mr. Vye drew a comparison between the beginning of our government and that of the communistic government in Russia, pointing out that the government of our country was founded on church and school.

At the business meeting preceding the address Mrs. William C. Thompson, regent of the chapter, presided. It is announced that a public bridge to raise funds for the local chapter's share in the cost of bronze lanterns for the new Constitution hall at Washington will be held at the home of Mrs. Edmund Hyde in Stonington, Oct. 15.

Westerly and Pawcatuck police have been asked to locate Charles Hill, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Hill, of Burdick lane, who disappeared from his home about a week ago.

The young man had been seen around Pawcatuck as late as Wednesday of this week, but it is thought that he has since left for some other city.

Hill, who is a student at Stonington High school, has run away from home several times before, and on one occasion he was picked up by the police in New York city.

A public reception was tendered on Thursday evening to Rev. Harvey H Conklin, who has been recently installed pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, and family in the church parlors by the members of the parish. There were 200 or more present. Addresses of welcome on behalf of the ministers of the town were given by Rev. Harold R. Crandall, of the Pawcatuck Seventh Day Baptist church; Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, of the Broad Street Christian church, and Rev. Lewis A. Walker, of Calvary Baptist church.

A welcome was also extended to the new pastor and his family by Rev. Myron E. Genter, district superintendent of the Methodist denomination, who was present with Mrs. Genter, from Norwich. Charles E. Mason, chairman of the reception committee, extended the greetings of the members of the church and congregation. Rev. Mr. Conklin responded to the welcome and expressed his appreciation for the reception accorded him.

An orchestra composed of Raymond Gould, Aubrey Stedman, Althea Nichols, Thomas Nichols, Mr. Richmond and Mr. Wilson played several selections under the direction of Albert R Bailey.

The committee in charge consisted of Charles E. Mason, chairman; Albert Bailey, Porter [illegible] and Miss Alice Culley. Refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid society and the members of Miss Culley's class acted as ushers.

Rev. F. W Walsh, of Bethel, Conn., will occupy the pulpit of the Pawcatuck Congregational church on Sunday.

Thomas Welch, of Providence, former Westerly resident, was a caller in town on Friday.

Probation Officer Elias Emmett, of Providence, was a Westerly business caller on Friday to attend the sessions of the third district court.

Three airplanes, flying low in a V formation, passed over Westerly on Friday noon, being thought by many to be on their way to Boston for the American Legion convention next week.

Herbert A Stiles, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been in Pawcatuck to visit with his brother, Frederick W. Stiles, formerly of Worcester, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Potter left motor trip to their former home in Warren, R. I.

Thomas Mulvaney, of Providence, has been a week-end business caller in Westerly.

Sergt. Paul Clifford Merrill, U. S. A., aviation branch, has returned to his duties in Hartford, after a short visit at his Westerly home.

Capt. Amos P. Tefft, retired coast guard service man, has been a Wakefield visitor in Westerly the past week.

MYSTIC

Miss Alice Harrison of Detroit, who has been visiting her parents in the village, will be the soloist at the Methodist church, Sunday morning. At the Twilight club service at 7 o'clock in the evening, the leader will be Miss Esther Barraclough.

Charity chapter, O. E. S., held a whist in Masonic Temple, Wednesday evening, with nine tables in play. Prizes in straight whist were won by Mrs. Harriet Brainard and Albert Wilson, Mrs. Charles Dodd and James Hempstead. There were only two high prizes given in bridge whist and they were won by Mrs. Albert Wilson and Holden Wilson, of Waterbury. Refreshments were served by the committee.

Robert Mitchell, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Coit of Pearl street, is a surgical patient at a private hospital in New London.

Robert Woodbury, Jr., celebrated his second birthday Thursday. Several of his relatives were callers during the day, and he was much pleased with a large birthday cake. He also received a number of gifts.

Mystic Rebekah lodge met Friday evening in Odd Fellows' hall. Following the business session there was a social time and dancing.

Miss Wilmer Eccleston of Noank, spent Thursday evening with Miss Daisy Crandall.

The dues for the Village Improvement society are being collected.

Local car owners are receiving their cards to make out for their 1931 license plates. Some will mail early and get their numbers and others will wait until December 31st, and stand in line for perhaps a half-day and sputter because they have to.

Married Ten Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Duerr informally celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary Thursday, October 2. A number of relatives called in the evening.

Groton tax payers are receiving their school tax bills.

Rally Day will be observed in the Sunday school and by the following program at the evening service at 7 o'clock, at Old Mystic M. E. church, Sunday: Prelude, orchestra; Lead On, Oh King Eternal, orchestra and congregation; prayer; Rev. Homer E. Moore, pastor; To the Work, quintet; Shepherd's Psalm, congregation; Sound the Battle Cry, orchestra and congregation; solo, Consider the Lilies, Mrs. H. D. Gay; scripture reading, Joshua 1:1-9 by the pastor; We'll Work Til Jesus Comes, quintet; The Beatitudes, congregation; Jesus is Calling, orchestra and congregation; Fight the Good Fight, Master's Helpers class; Soldiers of Christ, Arise, orchestra and congregation; address, Songs in the Night, psalm 77:1; Bringing in the Sheaves, quintet; Just as I Am, orchestra and congregation; benediction. The members of the orchestra are, Mrs. Alice Chester and Miss Blanche LaFarge, first violins; Harry Hanks, second violin; Bernard Davis and Alfred Ward, cornets; Elmer Davis, trombone.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wilcox of Pawcatuck, Miss Lena Chesebro, Mrs. Gertrude Ollweiler, Mrs. Adelle Brown and Mrs. Ethel Adams of Stonington attended the Eastern Star whist held Wednesday evening in Masonic Temple.

Miss Harriet Park, who has been spending the summer with Mrs. Helen Clift, has returned to her home in Providence.

Miss Betty Monroe has been visiting relatives in Norwalk and Stamford.

Malcolm Craig, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Craig, who has been operated on for appendicitis in Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London, is reported as getting along as well as possible.

Mrs. Thomas Whittle is ill with an asthmatic attack.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cinquanta were in New London, Wednesday.

The Women's Bible class of Union Baptist church will meet Monday evening.

The Daughters of Veterans have been holding a rummage sale in G. A. R. hall during the past week.

D. A. R. CHAPTER ADMITS MEMBERS FROM JEWETT CITY

Fanny Ledyard chapter, D. A. R., held its October meeting in Masonic Temple, Thursday afternoon, instead of Wednesday as usual, owing to the state meeting in New London on the regular meeting day. The regent, Mrs. Estella B. Bailey, presided. The regent, Mrs. Bailey, gave a report of the regents' meeting held in Windsor, September 25. She attended with the two vice-regents. Mrs. Gladys Chapman, first vice-regent, gave a report on the morning session of the state meeting in New London, Wednesday, and Mrs. Bailey reported for the afternoon session. The registrar reported two transfers from Anne Brewster Fanning chapter of Jewett City, Mrs. Eva Burdick and Miss Ethel Burdick. These were voted in as members of the local chapter. The membership committee reported two applications. The resignation of one member was accepted. The historian, Mrs. Emily Williams, gave a brief report of the dedication of the Robert Park memorial tablet in White Hall cemetery and the poem on Robert Park by Miss Grace D. Wheeler was read. A vote of thanks is to be given the G. A. R. for the use of their tables and chairs at the annual picnic of Fanny Ledyard chapter. It was voted that the patriotic education chairman, Mrs. Elsie McGaughey, send a box to the same school in Marlboro as last year and members were requested to bring in their articles to the next meeting, November 5. A committee was appointed by the regent, Mrs. Edith M. Morgan, Mrs. Ella E. G. Wheeler and Mrs. Abbie B. Phillips, to draw up resolutions on the death August 18 of Mrs. Louis K. Tufts. This meeting was the first time it had been possible to find out the exact date of her death. Mrs. Tufts was one of the first to join the local chapter after it was organized in April 1894. There are only two charter members living, Mrs. Edith M. Morgan of Mystic and Mrs. Ella E. G. Wheeler now living in Arlington, Mass., and they were both present Thursday. Several communications from state officers and state chairmen of committees were read. Following the business session, Rev. William G. Fagan, pastor of the Mystic Bridge Congregational church, gave a most interesting talk on Camping Life in Canada. In some parts of Canada the camps are the finest in the country. Mr. Fagan has traveled many miles inland and could give first hand information. Sandwiches, cake and ice cream were served to the 40 members present.

Gift of Paper of 1889

Charles Q. Eldredge, who has a very interesting museum at his home in Old Mystic, has just received another gift. A copy of the New London Morning Telegraph dated October 11, 1889, has been presented to him by E. S. Comrie. In this paper there is a full account of the opening of the railroad bridge over the Thames river on October [illegible] of that year. At that time the draw was the longest in the world, being 503 feet long, and there were thousands of engineers, including many from foreign countries who witnessed the opening of this bridge. "Built for all time to be an enduring monument to the coming ages." Many living at that time, have lived to see another bridge built, needed to take care of increased traffic.

Mrs. D. Frank Wheeler and Mrs. Earl Massey were calling on friends in Norwich, Wednesday.

PANELED INTERIORS REPRODUCE PERIODS

The popularity of paneled walls is strongly founded upon their association with house interiors of period styles now popular. Colonial, English and Norman prototypes of the houses which are springing up on every side in American suburbs usually had their main rooms finished in paneling of some type, for in many cases the old builders did not understand the art of plastering and frequently there was no suitable material available.

Modern craftsmen have not alone reproduced the best of the elaborate hand carvings of old times but have originated new modernistic forms which accord well with the present day interiors of pyramid, geometric effects and plane surfaces.

Elaborate applied forms as decorative centers for paneling are now made in synthetic materials, hydraulically pressed, and, because of their quantity manufacture, low in price.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Politics occupied the attention of most of the people of Norwich 50 years ago this week. A large republican flag was raised on Laurel Hill, there was a parade of the Garfield and Arthur Guards with 500 in line. The Hancock and English Pioneers elected John P. Murphy, colonel of the Second regiment. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of 1880 are as follows.

Monday, Sept. 27, 1880—On Saturday a splendid pole was erected on the west side of Laurel Hill avenue, in front of the residence of Mr. George Hall, and a wire was stretched across that thoroughfare to the tower of Mr. Hall's house, about 75 feet above the roadbed, for the support of a handsome republican flag which is to be thrown to the breeze on Tuesday evening, with a torchlight procession and public addresses. The Garfield and Arthur brigade has been ordered out and a grand illumination is anticipated.

A large congregation assembled in St. Patrick's church, Sunday morning to participate in services commemorative of the anniversary of the dedication of that edifice. Solemn high mass was celebrated by Father Shahan, Father Fones of Jewett City acting as deacon and Father Byron, subdeacon.

The Buckingham Guards will leave the city tomorrow for New York where they are to be the guests of the Independent Battalion. They will return Thursday.

Tuesday, Sept. 28, 1880—The late Dorson E. Sykes—The intelligence of the death of Mr. Sykes will awaken in the minds of many of the older residents of this city the remembrance of him and the period when, for 17 years, as owner, and editor of The Norwich Courier, he held a prominent place in the community.

The annual parade of the Norwich fire department, which takes on Saturday next, promises to be one of the finest turnouts ever made in this place. The men have been making preparations for the event for several weeks the hose carriages and steamers have been put in first class order and will be splendidly decorated on the occasion.

The Hancock Veterans, Co. A, organized Saturday evening and elected the following officers; Captain, Joseph J. Enos; first lieutenant, William Carroll; second lieutenant, William H. Edwards; orderly sergeant, Wallace Fuller.

Wednesday, Sept. 29, 1880—Intelligence was received in this city yesterday morning of the death of Calvin G. Child, district attorney for the United States in Connecticut, at his residence in Southport. Mr. Child had many warm friends in this, his birthplace, which was long his home, and was connected with our oldest and best known families. His father was the late Asa Child of Norwich.

The Garfield and Arthur brigade, under command of General C. W. Gale, made a splendid parade, last night. There were nearly 500 torches in line and the marching of the men was highly complimented. A new feature of the line was the presence of Capt. C. M. Carleton's company of Garfield Rockets.

The Hancock and English Pioneers, at a meeting held on Monday evening, elected John P. Murphy colonel of the Second Regiment; William B. Nelson, lieutenant colonel; Richard O'Gorman, major M. Dexter was promoted to lieutenant colonel of the First Regiment, vice Lieut. Col. John P. Murphy, promoted.

Thursday, Sept. 30, 1880—The republicans of Taftville are to show their colors tonight by raising a Garfield and Arthur flag over the street near the store. They propose to have a good turnout themselves and the Garfield and Arthur companies from Greeneville, will join them in the parade. After the flag raising there will be a meeting in Ponemah hall, addressed by Mr. Wm. S. Congdon and other speakers.

The boat race on the Thames river, yesterday afternoon to decide the single scull championship of the Academy, was one of the closest and most exciting races ever witnessed here. It was won by W. Tingley.

The Universalist church was well filled yesterday afternoon with guests to witness the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Mead of this city to Mr. Samuel Hudson of Pawtucket, R. I. The ceremony was made very impressive by Rev. Mr. Blackford.

Friday, Oct. 1, 1880—Mr. Leo Hart, Jr., and his newly wedded wife, formerly Miss Maggie F. McCloud, have left Norwich for Omaha, Neb., whether they are nor enroute. Their wedding occurred in St. Patrick's church, Father Flannigan officiating, last week Wednesday, and they took their departure on the City of Lawrence, Sunday night.

The Ledyard monthly was found guilty of drunkeness in the city court yesterday and sent to jail for 30 days and ordered to pay the costs of prosecution.

The grocers of Norwich have agreed to close their stores on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, hereafter, at 6 o'clock

Saturday, Oct. 2, 1880— Mrs. Dr. Linnell met with a distressing accident, Thursday evening, at her residence on Sachem street. While descending from a step ladder, on which she had been adjusting a curtain, she fell to the floor and dislocated her shoulder.

The epizootic has appeared among the horses of Norwich and several animals are very sick with it.

The horse railroad ran a car over the Sachem street and Falls branch of the new road yesterday for a trial trip. The results were highly satisfactory.

VOLUNTOWN

The political campaign will open in the town during the coming week with caucuses of both parties to select candidates for representative and justices of the peace. The republican caucus will be held Thursday evening. No names have yet been mentioned as possible candidates for representative.

The registrars of voters will be in session next Tuesday to receive the names of those who wish to have their names placed on the voting list, all names must be given in before 5 o'clock p. m. on that date. They may be handed in any time previous to that time to the registrars, Thomas McDonald and Leonard B. Kinnie.

A town meeting was held in Union hall Saturday afternoon at which First Selectman William D. Downing presided and Town Clerk Howard E. James was clerk. The principal item was the acceptance of the town's share of state aid for road work for the current year.

Local state roads are being sanded and oiled in preparation for the winter.

The long continued drought has affected a large number of wells in town, many wells that have furnished water for over forty years are dry for the first time. Many beautiful lawns are parched and brown. A good steady rain would be appreciated.

A couple of frosty mornings this week about finished the many flower gardens.

Growing woodpiles and the sound of sawing machines are another evidence of the approach of winter.

The house owned by John Godek of Jewett City at the Center, has been painted and improved.

Walter C. Tanner, chairman of the republican town committee and Thomas McDonald, registrar of voters, were delegates to the republican senatorial convention held at Norwich Saturday at which Mr. Curtis Brown of Colchester was nominated as candidate for state senator to represent the 20th district.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Mitchell of Oakland Beach, R. I., called on friends in town on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Violette and children, Teresa, Rosemary, and Lawrence of South Griswold, were guests on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Violette's parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McDonald.

Miss Elizabeth Duffy of Danielson was a week end visitor with her mother, Mrs. Theresa Duffy

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Derosier of Pawtucket, R. I., and Mr. Wilfred Derosier of Woonsocket, R. I., were week end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Derosier.

Thomas Violette of South Griswold was a Sunday caller at the home of his brother, Mitchell Violette.

The Glasgo Athletic club held a well attended and enjoyable dance in Union hall, an orchestra from Westerly furnishing music.

Sunday's fine autumn weather was appreciated by large numbers of motorists, Beach Pond being visited by quite a number.

PRESTON

Edwin Hill, of Norwich Y. M. C. A., will be the speaker at the Baptist church Sunday morning. At the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday evening the leader will be Mildred Slater.

The Water That Has Passed

Listen to the water mill,
Through the livelong day,
How the clanking of the wheels
Wears the hours away.
Languidly the autumn wind
Stirs the greenwood leaves;
From the fields the reapers sing,
Binding up the sheaves;
And a proverb haunts my mind,
As a spell is cast;
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Take the lesson to thyself,
Living heart and true;
Golden years are fleeting by,
Youth is passing, too;
Learn to make the most of life,
Lose no happy day;
Time will never bring thee back
Chances swept away.
Leave no tender word unsaid,
Love while life shall last—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Work while yet the daylight shines,
Man of strength and will;
Never does the streamlet glide
Useless by the mill.
Wait not till tomorrow's sun
Beams upon the way;
All that thou can'st call thine own
Lies in thy today;
Power, intellect and health
May not, can not last;
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Oh, the wasted hours of life
That have drifted by;
Oh, the good we might have done,
Lost without a sign;
Love that we might once have saved
With but a single word;
Thoughts conceived, but never penned,
Perishing unheard.
Take the proverb to thine heart,
Take! Oh take it fast!—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

FLOWERS AT THE FAIRS

Dear Social Corner: I am wondering if Pernickety went to the fair at Worcester as she planned. She would have enjoyed seeing the many flowers exhibited at the Pawtuxet Valley fair. We went on the opening day so saw things while they were fresh. It was also grange day and we saw many familiar faces and greeted many friends.

On previous visits to this fair I have found the floral displays interesting and this year they were better than ever. The outstanding bouquet to my mind was a tall basket filled with daisies, green foliage and small white pea-like flowers. I admired the daisies especially because I had never seen anything like them before. They were over three inches across and varied in color from purest white through various shades of yellow and orange to rich salmon shades. After consulting my faithful catalog I decided that they were hybrids of the annual African golden daisy.

A bouquet that won a first prize was composed of orange montbretia, some fine-leaved for green and an ice plant with its insignificant white blooms and odd icy foliage. The effect was striking but I saw other bouquets that were more to my taste. For instance, I liked the collection of yellow gladioli and blue delphinium. There was also a large basket of pale pink asters and delphinium that remains in my mind. I felt sorry for the child who arranged a vase of yellow coreopsis, blue delphinium and red cosmos. The flowers in themselves were perfect but she should have omitted the cosmos and added some green.

Can anyone tell me how to raise Chinese lantern plants so that they will bear a lot of seed pods like those I saw at the fair? My plants never have more than one lantern to a stalk. And have any of you been successful in growing Japanese anemones? The pure white single flowers with yellow centers are beautiful. I planned to set out some this spring but did not because they are late bloomers and this is a frosty region. Pernickety may be interested to know that hardy white ageratum was used in many of the bouquets.

What color should window boxes be painted? I suppose the answer depends on the color of the house where the boxes are used. As a general rule I think dark green is the best color although I saw some in pale green and one in blue. The latter contained some handsome large purple heliotropes and pink geraniums. One noticeable plant in another box was a torenia with its masses of blue and yellow flowers. I mean to raise some of these although I don't think they are as pretty as pansies.

Prairie Chicken: I was interested in your description of a day at the exposition for you were there on the same day that we were. This was my first visit there and Pernickety had a grand time showing me all the wonderful exhibits. The yellow flower that she mentioned in her letter may have been the double hardy sunflower.

Milky Way: Your nice letter was appreciated and will be answered later.

Winter Robin: I wonder if your Canterbury bell plants are like mine. I have some that came from self-sown seed last summer. They were not large enough to bloom this spring so I am going to try to winter them. Around here the Nonesopretty is called Johnny-jump-up. I suppose this is because they spring up everywhere.

And now October is here with the first killing frost of the season.

'Bright, pallid, changing, chill October morn;
Across your windy, keen exhilarant air,
You loom, a cameo dream, a vision fair."—Wilfred Campbell.

SISTER RHODY

A TRIP TO CAPE COD

Dear Social Corner Members: I want to tell you of our trip to Provincetown in July. For years I have wanted to go. My daughter had been by boat several times. I had rather go by auto. We started at 5.45, D. S. T., and went over to Brooklyn on the new state road to get on route No. 6 that goes all the way to the cape.

It was a fine, cool morning and after we left Providence we found our way through Fall River, New Bedford and on until we came to Cape Cod canal, where we had to stop and see the tug boats taking the freight boats through. We saw the bridge open to let them through. Then on down to the cape where we went through so many of the places that Joseph Lincoln wrote his books about and I did wish I could remember which place he lives in in the summer. I also wanted to know at which lake Mr. and Mrs. R. Gilbert (of the Cheerio family) camp at in the summer.

We had our lunch with us and so ate what we wanted somewhere on the road. We saw more New York cars than we did Massachusetts and our state made a poor showing on that trip. We went down to see the Dorothy Bradford come in and the most of the natives did also, all but the artists. We saw very few artists. I am afraid they have a beach by themselves. The streets are very narrow, hardly room for two cars.

We went out to the public beach, nearly a mile long; and out to Race Point and then over the seven-mile drive through the sand dunes, all state road, and what a treat to see those sand dunes all made by the wind. We did not get to the Wood end light as I never thought to wear low heels, and the other lighthouses we reached too late or too early to see them.

We stayed in Provincetown all night, had a hot dinner at one restaurant and breakfast at another.

We did not forget the Pilgrims' monument, which was erected in Aug. 20, 1907, on the beautiful hill 92 feet high, where many a wife and maiden has waved a last good-bye; or strained their wistful eyes to catch the glimpse of a returning sail. I see that Bartholomew Gosnold visited the place on May 15, 1602, that Captain John Smith of Pocahontas fame, visited it in 1614, that Miles Standish marched his valiant array of sixteen men there, and that the wife of Governor Bradford was drowned and her body never recovered, which seems very sad to me. Here also the "Immortal Compact" was signed, said to be the first form of constitutional government in history.

It was one wonderful and glorious trip and hope to go again next summer. If my daughter had the time I would like to go again this fall. Next time I hope to stay in one of those over-night cabins, also to come back the Shore road through Hyannis.

Ann Tenna: I am glad you had another summer at your home "The House by the Side of the Road." And we do miss your letters.

Thirty-two: I did enjoy your letter about your trip over the Mohawk trail. I hope to see part of it this fall. Have you any pieces for the nurse seven by four inches?

GRANDMOTHER—Twin Oak Cottage.

CHATTY LETTER FROM E. L. M.

Dear Social Corner Members: What splendid letters we have had the past few weeks. When I read that Naomi was on a trip I knew we would soon have an interesting letter from her. She is always so good to give the rest of us the benefit of it.

Prudence: You sure gave us a nice surprise: it is so long since we read anything from your pen. You must have had a delightful trip.

Ravena: You did you share, too. We all enjoyed the account of your trip.

American Girl: What a nice time you had, too. I was glad to read about it.

Pernickety: My scabiosa has been splendid this year and did not mind the dry weather and for a late white flower found them very satisfactory. At first I was disappointed in having so many more white ones than other colors, but they worked up in bouquets fine. I had late white asters, too. In the spring I bought a collection of perennials and among them was the boltonia and some thing purple, much like wild aster.

Winter Robin: I never have any success in raising Canterbury bell plants so always buy them and they have always bloomed that year if I buy them in the spring. Did you know that when they are through blooming if you pick off the dead blossoms you will get another crop of blooms? Don't you just love to try new color combinations and arrangements in your bouquets? What a difference from a decorative point if we place the flowers of lighter shades in rooms that have darker walls, and the brighter and darker ones in the rooms with light walls, and another thing I like is to place some so that they will be reflected in a mirror.

May B: You reminded me of Mr. E. L. M. as you were telling about the beautiful views you got in coming to Mystic. When we are driving along he will often speak of some view we see and say if we were a long way from home how we would admire it.

Crimson Rambler: So sorry we missed you at the fair. Does any one know how Catnip is and if she is still in the hospital? I was surprised to read that Alta had left town. I understand she was to have charge of the meetings of Club 5 this year and hoped to see her again.

Wiltwyck: I am still hoping I can look you up some time. What a nice lot of plums you had. They have been very plentiful this year and so cheap that for once I had all I wanted.

Dearie: Hope you got home from the fair all right.

Milksham: Where is your pen? Mr. M. told Mrs. F. L. M. you were going to write about your trip. I look evey Saturday in vain.

Connie: I am so sorry for you in the loss of your sister. I shall miss her so much as I seldom went past without stopping for a few minutes.

E. L. M.

CARING FOR PLANTS.

Social Corner Friends: The letter last week signed Love was a misprint and should have read Ivy; however no harm is done. In reading Sumac's letter about a country school I recalled my own school days, as I attended a similar one for six year then went to a grammar school in the city. Our stove was the same as she described but our blackboards and erasers were the modern type. We used slates instead of paper and in winter, it was one of the big boys' jobs to cut a hole in the ice at the brook and wet the sponges for all the children to clean their slates. I also taught in three small country schools and the flowers and foliage were beautiful around them on the hillsides in the fall when they opened. Some of the city tenement children miss the beauties of the country, but the country schools are mostly done away with now and children are taken to larger schools. Of course they have better advantages than in the old days but I think these present methods also have their disadvantages in the case of smaller children being transported. But it gives them a chance to attend a kindergarten which was something we did not have.

It has been so unusually warm for September I haven't taken any plants into the house yet, but keep them on the verandah. Those in the ground dry up as we need rain so badly.

I was interested in Sister Rhody's letter. Too many colors do not look well in flower boxes and either geranium or petunias look best all of one color to a box. I have a Jerusalem cherry tree three years old. My uncle grew it from a cherry. You plant them and they will make little trees the first year but do not bloom till the second year. I set it in the ground from May until September then take up into a flower pot and have it on the veranda. It has around 250 cherries now. They need lots of water.

Foliage and patience plant slips root best in a vase of water first. Set in dirt when small roots are formed. Geranium and begonias root best in dirt first. Keep moist but not too wet until new leaves begin to form. If plant lice or small bugs come on house plants spray with weak soapsuds, then with water containing a little ammonia; once a week. Put a little cold coffee in the water for ferns and cold tea is good once in a while for the other indoor plants. Powdered tobacco in water is also good if not used too strong. House plants must have sun and air if they are to bloom well.

IVY.

MISTAKES WILL HAPPEN.

Dear Readers of the Social Corner: I did not intend to write so soon as I had nothing planned but after reading my letter of last week and noticing the most embarrassing mistake, I just had to write and have it rectified. The word "Plymouth" should have been "Mayflower." I guess you think I don't know my history very well, but mistakes will happen with the best of writers! When I read it I was disgusted enough and it reminded me of a woman who thought she could talk about the Bible to a minister who was calling in the home, and she made this break during the conversation: "Yes, you know Sodom and Gomorrah were two brothers who went up to the city together." Was her husband provoked with her? He was! This is true.

I say to myself very often I will not write again, because so many mistakes are found, but of course I do.

Saturday I called on Clarissa Lyle. She is an extremely busy person; really hasn't the time to write. We wish she could, as he letters are always so full of interest. I wish I could have spared a few minutes with Zulieka who is ill but I was afraid my uncle and family would be away soon after dinner so I hurried on, but will endeavor to stop in some other time. I know the other clubs will join ours in sympathy to Connie who lost her sister last Friday. "We will not say, we cannot say that she is dead; she's just away." We cannot see why those we love are taken from us but of course it is our Maker's will. Some time the veil will be lifted, then we can see with a clear vision and fully understand.

PRAIRIE CHICKEN.

REGRETS CHANGE OF SEASON.

Dear Editor and Sisters: I want to thank you for the yellow slip which I appreciate very much.

Our sympathy goes out to Connie in her great sorrow. There is little we can do except express our sympathy and hope that she may be given strength to carry on.

The days are getting cooler and I guess we have spent our last day at "the point." Last Sunday was very windy and the tide was extremely high but the kiddies went in. I dread giving up though as I just love to be beside the water and watch the waves. Notice I said beside and not on it, when I'm watching them. Boats have no charm. Pyrethrum has made good progress in her swimming and she can also dive. I couldn't let her get ahead of me so I tried to dive, too. I managed to fall in, but somehow my head and hands refuse to go in the water ahead of my feet. Seems funny, too, as when I am walking my head always tries to get there first. Beers and I are alike in that respect. My son says it's because we want to start talking as soon as possible. Some people know enough to keep their mouths shut when they have nothing to say, but I can't. I keep right on talking just the same.

What wonderful trips some of the people have taken and isn't it nice to read about them. Hope some more will write.

And knowing how nice it is to have our work appreciated I am going to tell someting I heard a few days ago: "If any one wants to hear a good program go to Moosup Valley grange." Hope I can some time.

SUMAC (No. 6)

ENDING THE SEASON

Dear Social Corner Friends: Jack Frost has been threatening us for some time, but last night he laid a heavy hand on our flowers and now they are hanging black and limp in the morning sun.

Maude picked all the flowers and every window here has its bouquet of them. One bouquet is of sweet peas. You see they did very well indeed, this year for it isn't often that they stay in bloom till the first of October.

As soon as plant stalks have dried enough to handle it will be time to begin cleaning up that garden. And what a mess it is! But with a few fires much of the dried, tangled stuff will be reduced to ashes that will help to grow next years flowers.

I am going to spade as much ground as possible for I found it a great deal easier to turn over ground last spring that had been spaded up a year ago. I had to stop digging up new ground—it was too much like trying to cut leather with a dull knife.

The boys are out looking at their peanut crop. They can't wait to dig them but must go along the row and examine the plants and try to estimate the number of nuts in the hill. They pulled up one plant a little while ago that had a number of peanuts on it.

Winter Robin: One commercial grower recommends covering canterbury bells with horse manure. The crown should not be covered or it will smother. If there is heavy leaf growth he draws the covering up more closely about the crown after the leaves have died away naturally. Foxgloves are treated in the same way as the habit of growth is very similar to that of canterbury bells.

The maples are very bright but the ash trees are almost bare and every breeze sends more leaves fluttering to the ground. Have you ever waxed any of the colored leaves? Several years ago I had a number waxed and they stayed bright as long as I kept them—about two years. I used a hot flatiron and parafine, melting the wax with the iron and smoothing it over the leaf then laying the leaf on heavy brown paper to dry. I liked this method much better than dipping for there is often too much wax left on the leaf when it is dipped and the color is dimmed. As ever.

PERNICKETY.

An entire herd of thirty-one cattle on a ranch near Salem, Ore., are all descendants of one cow that is still living and producing. The nine adult females in this herd have an average production record of 450 pounds of butter fat.

RECOLLECTIONS AND REMINISCENCES.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: There is hardly a week that we don't have the pleasure of reading in the Social Corner page reminiscence of persons, families and places. Ancient history, as one might say, which to us young old folks, or even young folks, is interesting, for it brings to our minds, places, persons and things that in the passing of years has been blurred or entirely erased from the pages of memory.

To find some one who can bring to us a picture that has faded or been completely taken from memory's gallery should receive the thanks and appreciation of the hundreds who are members and readers of the Social Corner.

The subjects of this ancient history, dating back 200 years, will no doubt be interesting to many who knew the location and the families mentioned in this write-up.

Being solicited many times to write a history of one of the oldest families and homes in Windham county, I last week had the pleasure of receiving this well written, authentic history and reminiscence, from the great-great-granddaughter of this old family, Mrs. Frances B. Bacon.

With her permission I will give it, as written, to the Social Corner readers.

"Recollection and Reminiscences of the Bingham Family and Farm, by a Direct Descendant, of the Fifth Generation."

"The Bingham farm is situated in the town of Scotland, two miles east of the center, and what was then known as the Brunswick district. The town was then divided into five districts.

"The farm of 250 acres was owned and occupied by four generations of Binghams. The first, my great-great-grandfather, Jeremiah, of which I lack a record.

"Jeremiah, the second, built the one and a half story house, now standing. There, my grandfather, Gamaliel, was born, and lived to the age of 85 years, and died there. In the year 1800 he married Betsey Robinson, who came from good old Puritan stock of Revolutionary fame.

"The issue of that marriage was nine Binghams, eight of whom lived to reach manhood and womanhood.

"There were three sons, George, Egbert and Warren; men of ability, large capabilities, but lacking force and energy sufficient for a lasting mark in the world. There were five daughters. As the family increased, a two story annex was joined to the east end of the original house, later removed in a tumbled down condition. I am unable to find dates. The first son was born in 1800; the youngest child, a daughter, in 1821.

"The old original house is more than 200 years old. As the family continued to increase, a one-story house was built a few rods east (called by the family, the little house), for Great-Grandfather Jeremiah and wife, and great-aunt, Huldah. The frame is still standing.

"Jeremiah, the second, was a soldier in the war of 1776, but only reached New London, where he reached distinction as potato baker and kettle washer.

"Grandfather Gamaliel came of Puritan stock; rigid, severe, honest to the last penny; thrifty. Not only tilling successfully the fertile acres of the farm, but in partnership with his father carried on the business of tanning leather and shoe making, often driving a two-horse team to Boston with the product of their trade, taking three days or more to make the trip.

"On his trips to Boston he employed a man of great stature and bravery, to accompany him as a guard and protector against highwaymen, as there were several heavily wooded sections along the way, said to be lurking places for the hold-up gentry. The length Douglass woods particularly were scenes of highway robberies in those days.

"On his return from Boston he usually had several hundred dollars received from his load of leather and shoes.

"Both grandfather and his guard were armed with two large brass barreled flint-lock pistols.

"On one occasion while passing through the Douglass woods, two men came suddenly from the bushes and demanded a halt, and made a grab for the horses' bridles. The driver and guard were on the lookout for such an emergency; their pistols were quickly brought into use. As the would-be robbers saw the glistening of the guns in close contact with their faces, they beat a hasty retreat into the woods, followed by the bullets from the pistols of their intended victims.

"The old shoe maker's shop was one of the joy places of my childhood.

"My father and mother returned to the farm in 1848, the farm then being divided, and the west part being my mother's share, there the years of my childhood and girlhood were passed; happy hays, and vivid are the picture which hang on memory's wall: The large fertile pastures where the cattle were wont to roam, now a white birch forest, impenetrable almost. The long meadow where a score of haymakers labored with hand rake and scythe. The trout brook running leisurely along where many a trout were caught unforbidden. The large back yard with its carpet of green; grape vines, apple trees ladened with lovely fruit; the long bench where rows of glistening pans and pails were dried; the milk house under the big apple tree of early aples, eagerly watched for their ripening. Every old land mark is dear to me. 'For dear to my heart is the home of my childhood.'

"The interior of the old house is practically unchanged; the large roomy kitchen with its huge stone fireplace, the stone oven from which emanated many a Thanksgiving dinner. Two large front rooms facing the house, where many a frolic and old time dance was enjoyed by the young people of the neighborhood, numbering some 20 or more.

"Mr. and Mrs. Walden, the only descendants of the old time neighbors, have recently left the Walden homestead.

"In 1863 my father returned from service in the Civil war, a physical wreck and was obliged to sell the old farm. Since then it has changed owners many times; dilapidation and decay marking every feature.

"In 1929 a New York lady; a teacher and director of art, looking for a quiet summer home away from turmoil, confusion and traffic, saw possibilities there, and bought the better portion of the farm, and at once commenced renovating the house inside and out. A short time ago, Miss Khourie, the owner, extended an invitation to my brother, myself and husband, and an old time friend, to be her guests at a delicious dinner prepared by our hostess and assistant, and served on a rustic table underneath the shade of trees in the yard, amidst an array of beautiful flowers. Every nook and corner was made beautiful by a legion of choice flowers.

"The arrangement of the various plots showed that the woman of art had a directing hand in the arrangement as to the blending of colors and formation of the space occupied.

"Every room in the house was made cheerful and homey with art pictures and the arrangement and order of blending of both modern and ancient articles of furniture and kitchen utensils of a date to compare with the antiquity of the home. The weather-beaten exterior of the house had received coats of white paint which was a surprise I am sure to the old house that had for years been neglected.

The improvements brought great joy to my brother and myself, sole survivors of the fifth generation of that line of Binghams. Almantha Bingham, daughter of Gamaliel, the last of the family born in 1821, died in 1914 at the age of 93.

"While waiting a summons to dinner, I, with brother and an old friend of many years, took a stroll down the old shady lane through which I had often driven the cows to and from the pasture, crossing the sparkling brook, murmuring over its pebbly bed as it wound its way from pool to pool through the meadow, until lost in the deeper waters of the Appoquaug. Ascending the hill beyond, where I had often filled baskets of luscious berries of all kinds in their season—I seated myself on a familiar bouler. Memories; some happy, some sad, filled my soul. Though I wander far away and dwell in palaces, the thoughts and love of my dear old childhood home will ever increase as the evening shadows of life lengthen, and my eyes grow dim."—Mrs. Frances B. Bacon.

QUID NUNC.

COLD WEATHER DISH.

Dear Corner Sisters: Last year my baby boy had a white chinchilla coat, this being too babyish this year but still good. I purchased a ten cent package of navy blue dye and dyed the coat and two tams which were light. Then I took off white buttons and replaced with brass buttons from an old coat of mine. I also purchased an anchor for the sleeve. The coat was 35 cents and he had a new outfit for fall and winter of which he is very proud.

Here is a good recipe for a cold winter day and nothing in the house but potatoes and bacon. This is nourishing for the children: Bring about one-half kettle of water to a boil with salt. Slice two potatoes in, boil till nearly done then grate about four potatoes, mix with one teaspoon salt, 1 egg and enough flour to make real stiff. Spread this mixture on a board or plate and take small spoonfuls at a time and drop in with other potatoes. Cook till tender. Cut bacon in small pieces and fry. Add to the rest. This is a meal itself.

CLUB 1 OPENS SEASON OCT. 8

Dear Corner Members: Club No. 1 will start the season's meetings the second Wednesday in October, the 8th. The October and November meetings will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building as the room we usually have in the chamber of commerce will be occupied these two months only. Please bring food and your dishes as usual and make this year a banner year for attendance and mutual helpfulness and sociability. Everyone come prepared to relate some amusing or interesting incident that came to their notice during the summer.

GREETINGS FROM WOODSIDE

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: As there were two misprints in my last week's letter, I am writing now to correct them. The sampler is dated 1799 and, Ravena, I was syringing ears.

Bee True: I wonder if your last name begins with S and which in another form might be written upon. If so, I know two of your sons. I have enjoyed reading about some of your summer wearing apparel. I like a bathing suit. It is so convenient for climbing a tree to pick cherries or to pick peas when bushes are wet or while weeding. If you doubt it, try it.

Sister Rhody: Shall answer soon. Have had company and have finished my 400 jars of canned goods since July 1st.

ANNONCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Everybody's favorite among the film celebrities has become "Anybody's Woman."

Ruth Chatterton has been "Madame X," "The Laughing Lady," and the Sarah of "Sarah and Son."

As "Anybody's Woman," which opens at Warner's Broadway today, she is co-starred with Clive Brook in a play that is redolent of realism, a play that is drenched with daring drama.

"Anybody's Woman" is the story of the vagrancies of a misfit marriage. Brook plays a wealthy and cultured young lawyer who, disappointed by the faithlessness of the wife who has just divorced him, goes on a prolonged binge in the metropolis.

At a cheap theatrical hotel he meets Ruth Chatterton, a broken-down show girl. During the progress of a wild party in which Brook is insensibly drunk, practical-joker companions manage to have Brook and Ruth married.

Confronted with the reality of the situation the next day, Brook manfully decides to go through with this unbalanced alliance. Before long Ruth finds that she really loves him, since he is the only man who had ever been gentlemanly with her. He, however, is indifferent to her.

But the social elect of Brook's circle forsake him, and Ruth, deciding that her lack of culture is the cause of it all, leaves his home. Brook carries on, not caring whether he ever sees her again or not, when his former wife visits him and proposes that he and she become companions again. Revolted by this project, Brook realizes that Ruth's desertion is eating his heart out. He finds her—and they really fall in love.

Palace Theatre

Always an exponent of versatility, refusing to be "catalogued" as a clothes horse or an emotional actress or any other particular type of screen personality, Gloria Swanson has again registered a surprise by changing from the heavy drama of "The Trespasser" to the opposite extreme of high society in "What a Widow," her newest and greatest picture, opening at the Palace Saturday for a four-day run.

Her choice of a role in sharp contrast to her Marion Donnell in "The Trespasser," was not made without reason, however. In response to inquiries by Joseph P. Kennedy, who sponsored Miss Swanson's appearance in both pictures, major exhibitors and critics almost unanimously agreed that she should do a comedy. In effect they said that following "The Trespasser," which established a high mark in emotional drama, the public would welcome something from her that would provide a laugh—a lot of laughs, in fact. "What a Widow!" is the result.

Miss Swanson's role in "What a Widow!", which was written for her by Josephine Lovett, is that of a vivacious New England widow who, having become quite subdued through marriage to her former guardian, an invalid and dour capitalist many years her senior, decides that she wants to sing and dance and be gay. Released from boredom, she waits only long enough to satisfy the conventions of widowhood before dashing off to Paris in search of adventure.

On shipboard the widow Tam meets a young attorney, a dancer and the sophisticates of two continents. She pursues her quest of romance so vigorously that it is not long before she finds herself involved in a tangle of complications which become increasingly difficult and increasingly amusing as the story unfolds.

Miss Lovett, the authoress, turned out the highly successful "Dancing Daughters" for Joan Crawford and many other outstanding original stories for the screen, and James Gleason and James Seymour contributed dialogue to the picture.

Miss Swanson's supporting cast includes Owen Moore, as the attorney; Lew Cody as the dancer, and Margaret Livingston as Cody's dancing partner and wife; Gregory Gaye, Herbert Braggiotti, Adrienne D'Ambricourt, Nella Walker, Daphne Pollard and William Holden.

Slater Hall Concert Series

Four concerts, bringing to Norwich musical artists of outstanding rank, will be offered in the Slater hall series for this fall and winter. If present plans are successful the series will open Friday, Nov. 7, with the coming of Jascha Heifetz, master violinist. Norwich music lovers with others everywhere have watched with great interest in recent years the almost phenomenal rise of this young violinist to his present position of first rank with such as Fritz Kreisler, have heard him in radio recital and by records in their homes, but have never before had the opportunity to hear him in person in our own Slater hall. One of the first subscribers to this course gave his name for the list with the remark, "Of course I wish to subscribe. Why, the first concert alone will be worth the price of the entire series." But far above any monetary value will be the privilege of hearing this one who, of all the pupils of the late world-famous violin master, Leopold Auer, has probably become the most outstanding and who was chosen by the master's widow to play, accompanied by Josef Hofmann, at the funeral service of her husband a few weeks ago in New York city.

The attraction of the proposed course is not alone in the first number, however. Following Heifetz, there will be a concert on Friday, Dec. 5, by George Meader, distinguished American tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Co., another on Wednesday, Jan. 14, by the New York String quartette, and the fourth of the series, on Friday, Feb. 13, by Katharine Meisle, leading contralto of the Chicago Opera Co.

Owing to the fact that the financing of such courses for Norwich is becoming increasingly difficult, because of the constant rise in the artists' charges and the small hall in which the expenses must be met, a new plan of promotion has been inaugurated this year. By this plan a restricted area has been reserved for a limited number of guarantors at $10 a seat, these friends of music having signified their desire to help in this way when a preliminary campaign was held, then open to all, last May. The campaign for the regular subscribers' seats, at $6 each, the same price as heretofore, is now being held, however, and the successful issue of the series depends upon the result of this appeal.

It is felt that the course as planned, with the violinist, tenor, string quartette and contralto, makes a well-balanced winter's program, covering four months, and pledges for the same may be sent to Archibald Mitchell, 4th or Miss Ruth A. Hamilton. See advertisement.

STOCK PRICES RALLIED AT OPENING, BUT MET WITH PROFIT TAKING AT CLOSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—[illegible] stock market rallied with [illegible] day in the dullest trading [illegible] tember 23.

Gains averaged 1.9 points, [illegible] was exactly the extent of [illegible] net decline; however, [illegible] were considerably below the [illegible] as the result of late [illegible] totaled 2,053,280 shares.

The rise in wheat amounted [illegible] 2 cents a bushel, making the [illegible] advance from the year's extreme lows about 7 cents. Buying was prompted by reports that Russian offerings were drying up and that the soviet's current stocks were little more than sufficient to care for its home consumption. Corn, with an advance of 1 3-8 to 11 7-8 cents, was lifted several cents above the Monday lows. In the case of the December [illegible] gain from early in the week [illegible] cents. Cotton, on the other hand, ruled heavy and lost 6 to [illegible] points net.

Sentiment in stock market circles seemed a trifle more sanguine. Commission houses were encouraged by the weekly and monthly loan figures and several expressed the opinion that President Hoover's Cleveland address would help dispel pessimism, permitting a more reasonable appraisal of the business situation.

Reviewing the week in trade, Bradstreet's said the period as a whole, "hardly measured up to anticipations, based on the arrival of real shopping weather," adding that September, although showing undoubted gains over July and August, "left something to be desired in the way of definite seasonal trade and industrial advancement." Dun's was of the opinion that failure of commodity prices to reach the stabilization point, the unsettlement of the stock market and the resultant confusion of sentiment were "among the major elements acting as barriers to business progress."

Stocks rallied from the opening and met with only a couple of setbacks. There was a dip around noon coincident with selling of Southern Railway and the mail order shares, and then the reaction at the close, accompanied by weakness in some of the motion picture shares, but by the beginning of the last hour the market was generally 2 to 3 points higher. U. S. Steel edged across 160 and American Can topped 125 before traders began to play safe and take profits. The realizing reduced many of the gains to a point or slightly more.

Montgomery Ward broke to 26 5-8, a new low for the present stock, but closed nearly a point above the bottom. Southern Railway tumbled more than 3 to 74 1-4, the lowest since 1924, and held its loss, selling of both was attributed to nervousness over dividend prospects. The railroad company plans to maintain its present rate this year, so that fears in that direction are for 1931. Montgomery Ward's directors meet late this month. Sears Roebuck broke 2 points, but recovered most of the decline.

Allied Chemical, Macy, Case and American Tobacco, were strong, closing 4 points higher. Eastman Kodak, American Power and Light and Johns Manville, were up 3 and National Biscuit, Gillette, Houston Oil, Delaware and Hudson, Gillette, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Woolworth, and International Harvester, [illegible] Shares retaining from 1 to 1 1-2 of their extreme gains included U. S. Steel, Borden, Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, American Can and American Telephone. Montgomery Ward's net loss was 1 5-8 and Sears Roebuck's 1-2. Fox Film slumped 2 1-2 and Loew's eased fractionally.

A majority of the European exchange rates showed small advances in rather dull demand.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—The appearance of several large pieces of new financing had a moderating influence upon the pace of the bond market today. While the volume of business was fairly large, there was a noticeable slackening in the rate at which bonds moved forward and many issues held slightly under their best prices of the year.

The quiet that reigned in the domestic section was attributed to the public sale of approximately $36,000,000 worth of bonds of American corporations, the largest portion being offered by utilities. This tended to divert some of the demand for investment issues from the listed market. Offerings for the week totaled $70,636,000 as compared to $125,381,000 last week.

The list of bonds at new highs for the year, consequently, was rather slim. It included American Telephone debenture 5s, Canadian National 5s of 1954 and 1969, and the 4 1-2s of 1968, Atchison stamped 4s, Carthage and Adirondack 4s, Chicago and Northwestern general 3 1-2s, LaClede Gas Light 5s, Brooklyn Union Electric first 5s, Nassau Electric 4s, Pittsburgh and West Virginia 4 1-2s, B, and Wabash Terminal 4s, the latter up 3 1-2 points.

Good buying developed and Chesapeake corporation 5s, Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1-2s, Chile Copper 5s, Houston Oil 5 1-2s, New Orleans Public Service 5s B, North American Edison 5s A, Missouri Pacific 5s F, '77 and New York Central 4s, were among the high grade issues that were slightly lower.

The industrial group harbored several weak spots liquidation continuing in some oil, sugar and rubber company issues. Cespedes Sugar 7 1-2s slumped nearly 5 and Francisco Sugar 7 1-2s reacted 1 1-2. B. F. Goodrich 6 1-2s slid 2 7-8 to a new 1930 low. U. S. Rubber 5s sold off 2 points. Shell Union 5s of 1947 reached a new year's bottom on a decline of more than a point. Richfield 6s recovered 2 points from its minimum price.

Several foreign bonds that have plumbed the depths in recent sessions swung back sharply. Argentine 6s of June 1958, soared 3 1-4 points. Bolivian 7s rallied 3; Chile 7s, 3 1-4 and Peruvian first and second 6s, 1 to 2 points. German issues remained spotty. Italian governments and municipals were well bought. Sharp declines of 5 points or more carried Hungary municipal 7s and Hamburg State 6s to new 1930 lows.

U. S. government issues maintained their upward trend on a reduced turnover. Liberty 4th 4 1-4s, were the most active and slightly higher. Liberty 3 1-2s equalled their high of the year at 101 7-32nds.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 3—(AP)—Buying on a big scale took place in wheat future delivery contracts today, and lifted all grain values much higher. A notable stimulating influence was a statement from a government sponsored corporation that in view of extreme shortage of corn and pasturage an advance in grain prices was to be expected. Besides, unofficial estimates were current that feedstuff losses other than corn have reached a staggering amount, and that the direct drought loss in corn coupled with the corn equivalent of hay and sorghum decreases make an estimated aggregate of 933,000,000 bushels.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled but at nearly the day's top level, 1 7-8@2 1-8c per bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 5-8@ 2c up, oats 1c@1 1-4c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 20c.

Provisions although inclined to sag early owing to lack of buyers rose later with grain and hogs.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—Futures closed barely steady, 6 to 14 points lower; spot quiet; middling 10.50.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(AP)—The curb market worked moderately higher as the volume of trading diminished further today, total sales aggregating 478,000 shares.

Oils continued to rally, and several of the utility, natural gas, and investment trust issues reflected fresh operations for the rise. Week end profit-taking whittled down some of the gains in the final dealings.

Electric Bond and Share was active and strong, reflecting the June 30 statement, showing a moderate gain in earnings, and an increase in the holdings of the stocks of client companies. The stock sold up 2 1-2 points to 69 1-2, and closed at 68 7-8. United Light A, was a strong feature, rising 4 points, and closing near the top. American Gas and Electric and Middle West Utilities, were also in good demand.

In the oil and natural gas issues, Arkansas was firm, reflecting announcement of the acquisition of of Louisiana Oil for its account by H. L. Doherty and Company. Cities Service rose a fraction, getting above 27. United Gas, Duquesne, and Missouri Kansas Pipe Line, were active and firm. Gulf Oil shot up more than 3 points. Cosden rallied more than 2, but the preferred, infrequently traded, appeared on the tape at 15 1-2, a drop of 36 1-2 points since it last sold.

Industrials were less active, but inclined to work higher. Trading was not yet resumed in the Rainbow Luminous shares, after suspension in connection with the Piperno failure. Empire Fire Insurance, in which the firm acted as specialist, rallied 2 points. Deere, Technicolor, Libbey McNeil and U. S. Gypsum, sold up about 2 points each.

A feature of the investment trusts was strength of Blue Ridge preferred, which sold up more than 2 points. The Shenandoah and Goldman Sachs issues were higher, Prince and Whitely and Prudential Investors, were also firm.

A DOMESTIC COMEDY IN WHICH A MODERN MOTHER-IN-LAW DOES HER BIT TO REUNITE THE WARRING COUPLE

“THIS is the end!”

There was indignation in his tone and anger in his steel-blue eyes, but Bob Mearns didn't shout. He prided himself on his self-control; he towered, dignified, over his little wife, huddled in a chair like a naughty child.

Estelle wasn't crying; she had cried too often before. Sometimes she had smiled and teased, but the finality of his tone assured her that nothing would be of any avail now. Bob meant what he said. She just stared at him with her big wistful brown eyes.

“I've warned you again and again,” he went on. “I told you when you signed for that piano that it was the last thing I'd pay for on installments!”

“We've had lots of fun out of that piano.”

“Fun! That's all you think of! Do you suppose a pauper's grave would be fun?”

“As much fun as any grave,” she replied.

“Can't you ever be serious?” he demanded scornfully. “Where would you and your father have been if I hadn't dug you out of your debts?”

“That's not fair!” she exclaimed, loyal always to that beloved, irresponsible parent who had died worse than penniless. “Father had had luck. * * * But you have so much money, Bob! You could easily pay the installments on that car out of that two thousand you just made.”

“That car's going back to the company!” he thundered. “Fortunately, Myers is a friend of mine, and he'll take it back. And this apartment's to let! I've told you—I'm through!”

“Very well.” She rose languidly. “I suppose I might as well pack.”

“Stay here till you find a boarding house,” he offered, with what he considered the correct generosity. “I'll return you your $500—and—you are to take whatever of this stuff you want. I'll sell the rest. I'm clearing out myself now.”

“Where are you going?” she asked.

“I'm going over to live with mother, of course.”

He would, Estelle thought. It would be the cheapest thing he could do.

“How soon?” she continued. She had entertained the idea of going there herself.

“Tonight—after work. But I don't see how that can possibly interest you. If you need to write to me, you can always be sure mail will reach me at the office.”

He strutted over to the closet and took out his coat. How he loved play-acting! If only he had a more appreciative audience! He was making a mistake to go to his mother, unless he adopted a different manner.

He put on his coat and stopped a minute at the table while he wrote out a check. Estelle waited tensely, conscious even at this last moment that if he held out his arms the situation might still be saved. For when he gave in to his emotions, he was a different man. All that was mean and petty and self-righteous would be swept away. At such times he would kiss her almost humbly, adoring the woman who was a child only where pleasure and money were concerned.

But he did not allow himself to hesitate; he turned quickly and fled. A moment later she heard the engine of the new car start in the street below, and thus even the cause of their quarrel was removed.

THERE was no time for tears, for already Estelle had a plan. She meant to go to Bob's mother before he did.

She went about from room to room, putting things away, covering the furniture with slip covers, leaving everything in perfect order. She had always been an excellent housekeeper. Living with her father, taking care of him when every penny counted, she had acquired the art of homemaking. In their more affluent days there had been French or Italian cooks, and Estelle had mastered their secrets. She knew how to buy frugally, yet, with a rare knowledge of seasoning and saucemaking, she could concoct dishes fit for an epicure.

The housekeeping allowance Bob gave her was always ample for her needs. She never overspent it. It was only in the face of big sums that she was overwhelmed. Bob made so much money. That $500 he had given her was more than she had ever possessed in her life. No wonder she wanted to do something big with it—buy a car that would last years and years, and be no end of fun! True—$500 was only the down payment, but wouldn't the rest come easily enough? She was sure Bob had oodles and oodles in the bank.

But, of course, she had been mistaken. It was her own fault; she ought to have remembered about the phonograph—and the piano. Bob had said that a radio supplied enough music for a couple just starting in life, and she had gone right out and put her Christmas check of $35 into the first installment on a phonograph.

She walked over to the machine and closed it lovingly. What fun it had been! Last winter, whenever they were alone, she would play orchestral numbers, and she and Bob would sit in front of the fire, her head on his shoulder. The music had been a revelation to Bob. He wasn't acquainted with anything except jazz. Then she would change the record for a dreamy waltz, and he would take her in his arms and dance.

But she mustn't brood! She must summon her courage and call Mrs. Mearns on the telephone.

Not that she expected Bob's mother to help her by taking sides against her own son. She was a curiously aloof woman, as different from the usual prying mother-in-law as the modern city dweller is from the small-town neighbor. She was a widow of 50, comfortably fixed, living with only a maid in the most up-to-date apartment house in the city. Her time and her interests were completely absorbed in club affairs; she loved her children and their wives, but she kept them detached from her daily life.

It wasn't exactly her sympathy Estelle wanted; it was real, useful advice. There was no one else to whom she could go; no one to tell her what to do. And, after the $500 was spent, she knew no way of earning her living except as somebody's cook.

True to form, Mrs. Mearns asked no questions over the telephone, but invited the girl to lunch.

Engaging a room at the Y. W. C. A. and leaving her suitcases, Estelle dismissed her taxi and walked to her mother-in-law's. The latter greeted her cordially, but in a casual manner that expressed no surprise at the sudden visit.

“MOTHER,” she began, as soon as the maid had served the soup, “Bob has put me out. I have been bad again.” She tried to speak calmly.

“Bad?” Mrs. Mearns repressed a smile.

“Yes. Extravagant. Carried away by another alluring installment plan. And you know how Bob hates installments.”

“So did his father,” remarked Mrs. Mearns. “Or rather—charge accounts. We didn't have any installment plans then. * * * What have you bought?”

“A car. Bob gave me a check for $500, from a $2500 commission he earned, and I went right out and used it for the down payment on a car. And—he says it's the end.”

Mrs. Mearns nodded.

“And you wouldn't give the car up?”

“Oh, yes—it wasn't a question of that. But Bob says I'd do it again. And he warned me when I bought the piano the same way. It's—all my fault, I'm just not responsible.”

She choked on the soup.

“My poor child!” exclaimed Mrs. Mearns.

“I don't know what to do!”

“Of course you don't. But you can stay here, dear—at least temporarily. I have a guest room, but unfortunately I'll need it over the week end. The president of a Pittsburgh club is coming on for a meeting.”

“I couldn't stay here, anyway,” answered Estelle. “Because Bob is coming back here to live.”

“Bob?” Mrs. Mearns frowned. “No, I can't let him do that,” she announced slowly. “It wouldn't do. I need my guest room for out-of-town friends. * * * No, I am used to my own way of living, and I am not going to change now.”

Estelle was amazed; it had never occurred to her that her mother-in-law would not fall in with Bob's plan. This was going to be pretty hard on him, for he wasn't a clubman and he hated hotels. But wasn't it decent of Mrs. Mearns to refuse to take sides?

“So you might as well stay here for a few days,” continued the older woman, “while we find you something to do.”

“But I can't do anything!” sobbed Estelle hopelessly. “That's just the trouble—I'm not trained for a thing! I haven't even a regulation high school education!”

“Don't worry, dear—we'll find something,” replied the other, reassuringly. “At least you can study—”

“I'll have to be somebody's cook,” Estelle blurted out. “That's the only thing I know anything about!”

Mrs. Mearns' face lighted up with inspiration.

“Of course! The very thing! Why, I know of a position right now!”

The idea didn't sound pleasant to Estelle, but she waited, trustingly.

“One of the clubs I belong to—the Modern Club—is in need of a tearoom director. It's really a very nice position—we call her the ‘hostess,’ and it commands quite a good salary. Besides there is an attractive apartment for her right in the building.”

“Oh!” cried the girl in relief. “Do you really think I could get it? A chance to be useful—and independent!”

“I'm almost certain. You see, I'm chairman of that committee and I've been looking for some one. We'll go over and talk to the president this afternoon. Why, the club's in luck—”

THE telephone interrupted her; a moment later the maid came with the message that Mr. Robert Mearns was on the wire.

Estelle held her breath while her mother-in-law took the instrument. It was close enough to hear what she said.

“Bob? Yes—this is mother—”

Was it possible that Mrs. Mearns winked at Estelle?

“Oh, I'm so sorry,” she said, evidently in reply to his explanation for calling. “But I'm afraid you can't come here, dear, for I have a guest—and you know how tiny my apartment is.”

“What a good sport she is!” thought Estelle. “She's not going to tell on me!”

“No, I wouldn't be home to dinner. It's my maid's night out, and I am taking my guest downtown.”

“Yes, by all means, come to see me tomorrow afternoon. I'll make it a point to be alone. I'd like to help you, dear—don't feel that I'm not sympathetic, but I believe, after all, it's best for young people to solve their own problems. Till tomorrow then—good-by.”

She was smiling to herself as she replaced the receiver.

“Give him time to cool off, Estelle,” she remarked. “He's pretty hot now.”

“I know, but he's serious, too,” replied the girl gravely. “You see, it isn't a first offense and he's been lenient before. No—I'm afraid Bob has stood my ways as long as he can.”

ESTELLE was right; Bob was deadly in earnest this time. He felt like a martyr—wronged by his wife and neglected by his mother. He put in a tiresome evening at the movies and, having no club, he decided to go home to sleep. There was no use of paying a hotel bill, with the apartment right there waiting for him.

He wouldn't admit it even to himself, but he entered expectantly looking for Estelle and planning in just what manner he would meet her. He had told her she could stay; perhaps she had been at home all day, crying. If she was sincerely humble and begged very hard perhaps he could take her back. That meal at the restaurant had been undeniably poor, even if it did cost $1.25.

He found the apartment empty and lifeless—almost ghostlike in its white coverings. Mean trick for her to play on him, he thought. Just because she wouldn't use it herself, she had to fix it so it wasn't habitable!

Nevertheless, he pulled out some blankets and made a bed for himself. Silly to go out at this time of night and hunt for a room! He'd phone to the laundress tomorrow and get her to come over and put the place in shape. Might as well go on living there till the lease expired. Then, maybe his mother would relent.

He waited until late the following afternoon to go over to see her, in the hope that she would ask him to dinner. But he knew when she rang for tea that it was her polite way of telling him that he wasn't expected to stay.

But he had no intention of hurrying with the story. He told her the whole history, even going back to the time when he met Estelle, living in that studio with her father, head over heels in debt. How grateful she had seemed at the time when he paid off everything and sent her father to the hospital—but how she hated to be reminded of that now! And then the apartment and its furnishings!

“Why, you can't imagine what highflown ideas she had, mother!” he exclaimed. “And no notion of cost! Just because she liked a chair or a rug, we had to get it! And I was fool enough to humor her. I thought once I got the place finished, she'd be satisfied. But was she? Not by a long shot!”

“Still, you've been pretty successful, haven't you, dear?” his mother reminded him. “It wasn't as if you couldn't afford it?”

“I couldn't afford it if I meant to follow my scheme of buying a certain amount of securities every year. Besides, it was the principle of the thing. I hate installments! I want to pay for a thing when I get it. But you haven't heard me out, mother. Estelle kept right on—a phonograph, a piano, and now a car! Of all things, a car! And an expensive one at that. Of course, when I got ready, I meant to buy one myself, but I don't happen to be ready. I told Estelle it was the end of things for us. No man could keep up with a gold-digger like that!”

“I think you're mistaken, dear,” Mrs. Mearns said quietly. “Estelle may be foolish—of course, she's never been trained to use money—but she isn't a gold-digger as you say. It's never things for herself that she wants, is it—like fur coats or jewelry? Always something you can share—to make your life together happier. Estelle, in spite of her difficulties, has always been a happy little thing.”

“Irresponsible is a better word.”

“No, that's not true. As far as her part is concerned—her job of housekeeping, and with her it's really homemaking—isn't she efficient?”

“Oh, yes, she's a darned good cook, if that's what you mean.”

“And a charming hostess and a pleasant companion?”

“Say, mother, do you like Estelle better than me?” he demanded in a hurt tone. “I suppose you think it's all my fault. But it's not! I wonder what father would have done if you had been like Estelle!”

“Just what you did, probably,” she agreed immediately. “But in my day women couldn't charge things or even spend money. Our husbands paid all the bills and we hadn't anything to say about it. I never thought much about it then, but when your father died, I was amazed to find he left so much—when we denied ourselves so many luxuries all our young married life. It was a mistake. It's much better nowadays, when husbands make partners of their wives.”

“Implying I don't!” He picked up his hat with wounded dignity.

“I don't think you tried very hard, Bob. It's always kinder to make out a budget with your wife than to keep her in the dark about your circumstances and then every once in a while in a lordly way hand her a present of a check.”

He shrugged his shoulders.

“Maybe you're right, mother, but not in Estelle's case. It's too late now, anyway. We've parted for good.” He gritted his teeth. “But I'm not going to pay alimony—I'll fight it tooth and nail!”

“I don't think you'll have to,” observed Mrs. Mearns calmly. “Estelle won't need it. I've succeeded in getting her a position as hostess at one of my clubs.”

His eyes narrowed in understanding.

“Then she came tattling to you all about it!” he exclaimed in disgust. “No wonder you sided with her! She told you I was a brute, and all that?”

“Estelle didn't say one unkind thing about you, Bob,” she replied firmly. “You could learn a lot from her.”

“Which I don't intend to do.”

Icily he kissed his mother good-by.

HE WENT back to the apartment and, with the help of the laundress, managed to keep on living there. But it was no longer a home. Daily he expected Estelle to return, to say again that she was sorry and to promise humbly to reform.

But as the weeks passed, it seemed less and less likely that she would do any such thing. His mother, with whom he dined every Wednesday, assured him that his wife was making a great success of her work.

He couldn't bring himself to invite her to return. It would be acknowledging defeat, when he knew he had been right from the first. Right, yes; but sometimes he wondered whether he had been as wise as he thought.

He wished his mother would do something to bring them together. Her strict policy of noninterference was getting on his nerves. From her reports, Estelle was perfectly contented. She didn't even want a divorce.

Week ends were hardest for Bob—especially Sundays. He would sleep as late as possible, then go out somewhere and eat a combined breakfast and lunch. But how gloomy, how lonely it was! He hated to think he was like those other woebegone, detached men he saw everywhere, eating their solitary meals in silence. His friends, somehow, had dropped out of the picture; nobody invited him anywhere since the separation. Probably, he thought bitterly, they were entertaining Estelle.

It was mean of his own mother not to want him with her on Sundays. She always made the excuse of having some guest at the apartment or if she were alone, she told him that the maid would be out. She certainly hadn't done much to make him comfortable and happy! It wouldn't hurt her a bit to make things more pleasant for him. Suddenly he decided to go see her anyhow, even if she didn't invite him. She could hardly put him out.

So the following Sunday, a disagreeable day in March when everybody wanted to be indoors, he dropped in about noon.

“Hello, mother!” he said gayly, when she came to the door. “Thought I'd accept your pressing invitation to dinner!”

“What invitation?” she inquired dubiously.

He laughed.

“Don't be so close, mother—invite me in! And don't say you have a guest, because even if you have, I promise not to be any bother. I won't interrupt your club gossip.”

“It isn't that * * *” She hesitated. “But come in—I'll see * * *”

She suddenly had one of her inspirations.

“It's the cook,” she explained as they entered her small living room. “She's very temperamental about unexpected guests. But sit down, I'll consult her.”

Mrs. Mearns disappeared into the kitchen and, as Bob heard suppressed giggling, he guessed it was all right. Funny how well his mother got on with everybody—even temperamental cooks—and—Estelle!

DELICIOUS odors drifted in from the other end of the apartment and Bob settled himself comfortably in the easy-chair, delighted that he had come. Mrs. Mearns, however, was apologetic when she returned.

“You can stay, Bob, but I'm afraid you won't like the dinner. It's chicken, and I remember how you used to detest it.”

The young man sighed. Every restaurant he went to seemed to specialize in chicken dinners.

“That isn't chicken I smell,” he objected.

“Maybe it's the soup. Come in now—and try it. Something Italian—puree of chestnuts.”

He followed eagerly. There was something familiar about that odor.

“Estelle used to make this!” he cried triumphantly, after the first spoonful. “A whiz, isn't it?”

“Yes, it's her recipe,” agreed his mother. “I'm glad you like it.”

“Like it! I could make a meal of it! Can I have another cup, so long as the rest of the dinner's chicken?”

“I'm sorry, dear, there isn't any more. * * * You'll have to try to eat some of the chicken.”

Bob started to make the face he used to as a child when anything displeased him, but remembering that he was a self-invited guest, he smiled instead.

Mrs. Mearns rose, explaining that it was necessary for her to wait on the table herself today. Bob offered his services immediately, but was abruptly refused. The cook was too temperamental to allow strangers in her kitchen.

But when Mrs. Mearns brought in the chicken it didn't look like chicken at all. It was in a deep, transparent dish, covered with a rich brown sauce, wholly unlike the traditional gravy.

“That's what I smelled!” exclaimed Bob exultantly. “It isn't chicken, is it, mother? You were kidding me—trying to get rid of me, I bet!”

“I wasn't!” protested his mother. “It is chicken. Taste it!”

“It's ‘Holland chicken’!” he cried. “I know, for Estelle used to make it. Got ham and onions and peppers and all sorts of stuff in it! I've asked for it in every hotel in the city and nobody ever heard of it.”

“Chicken Hollandaise, dear,” corrected his mother, smiling. “No wonder they didn't know what you were talking about.”

Bob said nothing more; he just gave his whole-hearted attention to eating. He took a second and a third helping; he acted like a man who had been starved. As, indeed, he was—starved for the kind of cooking with which Estelle had spoiled him.

He had eaten so much that he couldn't touch the peach dumpling which his mother brought in for dessert, though he said he knew how much he was missing.

He lighted his pipe in perfect contentment.

“Mother,” he said finally, as she sipped her coffee, “you just don't realize how I hate restaurants. If I could only come here for meals—”

Mrs. Mearns shut her lips tightly.

“It really wouldn't put you out any,” he continued. “Take today for instance—”

“It's out of the question, Bob.”

“But, mother, will you please tell me why?”

“I don't want to be tied down when it's unnecessary. If you were ill or had no home it would be different. Now, please don't say any more about it.”

He was silent; he knew her well enough to realize that she meant what she said. He must think of something else. If he only had that cook! Why, then he wouldn't mind so much living alone.

It was an idea, and there could be no harm in suggesting it.

“Then, mother,” he said after a pause, “would you let me have your cook? You could so easily get another one—servants always did love to work for you!”

SHE regarded him in amusement, not knowing how to reply.

“Temperament and everything,” he continued, taking her silence hopefully. “I'd cater to her like a pet poodle and pay her anything she wants!”

“I'm afraid she'd be too expensive for you, Bob.”

“But I'm not poor, mother. I can afford it—better than doctor's bills, I tell you, my digestion's getting terrible!”

“Really?” she inquired lightly. “You don't eat like a sick man. But a cook like this is a luxury—and in your circumstances—”

“What makes you think I'm poor?” he demanded irritably. “As a matter of fact, I'm coining money. And I don't spend much—”

“You couldn't afford a car for your wife,” Mrs. Mearns reminded him slyly.

“Oh hang the car! I didn't want a car—and I want that cook! Will you ask her for me—or shall I go myself?”

His mother rose reluctantly.

“How much will you pay her?”

“Whatever you think is right.”

“And you'll treat her considerately?”

“Certainly.”

He had a tense moment of waiting while Mrs. Mearns disappeared behind the swinging door. But she returned almost immediately.

“She wants to know if you'll buy her a car to do her errands with. You see, I told her that you liked unusual dishes and she won't always be able to find the necessary ingredients at the local markets.”

“Then,” announced Mrs. Mearns, “you can step out into the kitchen and let her look you over. If she likes you, she says she will come for nothing.”

“For nothing?”

Then the truth dawned upon him. The cook was Estelle, of course! No one else could make such marvelous things exactly to his own taste.

He darted into the kitchen and found her stuffing her gingham apron into her mouth to keep from laughing out loud. Without wasting any words he picked her up in his arms and carried her into the dining room.

“So this is why I was never invited here on Sundays!” he cried, laughing in spite of himself at her cleverness in deceiving him. “As soon as I put you down, young lady,” he added, “I'm going to give you a spanking!”

“Then,” replied Estelle pertly, winding her arms more tightly about his neck, “I don't believe I'll ever get down!”

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(P)—After last week's small decrease, the insolvency record for the current week shows more marked improvement, R. G. Dun and company reports. The number of failures declined this week to 447 from 488 reported last week. Compared with the 396 defaults reported a year ago, however, this week's figures disclose a considerable increase.

Approximate deliveries of raw silk to American mills in September amounted to 55,649 bales, the Silk Association of America reports. Stocks in storage October 1, as reported by the principal warehouses in New York city and Hoboken, N. J., were 47,621 bales, compared with 44,978 bales September 1. Imports during September totaled 58,892 bales.

MONEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—(P)—Call money steady; 2 per cent all day. Time loans easy; 30 days, 1 1-2 at 2; 60 days, 2 at 2 1-4; 90 days, 2 1-4 at 2 1-2; 4-6 months 2 1-2 at 2 3-4. Prime commercial paper, 2 3-4 at 3. Bankers' acceptances, unchanged.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—(P)—Treasury receipts for October 1 were $6,415,846.54; expenditures $7,766,407.70; balance $329,927,833.12.

NEW LONDON TO OBSERVE NAVY DAY, OCT. 27, COMDR. C. M. ELDER ANNOUNCES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 3—Navy day will be observed here Oct. 27, announcement to this effect having been made today by Comd. C. M. Elder, executive officer at the submarine base. The program to be followed has not been formulated yet, but will be within a few days when the nature of the observance will be made known. A part of the program will be the receiving of visitors at the base and they will be transported to and from the municipal pier by navy and coast guard launches.

Clarence McNeil, 20 Farnsworth street, reported to the police this afternoon that a bicycle thief had stolen his cycle from the rear of the A. & P. store on Winthrop street.

The street department is making repairs to the highways about the city. The corner of State and Main streets has been one of the spots that has needed attention for a long time. Pedestrians in crossing the highway have stumbled on the tracks. Laborers have now put blue stone and tar where the depression existed in order to level off the highway. The same repairs have been made along the trolley tracks on Main street and where the car tracks are higher than the street surface.

Henry Chudleigh, Oakdale and William Mills, 39 Converse place, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Prentis have returned home after having spent a week in Bermuda.

FUNERAL

Mrs. James W. Ceil

The funeral of Mrs. Viola M. Ceil, wife of James W. Ceil, was held this morning at 10 o'clock at her residence, 270 Crystal avenue, the services being conducted by Rev. George R Atha, pastor of Groton Heights Baptist church. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Wm. C. Knowles

Mrs. Mary E. Knowles, 72, widow of William C. Knowles, formerly of Groton, died this morning at Norwich State hospital, where she had been a patient several months. She is survived by a son, Joseph Maine, 32 Elderkin avenue, Groton and by a sister, Mrs. Hattie Hazler, also of Groton.

Mrs. Thomas C. Whipple

Mrs. Lillian P. Whipple, 60, wife of Thomas C. Whipple, died today at her home on Walker hill, Groton. Besides her husband, Mrs. Whipple is survived by four sons, Philip T., Francis H., John E., and Alma T. Whipple and by two daughters, Mrs. Christine Crandall and Mrs. Flora Simmons, all of Groton. Two brothers, Walter E. Phillips, of Norwich and Arthur Phillips, of Independence, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. Senella Whipple, of Groton, also survive. Mrs. Whipple was born in Ledyard, May 3, 1870, the daughter of Joseph S. and Abiah Phillips.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of Edwin Rolfe, 159 Howard street; John W. Flynn, 19 Lewis street and Leonard R. Hargrove, 85 Tenth street. The commissioner ordered the suspension of the licenses of Louis C. Frenzel and Louis J. Scappin, of the submarine base.

Westerly Boy Missing

Charles Hill, Westerly, has requested the New London police to maintain a lookout for his son, who ran away from home yesterday and who, it is believed, will come to this city. The youth is described as being 15, about five feet, five inches in height, light complexion, blue eyes and stocky build. When the boy left home he wore a gray suit, but no hat, and carried two suit cases.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Conway of Colt street, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Rose Conway, to Manuel B. Perry, of Oakdale.

The meeting of the auxiliary to Murphy-Rathbun post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, was held last night and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Ada J. Harvey; senior vice president, Mrs. Katherine Tinker; junior vice president, Mrs. Leah Shaperow; chaplain, Mrs. Maude Green; treasurer, Mrs. Viola Forbes. The officers will be installed next month.

Catherine E. May has sold a house and lot on Vauxhall street to William H. and Annie C. Brooks.

According to deeds filed for record today in the office of the city clerk Nick Haleftiras has transferred title in property at 48 Reed street to Willis Waterman and the latter has transferred title in the same realty to Catherine Haleftiras.

Joseph Du Trumble and Frank Lakowsky, youths and strangers in the city, who were arrested Wednesday night charged with being suspicious persons, were released today and were advised to leave the city. The pair was arrested on Main street by Patrolman Dennis Murphy following a telephone message having been received at police headquarters that the youths were prowling in yards of residences on Federal street. The police could not prove that Du Trumble and Lakowsky were the prowlers and neither could any act of criminality be fastened upon them, so they were discharged.

Vernon H. Walker, 285 Montauk avenue, last night made a complaint against Russell B. Starkweather, employed in a dining car and residing at the Y. M. C. A., alleging evasion of responsibility and requested that Starkweather be arrested. Walker said that he was driving his automobile on Williams street and when the car operated by Starkweather, hit the former auto, Starkweather speeded away instead of stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage occasioned.

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Labensky, of Federal street, left today by motor for Baltimore, where the physician will engage in brief professional duty at Johns Hopkins hospital before returning home. Dr. and Mrs. Labensky will visit in the south before arriving back in New London.

Patrolman and Mrs. William J. Riordan, of Linden street and Patrolman and Mrs. Edward H. Riordan, of Colt street, left this morning for Washington, D. C., where they will visit Mrs. Albert Pearson, sister of the patrolmen.

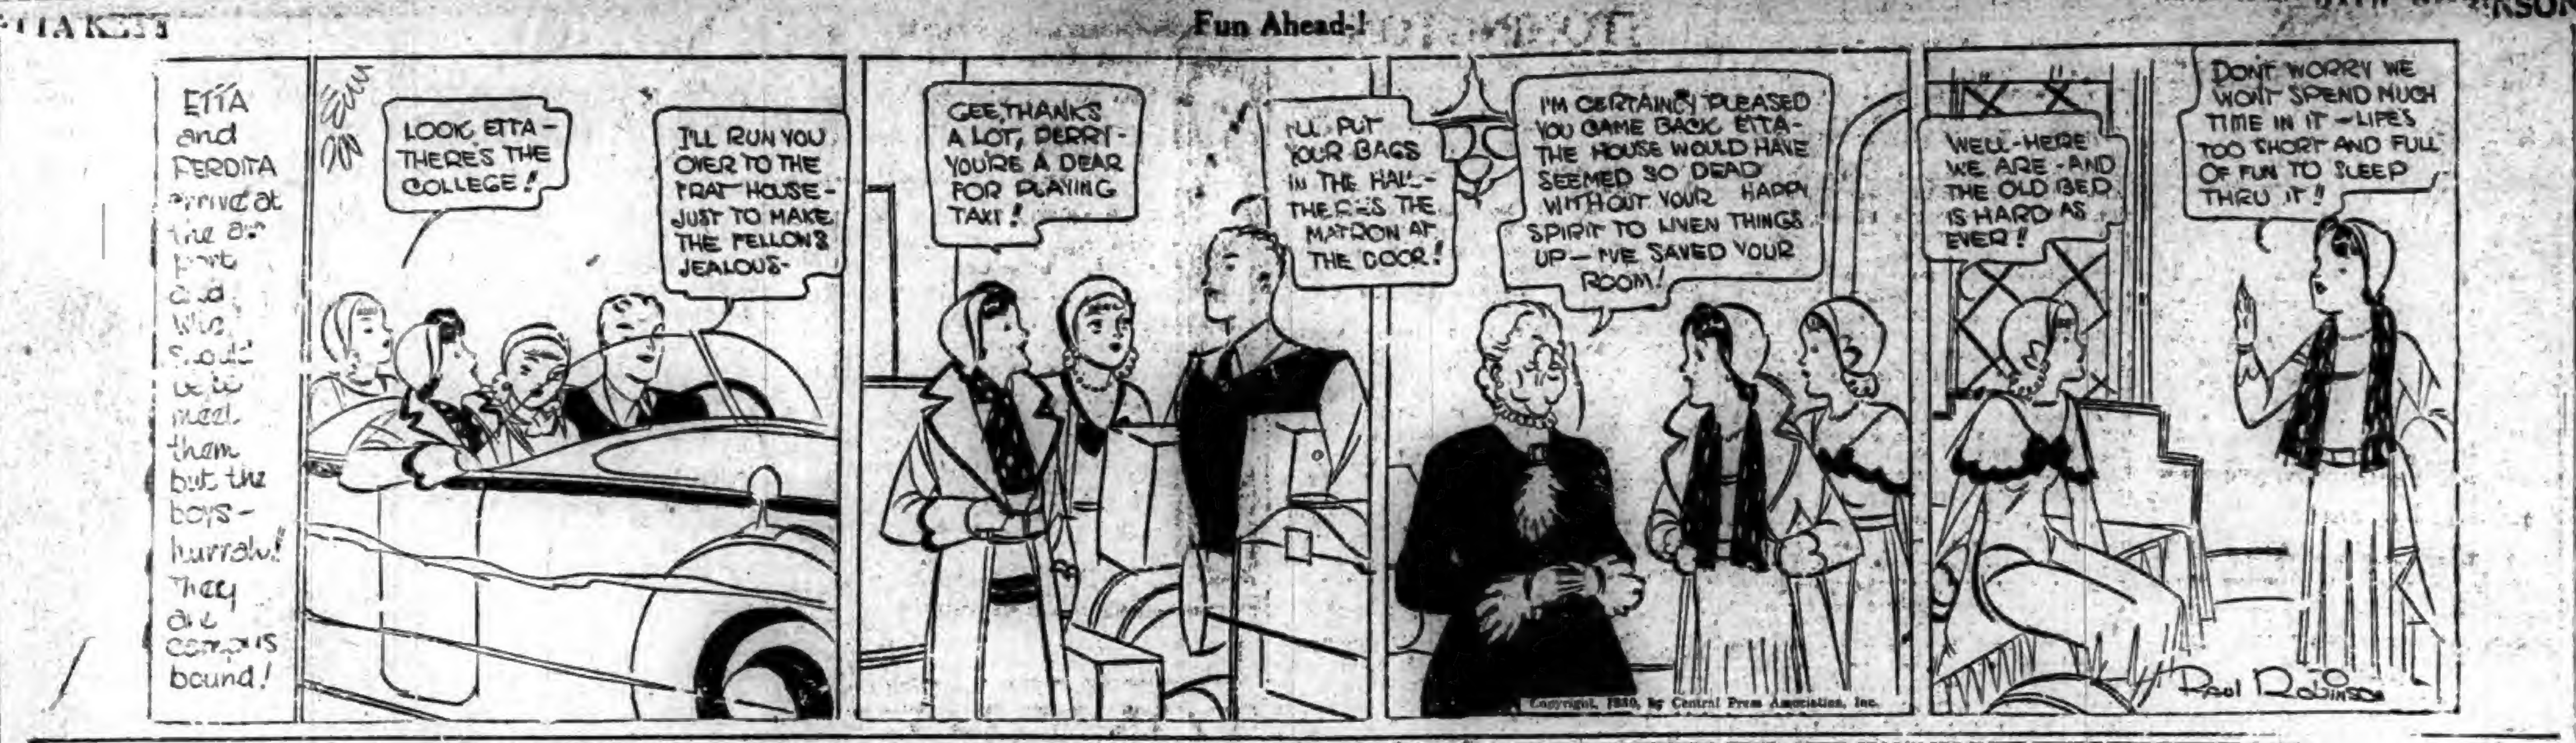
When YOU WANT to put your business before the public there is no medium better than through the advertising columns of The Bulletin.



ETTA KETT
Fun Ahead-!
PAUL ROBINSON
ETTA and FERDITA arrive at the air port and Wic Should be there to meet them but the boys - hurrah! They are campus bound!
LOOK, ETTA - THERE'S THE COLLEGE!
I'LL RUN YOU OVER TO THE FRAT HOUSE - JUST TO MAKE THE FELLOWS JEALOUS - GEE, THANKS A LOT, PERRY - YOU'RE A DEAR FOR PLAYING TAXI!
I'LL PUT YOUR BAGS IN THE HALL - THERE'S THE MATRON AT THE DOOR!
I'M CERTAINLY PLEASED YOU CAME BACK ETTA - THE HOUSE WOULD HAVE SEEMED SO DEAD WITHOUT YOUR HAPPY SPIRIT TO LIVEN THINGS UP - I'VE SAVED YOUR ROOM!
WELL - HERE WE ARE - AND THE OLD BED IS HARD AS EVER!
DON'T WORRY WE WON'T SPEND MUCH TIME IN IT - LIFE'S TOO SHORT AND FULL OF FUN TO SLEEP THRU IT!

LEGAL NOTICES

WARNING
Annual Town Meeting

The legal voters of the town meeting of the Town of Norwich are hereby warned to meet in ANNUAL TOWN MEETING in the Town Hall, in said Norwich, ON MONDAY OCTOBER 6, 1930, AT 8 O'CLOCK, P. M. for the following purposes.

To hear and act upon the annual report of the Selectmen and their recommendations, the reports of the Town Treasurer, the Sinking Fund Committee, the Town Health Officer, the Town School Committee, and the Trustees of the Otis Library; to fix the salaries of the Town Officials, to lay a tax to meet the lawful expenses of the Town, including the expenses of the Public Schools for the ensuing fiscal year, and to fix the compensation of the Tax Collector.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum not to exceed the amount of Four Hundred Thousand ($400,000) dollars at such times and in such amounts during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to defray the debts of the Town accruing before the next Annual Town Meeting and to deliver the notes or other obligations of the Town therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interests of the Town.

Also to authorize the Selectmen to borrow a sum of money not to exceed Twenty Thousand ($20,000) dollars at such time during the twelve months next ensuing as they shall deem proper to pay the Town's share of the County tax heretofore levied upon the Towns of this County and to deliver the notes or other obligations therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interests of the Town.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Sixty-five Hundred ($6500) dollars to be used for the current expenses of the Otis Library.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of Fifteen Hundred ($1500) dollars to be used for the care and maintenance of the trees on the highways of the Town.

Also to appropriate a sum not to exceed One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to defray the traveling expenses of pupils residing in this Town who desire to attend the Putnam or Willimantic Trade Schools.

Also to determine whether the Town will hereafter assume the expense of the care and maintenance of thirty-nine electric lights located upon the public highway in or near the Village of Taftville; which lights have heretofore been cared for and maintained by the Ponemah Company.

Also to determine whether the Town will appropriate the sum of One Thousand ($1,000) dollars to be used in maintaining a Treatment Station for the care of venereal diseases.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ninety-two Thousand Five Hundred ($92,500) dollars for the purpose of relieving the parents or guardians of children who attend the Norwich Free Academy and are domiciled in the Town of Norwich from the payment of the customary term fees for the School year of 1930-1931.

Also to act upon a petition requesting the Town to appropriate the sum of Ten Thousand Five Hundred ($10,500) dollars for the purpose of providing medical inspection and health work for the school children of the Town of Norwich.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain a Street light at the corner of the private ways known as Edward Avenue and Sylvia Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the Town install and maintain two additional hydrants on Town Street.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known hydrant at the junction of Harland Road and Sachem Plain Road.

Also to determine whether the Town will authorize the Selectmen to accept a deed of a private way in said Norwich extending from West Town Street to Sturtevant Street and now known as Shields Avenue from the owner thereof and maintain said private way hereafter as a public highway.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way in the Town of Norwich heretofore known as Perry Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway of the Town.

Also to act upon a petition requesting that the private way heretofore known as Germania Avenue be accepted and hereafter maintained as a public highway.

Also to approve the action of the board of selectmen in removing the town sign-post heretofore located at the corner of Main and Market streets to a location on the east side of Laurel Hill bridge.

Also to authorize the proper officials of the town to execute and deliver to the Thames Bank and Trust company a proper bond of indemnity and to obtain from the said company a certificate of its capital stock to replace a certain lost certificate which was the property of the town representing certain shares of stock of the Thames National bank owned by the town.

Also to do any other business proper to come before said Meeting.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, this 29th day of September, A. D. 1930

WILLIAM S. MURRAY,
CHARLES P. BUSHNELL,
Selectmen of the Town of Norwich.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE

All persons liable to pay taxes in the town of Norwich, Conn., are hereby notified to return to the Assessors, on or before the First day of Nov. 1930, a written or printed list, properly signed and sworn to, of all taxable property owned by them on the first day of Oct. 1930. MONTVILLE

LOCAL LEGIONNAIRES ARE TO AID TOURISTS

About 15 members of Montville post, No. 112, American Legion, have signified their intention of attending the annual convention of the Legion in Boston next week. The members of the local post were busy Wednesday and Thursday placing signs along the Norwich-New London highway at Uncasville as a guide to the thousands of delegates from other posts in the country who are motoring to Boston on this route. Commander Henry W. Jermias, of the local post, has furnished all the members of his post with signs to post on their automobiles so they will have straight going through the town. On that day, Boston will be closed to traffic excepting those who have American Legion stickers on their cars. For the benefit of those who are going by rail, the railroad has offered a reduced round trip fare of $2.75 for that day. The train will leave New London station at 7:20 a. m. and will arrive in Boston at 10 a. m., leaving Boston at 9 p. m. Tuesday, Oct. 7th.

Methodist Quarterly Conference

The services at the Uncasville M. E. church Sunday will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Otis Lee Monson with communion at 10:45. Sunday school at 12 noon and the Epworth league meeting at 7 p. m. The pastor has announced that at the close of Monday evening's Norwich District Preachers' conference District Superintendent Rev. M. E. Genter of Norwich will hold a brief quarterly conference.

Several local sportsmen were out bright and early Wednesday morning when the duck hunting season opened and their shooting aroused neighbors around the coves. Ducks are reported scarce by the hunters.

Norwich League of Women Voters will hold its next meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Willis Austin, of Uncasville.

The members of Maple camp, Royal Neighbors of America, who are in the cast of the comedy Always in Trouble, which they will put on in November, will hold a rehearsal at the home of John Lynch Sunday afternoon.

The Montville Trojans will open the 1930 football season at the Gair Diamond, Uncasville, Sunday afternoon when they face the fast Gay Hill Giants.

GREENEVILLE

LADIES' AID SOCIETY MEETS AT CHURCH

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the Greeneville Congregational church was held in the church parlors Wednesday evening of this week. The first part of the meeting was given over to the usual business session. The social hour was a special feature, a birthday party. Each member brought their age in pennies and various birthday games were played. The refreshments were individual birthday cakes, also assorted cakes, tea and coffee. The forty members present enjoyed the evening very much. Mrs. Leonard C. Prentice had charge of the games and the refreshments were served by Mrs. F. C. Sears, Mrs. John McNeely and Mrs. Frank Quinley.

The Greeneville T. D. Sewing circle held their meeting this week at the home of Miss Anna Shea on Gilmore street with a large class present. The first period of the evening was devoted to sewing of fancy articles and lampshading, which was followed by a social hour with piano and vocal selections being rendered. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. John Casey, Miss Sarah Shea and Edward Webber have returned to their homes after spending a few days at Boston.

Mrs. Fred Hutchinson, of Boston, is spending a few days with relatives in Greeneville.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Swedish Lutheran church met at the home of Mrs. Axel Bjork on Fourteenth street Thursday afternoon. The meeting was opened with the singing of hymns, which was followed by Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. E. E. Kron, the pastor of the church. Regular business was transacted with Mrs. Henry Wild, president, presiding. Following the business meeting refreshments were served by the hostess.

Dismissals At Backus Hospital.

The patients discharged at the Backus hospital Friday were: Lorraine Blanchette, 40 Hunters avenue, Taftville; Mrs. John C. Caswell, 8 Whitaker avenue; Mrs. Clarence Waite and infant daughter, 62 Starr street; Mrs. Arthur Blaisdell, Montville; Mrs. Louis Tetreault, Wauregan; Mrs. William Gillis, Sterling.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS RECORDED IN NORWICH

178 CAR FREIGHT MAKES RECORD TRAIN THROUGH CITY

A freight train comprising 178 cars went through Norwich, south-bound, over the New Haven railroad Thursday. This is believed to have been the longest train that ever went through this city.

Central Baptist Sunday Services

"The Gospel that Norwich Needs" will be the pastor's topic at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The service will be opened with a community sing led by Fred J. Maples and the choir.

"What the Community Has a Right to Expect from the Church" will be Dr. Pitt's theme at the morning worship. The Lord's supper will be observed at this service.

Judge Allyn Brown will have charge of the worship of the adult department of the school in the assembly hall at 10 o'clock. A complete registration of the entire school is planned for Sunday morning. All those wishing to be enrolled in the school of the Central church this year are expected to be present.

LEGION POST WILL SPEED BOSTON CONVENTION TRAVELERS ON THEIR WAY

American Legion members who pass through this city today (Saturday) or on subsequent days on their way to the Legion national convention in Boston will find provision made for their information and assistance on their way by Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, which is to have information headquarters in the vacant store where the Mohican company was formerly in the Steiner building on Main street. This will be opened this (Saturday) morning, according to arrangements which were made at the post meeting held Friday evening in the post rooms in the Thayer building with Commander Patrick McMahon presiding.

A suitable sign will designate the headquarters and further provision towards steering the convention travelers through this city has been made by erecting direction banners at Groton and at Bullard's corners in New London, indicating that this way is the short route to Boston.

Final plans were made for Fletcher post's attendance at the convention, one of whose members, Joseph Beliefleur, is the state delegate from the fifth district. The Post colors are to be taken to head the Norwich delegation in the parade. It is not known how many will attend, but it is believed Norwich will have a good representation. Some are planning to go Sunday or Monday, while others will go on the special train which leaves New London on Tuesday at 7:20, reaching Boston at 10 a. m. The return trip by this train, which has special excursion rates, will be at 9 p. m. from Boston.

Nominations for officers of Fletcher post were opened at the meeting and will be held open till the next meeting when the election will take place.

Plans were discussed for a military whist for which the commander is to appoint a committee and there was further discussion of plans for the Armistice day observance. It is expected that final plans will be made at the next post meeting.

SUCCESSOR TO FORSYTH APPOINTED AT STORRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Oct. 3.—Dennis E. Rusk, who for the last three years has been an instructor in the animal husbandry department of the University of New Hampshire, has been appointed to fill the position of assistant professor of animal husbandry at Connecticut Agricultural college according to an announcement made here today by President Charles C. McCracken.

Mr. Rusk was appointed to fill the vacancy left by W. Howard Forsyth, who died of infantile paralysis at the Isolation hospital in Hartford last Tuesday. His appointment is for the remainder of the semester which ends February 1, 1931.

Mr. Rusk received his bachelor of science degree from Purdue university in 1927, and has been in Durham, New Hampshire for the past three years. During the last month he has been at his home in Hillsboro, Ohio.

SCOUTS TO SERVE AT AMERICAN LEGION BOOTH

Older Boy Scouts in uniform are asked to volunteer to assist the American Legion with their information booth which will be opened on Franklin square for the service of Legionaires passing through this city on the way to Boston. Scouts desiring to serve this afternoon should call scout headquarters.

TAFTVILLE

Mrs. Theo Goodrum and her daughters, the Misses Mary Elizabeth and Myrtle Goodrum, of Vallejo, California, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. George J. Meyer and family, of Blissville, have gone to Providence, R. I., for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. James Wicks, after which they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burdick, of New Bedford, Mass.

Mrs. Albert S. Ferris has returned to her home in Detroit, Mich., after a stay of several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wood, of the Old Canterbury turnpike.

The exterior of the Taftville Congregational church has been painted green with cream trimmings.

Anticipating heavy automobile traffic through Providence street, the main artery of the town, because of motorists en route to the American Legion convention in Boston, Mass., Peter Gallan post No. 104 is cooperating in a manner to make the traveling Legionnaires welcome. Over the street at Postoffice square is hung a huge banner with the words "Welcome Legionnaires." The Overseers' and Foremens' club rooms in the Ponemah building are to serve as an information bureau where inquirers will be directed to the shortest possible routes to the Hub city. Already scores of cars from other states, many from the far west, have drawn up at this point and applied for information.

Albert J. Aberg, of North A street, and John L. O'Connell, of Hartford, are spending the week-end at Camp Moma-Binna, Gardner Lake.

John Thoma has been appointed in charge of the entertainment at the next meeting of the Lisbon Community club, and has already had several rehearsals of his troupe.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Linderson and their daughter, Miss Janet Linderson, have moved from Centerville, R. I., to an apartment on Prentice street.

Mrs. Joseph Wood, of the Old Canterbury turnpike, and Mrs. William Bailey, of Fanning avenue, Norwich, have been in Hartford this week.

Leonard Martel has returned to Dion street, after spending a two weeks' vacation at the home of his parents, in North Grosvenordale.

Cards are being received in town from Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Stranz (Elsie Seddon), of London England, now in Oberammergau, to witness the Passion Play.

A tridium in honor of St. Therese of the Child Jesus was opened at Sacred Heart church on Wednesday evening. The devotions consist of prayers to St. Therese, a sermon in both French and English, followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The tridium continued on Thursday and Friday evenings, the latter day being the Feast of St. Therese, commonly known as "The Little Flower." On Wednesday the sermons were delivered by Rev. Omer T. Mandler. The children's choir sang.

The regular meeting of the American Legion auxiliary was held in the Red Cross rooms on Wednesday evening. The president, Miss Aurette Fournier, presided at the meeting. There was an extra large attendance. Plans were made for election of officers to take place at the next meeting. Those going to Boston on Sunday to the national convention of the American Legion and auxiliary are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Frohmader, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Belval, Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Pepin, Mrs. Mary Rich, all of Taftville; Dr. and Mrs. Martin E. Mullen, of Norwich; Mrs. Clara Caron and Mrs. William Emerson, of Lisbon, Mr. and Mrs. George Herrmann, of Lisbon, Mrs. Annie Vetter and Mrs. Elsie K. Pingree, of Taftville, plan to be in Boston on Tuesday for the parade.

Mrs. Thomas P. Sears, Mrs. Theodore Belval, Mrs. Edward Kelly and Mrs. Clara Caron were in Groton Wednesday evening to attend the meeting of the 8 and 40.

Mrs. George Stewart, of Norwich avenue, who was thrown to the ground by a passing automobile as she attempted to cross the highway near her home on Wednesday noon, is suffering from bruises and a gash in her head which required eight stitches.

CONNECTICUT GETTING FACTS ON JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

A new system of reporting facts on delinquency was put into effect October 1st in all the juvenile courts of the state, according to K. L. Messenger, chief juvenile court probation officer and commissioner of the state bureau of child welfare.

Supervision of probation in the juvenile courts is one of the duties of the bureau. Each probation officer must keep records on forms furnished by the state and must report monthly to the presiding judge of his court and to the chief juvenile court probation officer. During the period from July 1, 1928 to June 30, 1930, probation officers reported dealing with 10,649 children in the juvenile courts of the state.

A great deal of information regarding these children was received but was incomplete and not sufficiently comprehensive. The new reporting system will furnish basis for a study of the age factor, reasons for delinquency and disposition of children's cases by the courts. It is hoped some light will be thrown upon the problem of how long to keep a child upon probation, and a study of the reason for discharge from probation will attempt to assay the value of probation to Connecticut children.

The state department believes that these records and statistics will furnish not only a measuring stick for each probation officer, so that he and the judge will be able to tell the quality and quantity of the service rendered with community, but will also furnish the courts and the state with much information invaluable to them in coping with the delinquent child.

Richard K. Godwin, deputy chief juvenile court probation officer for the state of Connecticut, will have charge of the statistics.

FOURTEEN ASSIGNMENTS FOR SUPERIOR COURT TRIALS

Fourteen jury cases have been assigned for trial as follows in the superior court at New London before Judge Christopher L. Avery:

Tuesday, Oct. 7.—Cousins vs. Katz, et al.; Jeanne LaBounty vs. Silva, et al.; William LaBounty, Admr. vs. Silva, et al; Sande vs. McFee; Romanonak vs. Sak; Baker vs. Phillips, Adm's.

Tuesday, Oct. 14.—(Special) E. W. Staplins vs. T. R. Staplins; E. W. Staplins, Admr. vs. T. R. Staplins; Berardi vs. Schwartz, et al.; Laham vs. Murphy, Inc.; Ruley vs. Lamb; Downey vs. Connecticut Power Co., et al.; Sigorina vs. Paparella.

Tuesday, Oct. 24.—Lewis, Admr., vs. Louis Sherry, Inc.

WOMAN'S CLUB DELEGATION FOR BEACH PARK MEETING

A considerable delegation from the Woman's City club of Norwich is planning to attend the fall field meeting of the Connecticut Forest and Park association which is to be today (Saturday) at the Rocky Neck beach property near Niantic, East Lyme. About ten automobiles will convey the party of Norwich women.

The programme is to begin at 11 o'clock with inspection of the property, 12:30 is to be luncheon hour for those bringing their lunches, and at 1:30 the meeting is to be held with Theodore S. Woolsey, president of the Connecticut Forest and Park association, presiding, and the following addresses: "Shore Parks," Walter O. Filley, treasurer of Connecticut Park and Forest commission; "Southeastern Connecticut Needs A Shore Park," Hon. Lee R. Robbins, mayor of the city of Norwich. "State Parks and Forests," Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers.

SPIRITUAL UNION MAKES PROGRAMME FOR SEASON

At a recent annual meeting of the First Spiritual Union, held at the Spiritual academy, 29 Park street, the reports of the various committees were submitted and approved and the annual election of officers took place. The society starts the new year free from debt and in a flourishing condition. A very attractive programme has been prepared, containing many new speakers, as well as the popular, well known ones, and a very prosperous year in anticipated.

CONSERVING CITY WATER ENGINES PUMP FROM RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 3—Because of the city's supply of water being low in the reservoirs in Chesterfield, water to extinguish a bad fire on the city's dumping ground, foot of Dell avenue, was taken from the Thames river, instead of from Lake Konomoc throughout the greater part of last night and today. The fire broke out late yesterday afternoon and when the burning refuse caused great clouds of smoke to hang over the southern part of the city, a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters. Pequot Hose company responded and after pumping thousands of gallons of water upon the burning mass from the hydrant on Dell avenue, it was decided that an immense quantity of water would be necessary to extinguish the fire. In order not to use the city's source of supply, the Pequot pumper was driven to Pequot avenue, opposite Lawrence-Memorial hospital. The Pequot pumper pumped the water to Montauk avenue where the Northwest pumper was in action and with the combined pressure of the two pumpers a powerful stream through a two and one-half inch hose was poured upon the mass of burning paper, boxes and other inflammable material. It was not until late today that the fire was subdued.

LODGER STOLE BLANKET— FINED $15 IN EAST LYME COURT

NEW LONDON, Oct. 3—

Edward Smith and his wife, Beatrice, of Beattystown, N. J., occupied a room at a rooming house on Terrace place, Niantic last night and left early this morning. When they left the house, the woman took with her a blanket of the value of $20. The man and woman went away in a car carrying New Jersey markers and these were noted by the proprietress of the rooming house so that when the blanket was missed, the state police were requested to arrest the woman. The New London police were asked to keep a lookout for the New Jersey car and about 7:30 it was found on Bank street with Smith and his wife in it. Mrs. Smith was arrested by Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman Carlos Stone. Later the woman was taken to East Lyme and presented in the justice court where she was fined $15 and costs.

LAWRENCE-MEMORIAL HOSP. GRADUATES A LARGE CLASS

NEW LONDON, Oct. 3—

The graduating exercises of the Joseph Lawrence School of Nursing was held this evening at 8:15 o'clock in Bulkeley auditorium and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the graduates. The class comprised the following: Iola Gladys Blicq, Dorothy Elizabeth Carpenter Mabel Elizabeth Chadburn, Anna Christensen, Alice Lucille Darling, Norah Helen Dennison, Mary Esther Gadiner, Benice Viola Hopkins, Corinne Cecelia Kelly, Ruth Estelle Kenyon, Helene Bernardine Klososki, Ann Elizabeth Lanphear, Kathryn Cecelia Latham, Helene Claire MacDonald, Alice Mae McGugan, Mary Elizabeth MacGugan, Julia Honore Murphy, Alice Grace Onuparik, Julia Rose Pinella, Edith Mabelle Ray, Annelle Rainville Rice, Cecelia Evangeline Rondomanski, Mary Elizabeth Ross, Edith Veronica Smilgin, Ella Helen Vida, Madeline Claire Ward and Victoria Wildowsky. The supervisors of the Associated hospitals gave a tea in the solarium of the Pond house this afternoon to the student nurses in honor of the graduating class. The solarium was artistically decorated. Miss Virginia Brantner, general floor supervisor, and Miss Elmina Snow, night supervisor, poured and were assisted by the other supervisors. Following the tea the first ivy at Pond house was planted and was in honor of Miss Kathryn Prindiville, superintendent of the hospital.

BOY SCOUTS READY FOR YALE-MARYLAND GAME

Over 100 tickets have been distributed to Norwich Boy Scouts for the Yale-Maryland game, according to scout headquarters. Approximately every six boys are being accompanied by a leader. The Norwich office still has a number of tickets and some leader tickets and will make an effort to secure last minute transportation this (Saturday) morning for scouts of those troops where the transportation facilities have failed. Scouts should leave Norwich by 10.30 to get to the game on time. Last year the scouts leaving at 10 secured good seats and had plenty of time to eat their luncheons. Leaders going early should take something along to read or amuse the scouts with under their charge.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOM

AMERICAN LEGION

In a special bulletin from the department headquarters of the American Legion, which has to do with the Connecticut contingent in the parade to be held in Boston, Tuesday, Oct. 7, it is noted that 3,000 marchers from the Nutmeg state are expected to be in the line of march. These bulletins, which contain general order No. 1, are now being received by the posts in New London county, which are planning to send a large delegation to march. The following is the bulletin:

Connecticut Contingent in Boston Parade.

The Parade Committee for the National Conventon American Legion parade to be held in Boston, Mass., Tuesday, Oct. 7, 1930 has arranged the following for the guidance of all concerned.

They will report with the assistant chiefs of staff to the chief of staff at the corner of Marlborough and Hereford streets, Boston, Mass., Tuesday, Oct. 7, 1930 at 9:15 a. m.

District commanders will command this district and will appoint their own staffs to consist of three Legionnaires, each.

The marshal and staff and district commanders and staffs will wear Legion or military uniform where practicable.

General.

The Connecticut department will march in the first division and will form on Marlborough street, the right resting on Hereford street at 10 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, Oct. 7, 1930. The assembly point will be marked with the department name.

All Connecticut Legionnaires arriving in Boston on the special excursion train at 10 a. m., Oct. 7 will proceed at once to the above assembly point where they will arrive before the Connecticut department moves into column.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

In accordance with orders of the grand marshal only uniformed members of the Ladies' Auxiliary will march in the parade. They will form in the rear of the Fourth district.

Posts will march in their respective districts in the order designated by the district commanders and will be placed, as far as possible so as to separate the musical units from each other by the greatest distance.

Colors.

All posts will designate color bearers and arrange that post colors will be taken to Boston.

The department and post colors and unit colors of the Ladies' Auxiliary will be massed at the head of the department delegation.

Dress.

The dress for the parade will be the American Legion uniform, U. S. army, navy or marine corps uniform or white trousers, white shirts, blue bow tie and sash, or civilian clothes.

Posts will form in respect to uniforms in the following order. American Legion uniforms. U. S. army, navy and marine corps uniforms. White uniform dress and civilian clothes.

Formation.

Posts will march in column of eight files front (eight in each line). This formation may be waived by the parade committee on request of department officers.

Distance.

Between ranks, 3 paces; between masses, 10 paces (a mass is 12 ranks); between departments, 30 to 50 paces closing to 30 on halts; between vehicles, 6 paces.

Rate of march 120 steps a minute, with 28 inch step average.

Time of assembly 1st division, 9.30 a. m.; second division at 12 o'clock approximately; third division at 2.30 p. m.

The head of the column will clear the initial point, corner of Massachusetts avenue and Beacon street at 10 o'clock a. m.

Route of March.

The parade will pass through historic old Boston, passing the Boston Common, State House, Col. Robert Gould Shaw memorial, King's Chapel, site of the First Public Latin School, City Hall, Old South Church, Old State House, Faneuil Hall and site of Boston Massacre. The streets are Beacon to School, to Washington, to Adams square to Dock square, to Exchange street, to Congress street, to Post Office square, to Milk street, to Federal street, to High street, to Summer street, to Winter street, to Tremont street, to Stuart street, to Columbus avenue, disbanding north of Massachusetts avenue.

The official reviewing stand will be located on the Tremont street mall, while the grand marshal and staff will review the parade at Columbus Circle, Columbus avenue.

Commanding officers and their staffs will execute both the hand salute and eyes right (or left) on passing reviewing officials. Their organizations will execute only eyes right (or left).

Bands and drum corps will be advised by parade aides as well as parade orders when to start playing prior to passing reviewing stands and also when to stop playing before reaching the former point.

Marching Order of Connecticut Department.

Marshal, Department Commander W. S. Alexander, Marshal's Staff.

Massed bands of First and Second Companies, Governor's Foot Guards.

Massed colors of Department, Post and Auxiliary.

Second district, New Haven county.
First district, Hartford county.

Fifth district, New London county.
Seventh district, Middlesex county.
Third district, Fairfield county.
Fourth district, Tolland and Windham counties.

Department President, Mrs. Clemency H. Schall; Staff.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

Dismissal.

Shortly after passing the grand marshal's reviewing stand at Columbus Circle on Columbus avenue the parade will be dismissed over different routes (as will be outlined in later orders). Parade aides attached to each department will also designate the route and the point of dismissal which the tail of the column must clear.

ODD LADIES, M. U.

The regular meeting of Loyal Victory lodge I. O. O. L. M. U., was held Thursday evening in Steiner hall with Noble Grand Sister Charlotte Schmidt in the chair. At the next meeting the purple lecture will be given by Provincial Deputy Grand Lady Sister Elizabeth Houston, Jr., and all past noble grands are expected to be present.

During the evening the charter was draped in memory of the late Sister Emma Flower of Baltic.

After the meeting a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the social committee.

ELKS

Norwich lodge, No. 430, voted at its meeting on Thursday evening to give a banquet to the members of the Elks' ball club which played in the junior league under the management of John H. Wilson, who will also be in charge of the banquet.

After the business meeting of the lodge at which Exalted Ruler James T. Egan presided and at which there was initiation, there was a social session, at which refreshments were served and entertainers from Hartford gave a programme of music and dance numbers.

REBEKAHS

Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 21, met Wednesday evening in Odd Fellows' hall, the occasion being the annual visitation of the Rebekah state assembly officers, including President Mrs. Harriet M. Wilson, Bridgeport; vice president, Mrs. Mildred West, Hamden; warden, Mrs. Lillie Fowler, Thompsonville, and district deputy president, Mrs. Mary E. Green, of Norwich; also past presidents, Mrs. Mary Lovett, of Willimantic and Mrs. Grace E. Willey.

There were also visitors from Ruthie lodge, Jewett City; Home lodge, Groton; Violet lodge, Willimantic; Osprey lodge, New London; Orient lodge, New London.

The Rebekah degree was exemplified on a class of candidates in a most creditable manner, the degree team doing the ritualistic work without rituals, and the work of the guard team was acceptably good, for which credit is due the able drill master, Bro. Fred Amburn, who has worked hard to plan the floor work.

Preceding the business meeting a delicious supper consisting of cold meat, salads, relish, rolls, coffee, ice cream and cake was served by the supper committee, Mrs. Mary J. Smith chairman. The decoration of the dining room and tables was attractively done in the lodge colors, pink and green, which were in charge of Mrs. Amy Coles, the brothers acting as waiters. The Thames Past Grand association will hold a meeting here in Odd Fellows' hall on Thursday, October 16th, dinner to be served at 12 o'clock; business meeting at 3.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

At a special meeting of the executive council and the auxiliary to the Robert O. Fletcher post, American Legion, it was voted to omit the meeting on October 6 on account of the convention at Boston of the Legion and auxiliary. A nominating committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, chairman; Mrs. Grace Willey and Mrs. Louise Leopold.

The next meeting, October 20, will be the annual meeting and election of officers and a good attendance is desired. Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, Mrs. Harlow Bogue, Mrs. Louise Leopold and Mrs. Lila Ost, with Miss Lucy Gray MacDougall, expect to start Sunday morning in Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue's car, for Boston to attend the convention.

THE CURE BEGINS IN THE KITCHEN

So MANY people suffer from constipation. It steals health and happiness. They spend millions of dollars yearly on pills and drugs.

That's the wrong way to try to cure constipation. The right way is to correct the diet—to add enough roughage to your food to sweep the poisons out of your system.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to do this. You'll enjoy it as a ready-to-eat cereal, with milk or cream. A delicious food for maintaining health.

Use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also for making bran muffins and breads. Adds a pleasant, nut-like flavor to omelets, soups, salads. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

46 LIVES LOST IN TERRIFIC EXPLOSION ON BRITISH DIRIGIBLE R-101 AFTER THE BIG AIRSHIP HAD CRASHED INTO A HILL

Largest Aircraft in the World Had Taken Off at Cardington, Eng., Saturday Evening For a Trip to India—Sunday Morning About 2 O'Clock, Weighted Down By Heavy Rain, the R-101 Was Unable to Combat High Winds and Plunged Head On Into a Wooded Hillside In France—Only Eight of the 54 Persons Aboard Escaped With Their Lives—At Least One of These Probably Will Die—Among the Dead Are the British Air Minster, Lord Thomson, and the Director of Commercial Aviation, Sir Sefton Brancker—Fire Consumed the Dirigible—Bodies of the Victims Were Burned Beyond Recognition

BEAUVAIS, France, Oct. 5—(AP)—The British airship, R-101, leviathan of the air, crashed on a wooded hillside south of here, shortly after 2 a. m., today, took fire, and was destroyed. Of the 54 persons aboard, 46 were either killed by the impact or burned to death, and eight were saved.

The disaster was the greatest that the air has known since the French air ship Dixmude cruised out over the Mediterranean with 52 persons aboard in December, 1923, never to return. The Giant ship, the largest in the world and sister to the R-100 which visited America last July, was sailing southeastward across France on its first voyage of any length, a trip to India and return.

A heavy wind and rainstorm which the airship encountered shortly after it crossed the English channel was believed to account for the disaster. Weighted by the rain, the dirigible lost buoyancy, and finally bumped into the ground once or twice south of Beauvais. Then it struck a hill-side, and in ten seconds had caught fire and was a blazing inferno.

Explosion Rocked Country

An explosion which occurred immediately after the dirigible plowed into the hill side rocked the country for miles around and brought peasants running to the scene. So great was the heat from the blazing ship however that they could do nothing toward rescuing those aboard.

Among the R-101 dead were Lord Thomson, British air minister, noted soldier and statesman; Sir Sefton Brancker, director of civil aviation; Squadron Leader ~~Palstra of the~~ Australian air force, and W. H. L. O'Nell of the British India office. Of the 54 aboard, twelve were passengers, five officers, and 37 members of the crew.

H. J. Leech, foreman and engineer of Royal Airship Works, who was acting as pilot, was perhaps the least injured of the survivors, and from him possibly the most coherent account of the catastrophe has come.

The dirigible left Cardington, England, for Ismalia and Karachi, India, at 7:37 p. m. yesterday, British standard time (2:37 p. m., E. S. T.) expecting to take between five and six days to reach Karach. It crossed the English channel safely and was headed across France toward the Mediterranean route to the east when a hard squall blew up from the channel and put it in difficulties.

A hard driving rain pounded the ship's sides, and gathered on the fabric of its envelope, weighting it down and causing the machine to lose buoyancy. The blustery wind exerted a constant strain on the giant ship, and tossed it about badly at times.

The dirigible cruised nearer and nearer the ground, finally entering a valley south of Beauvais. There were no lifting currents to carry it above the encircling rim of hills.

Suddenly the big ship bumped, slightly, and then again, harder.

Terrific Impact

"Then" Leach said, "with a terrific impact she buried her nose in the ground. Immediately there was a terrific explosion, followed by two lesser ones, and flames enveloped the airship. I was shot out of my pilot window and found myself on the ground.

"Everybody aboard except myself and the eleven others who were running the dirigible had gone to bed and probably were just dropping off to sleep. The motors were turning to perfection. It was the tempest which caused our destruction."

The heavens, despite the continuing downpour of rain, were illuminated by the flames which almost immediately soared hig hinto the sky. Inhabitants of the countryside, many of whom had been awakened when the airship first passed over their heads only 400 feet or so above them, rushed to the scene, scrambling madly over pastures, fields, and through the clumps of woods in their haste to arrive.

But due to the mud, the uneven terrain, and since the disaster occurred more than a mile from the nearest farm house, by the time anyone arrived the airship was a mass of fire.

Gendarmes and some of those living nearby were among the first to reach the scene of the disaster, but the heat of the flames forced them to remain at a distance.

Trapped in Staterooms

Above the roar of the furnace came the heart-breaking cries of those aboard, trapped in their staterooms and burned to death.

At the stern of the ship waved the Union Jack, illuminated by the flames, a proud bit of nationalism even in disaster.

Swiftly the work of organized relief was put into action, and as the flames died down peasants and police began removing the blackened and maimed bodies.

The bodies were laid in a dell beside the wreckage and later taken to the Beauvais hospital, which had been transformed into a provisional chapel adorned with British flags.

Bodies Burned Beyond Recognition

Practically all of the victims were burned beyond recognition. Many of the bodies were only bones with charred tendons attached. Clothes which might have contained identifying papers had been burned up.

So intense was the heat that rings melted about the fingers of some of the bodies. Doctors said it might not be possible to identify even one body, since "all look alike."

Forty-six fairly complete bodies were recovered and the relief crews found arms, legs, and other human parts sufficient, they believed, to account for three more bodies. And there was some speculation as to whether there had not been at least two or three more aboard for the long trip than London officials were aware of. Survivors insisted that there were 58 persons aboard, despite the air ministry figures of 54.

M. Laurent Eynac, French air minister, and Lord Tyrell, British ambassador at Paris, were among the first to arrive from the capital. The former immediately ordered that all flags in Beauvais be flown at half mast. By noon today 5,000 peasants had gathered at the scene of the disaster and thousands of more persons were there in 2,000 or more automobiles.

Spectators Horror Stricken

Spectators were horror-stricken. Many peasants knelt in the muddy fields and prayed. Others crossed themselves as they first glimpsed the twisted wreckage.

Despite a widespread theory that smoking aboard the dirigible had something to do with the disaster, those of the survivors who were able to discuss the accident denied it. A radio message from the dirigible last night had said that passengers were just getting up from dinner and cigars, possibly the first time aboard a lighter-than-air craft of this type that an after-dinner smoke had been possible.

This smoking was possible, it was explained, because the dirigible used fuel oil in its engines rather than the more inflammable gasoline. In addition smoking compartments were provided which were proof against a spark igniting fuel or the explosive hydrogen lifting gas in the vulnerable parts of the ship There were 25 tons of fuel oil aboard for use in the auxiliary engines.

Late today some of the debris still burned. The motors were half buried in the ground. The night's rain had washed through the twisted and blackened aluminum, and gave the mass a dreary appearance in keeping with the greatness of the catastrophe.

Leech said that after bumping the ground once or twice, the dirigible's tail broke. The big ship did not respond to her elevators then, and a moment later the big crash came.

The ship's first stop was scheduled to be Ismalia, about 2,800 miles from London. From Ismalia the ship was to go to Karachi, terminal point of its voyage, about 2,530 miles from London. It was expected to reach Karachi in about six days.

The British attached supreme importance to the cruise, and it was for this reason that Lord Thomson, and Sir Sefton Brancker, were aboard. It was hoped that the ship would equal in performance its slightly smaller sister, the R-100, which acquitted itself so well on its recent trans-Atlantic trip to America and return.

NEGRO THEATRICAL STAR SHOT; MISTAKEN FOR THIEF

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 5—(AP)—Bill Robinson, 54-year-old Negro theatrical star, was shot and wounded today by a policeman who mistook him for the Negro purse snatcher Robinson was pursuing.

Robinson was shot in the left arm. Hospital physicians described the wound as minor and permitted him to leave for New York.

Robinson had been starring in an all-Negro show here last week. He was leaving his hotel today to drive to the railroad station when Mrs. Annie Bies, white, screamed and pointed after a Negro youth fleeing with her purse. Robinson dropped his bags and gave chase.

He drew a revolver and fired into the air after the fugitive. The shots attracted the attention of Patrolman Michael Horan, who assumed Robinson was the man wanted. He shouted and fired in the air, but Robinson, heedless, kept on. Finally the officer fired directly at the man before him and Robinson fell. The purse-snatcher escaped.

Instead of blaming the officer, Robinson complimented him for his alertness in taking up the chase.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN FOR PRESIDENTIAL TRAIN

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 5—(AP)—To obviate any possibility of the derailment of, President Hoover's special train as it passes over the New Haven railroad's tracks en route to the American Legion convention at Boston tomorrow morning, orders have been issued that all manually operated switches on the Shore Line be spiked to prevent their being opened before the passage of the presidential special, railroad officials said here tonight

While such precautions are not unusual, a responsible railroad official stated that they are being taken at the present time because of the communist demonstration at Cleveland last Thursday and to forestall any tampering with the switches by "cranks."

It was said that comparatively few switches will require the special attention, as a majority of the main line switches are operated from signal towers.

TWO MEN INJURED BY GASOLINE EXPLOSION

WEST HAVEN, Oct. 5—(AP)—Two men were slightly injured today in an explosion which destroyed a gasoline station owned by William and Harold Miller, brothers. Six other persons, three of whom were inside the building, a frame structure, narrowly escaped injury.

The explosion, the cause of which is not definitely known, occurred while a large truck was unloading gasoline into a storage tank located underneath the floor of the station by means of a hose which had been run through an open window. Static electricity was given by fire officials as a probable explanation for the accident.

George Conkling, who was seated in his automobile which was being refueled was cut by flying glass. L. J. Kiaran, an employe at the station, was burned about the face by the fire which followed the explosion. The latter was inside the building at the timew ith Harold Miller and two other men, who escaped uninjured.

William Miller, the driver of the gasoline truck and his helper also escaped injury.

CENSUS GIVES STATE OF TEXAS 496,007 FARMS

WASHINGTON,- Oct. 5—(AP)—With 34 counties increasing by more than 100 per cent in number of farms in the past decade, Texas, biggest state of all, hung up a Lone Star record in the 1930 census.

A census bureau report today showed Texas as having 496,007 farms as against 436,033 in 1920, a numerical increase of 59,974, or 13.8 per cent.

No other state has reported so large a numerical increase and none approached Texas in great gains of individual counties. Only four states, Louisiana, New Mexico, Iowa and Michigan, remain to report.

SATURDAY NIGHT GANG ROUNDED UP IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—(AP)—Police rounded up the "Saturday night gang" today after a battle in which Detective Thomas Tunney, brother of Gene Tunney, knocked out a man who was about to shoot one of Tunney's comrades.

Four men blamed for a long series of Saturday night holdups, were captured at Tenth avenue and 57th street after a hand to hand struggle during which several shots were fired. At a police station they were identified by ten witnesses as holdup men who robbed a group of card players last night.

Four Men Of Fishing Party Were Drown

Small Motorboat Was Swamped in Heavy Sea In Ipswich Bay

IPSWICH, Mass., Oct. 5—(AP)—A heavy sea which kept hardy fishermen on land today took the lives of four of a five-man fishing party, when their small motorboat was swamped in Ipswich bay off the Ipswich lightship.

The dead were:

Joseph Gaffney, 44, his son, Joseph, Jr., 20, both of Ipswich, and William G. Hayes, 62, and William McDevitt, 58, both of Lowell. The fifth man in the party, Ernest Hayes, son of one of the victims, was rescued after a coast guard airplane discovered him clinging to the upturned boat.

The plane signalled to a coast guard patrol boat and young Hayes was picked up in an exhausted condition and taken to a hospital here. He will recover.

The body of Hayes' father and that of young Gaffney were washed ashore several hours later as was the motorboat. Police patrolled the beach waiting for the other two bodies to be carried in on the high surf.

Medical Examiner George Bailey viewed the bodies and will perform autopsies.

The elder Hayes and Gaffney were brothers-in-law.

HEAVY GUARD FOR HOOVER DURING STAY IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 5—(AP)—Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley tonight ordered 100 detectives to join the 500 uniformed policemen assigned to guard President Hoover during his visit here, tomorrow because of reports of plans for communist demonstrations.

Supt. Crowley has been warned by police of other cities that groups of communists are headed this way. Thousands of circulars have been distributed by the trade union unity Leatributed by the Trade Union Unity League urging communists to meet on the Charles street mall tomorrow morning to protest against President Hoover and his "fake prosperity." This meeting will be permitted.

It was considered doubtful, however, that the communists would attempt to march in a body upon the president as they did at Cleveland. Supt. Crowley said that any attempt to stage a parade with banners or printed signs would be blocked but that he had no power to stop a body of 200 or less marching men carrying no insignia unless they approached the president.

President Hoover will speak to the American Legion at the Arena in the morning and to the American Federation of Labor at the Statler hotel in the afternoon.

LEGIONNAIRES TASTING NEW ENGLAND HOSPITALITY

BOSTON Oct. 5.—(AP)—The big parade halted tonight and 50,000 American Legionnaires unlimbered for action. Their objectice was the official opening of their national convention here tomorrow.

Church services, organization breakfasts, teas and dinners, a memorial service, an historic pageant parade and the tasting of New England hospitality, made up the program of the day. Meanwhile, national executives and police officials were preparing for the reception to President Hoover who will arrive in the morning to speak at the opening convention session.

Railroad stations were crowded with welcoming committees awaiting trains bringing delegates and the highways into Boston hummed under the steady stream of automobile tires. Streets and hotel lobbies were bright with their "welcome" signs and national colors, beneath which Legionnaires, auxiliary members and their families made it evident they were on a holiday.

But there was also the serious side, as the Legionnairies gathered in "the Cradle of Liberty," Faneuil hall, at night in a memorial service to those of their comrades left sleeping across the Atlantic.

NAMES MENTIONED FOR LEGION COMMANDER

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—With a majority of delegates to the national convention of the American Legion quartered and ready for the opening session tomorrow, the campaign for national offices and the scene of the next convention got under way in earnest today. Hotel corridors and lobbies buzzed with the campaign talk and from almost every vantage point hung signs reading: "Detroit 1931" and "A royal welcome awaits American Legion in Los Angeles in 1931. We are prepared."

Five names have been advanced for national commander. Those mentioned are Frank J. Schneller, Wisconsin; Ralph T. O'Neil, Kansas E. T. Rozwell, Virginia; Munroe Johnson, South Carolina, and Emmet O'Nal, Kentucky.

SLAYING BY GANGSTERS IN STREET IN PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5—(AP)—More than a dozen bullets from the automatic pistols of three gangsters sent Harry Rovell, 26, of Pomona, N. J., to his death in a downtown cafe, early today. The slayers escaped. The victim was identified by finger print experts as Harry Rovell, alleged burglar who was paroled Wednesday from the county prison at Holmesburg.

Samuel Kaplan, proprietar of the cafe, told police Rovell was seated at a rear table when the gangsters entered the cafe. They took a table near the front, facing their victim.

Rovell had been reading a paper, Kaplan said, and when he observed the trio he jumped to his feet. The gunmen opened fire at once and as Rovell fell they ran into the street and escaped. Kaplan and two waiters were held as material witnesses.

HENRY FORD TO REMAIN TEN DAYS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Henry Ford, American automobile manufacturer arrived in London tonight somewhat wearied of the swift pace he has been setting for himself in his tour over Europe.

He remarked to newspapermen as he and Mrs. Ford stepped from the Continental Express: "I'm tired. I have been working terribly hard."

He plans to remain here ten days.

L[illegible]r Has Had Worse Years Than This One

A. F. of L. Leaders Pronounce 1921 and 1924 Years of Greater Distress

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—A tentative program for the guidance of American labor was submitted today to delegates assembling for the 50th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, in the form of the annual executive council report of William Green, its president, and associated officials.

Emphasis was laid upon national and international unemployment. Evidence was offered, however, that the current experience is less serious than that of some previous years.

The council cited studies which made it conclude that in the United States experiences of 1921 and 1924 had been worse for labor.

Infrequency of wage reductions now as compared with then was a point cited. The position of President Hoover, taken during business betterment conferences last year, in opposition to lower pay rates, was declared "a constructive achievement."

GUARDING FRANK H. BELL FROM FELLOW PRISONERS

CHICAGO, Oct. 5—(AP)—Fearing he would be slain by aroused prisoners, officials today provided a special guard and an isolated cell for Frank H. Bell, who Friday implicated two companions in the murder of Alfred Lingle.

At the same time instructions were issued to prepare his food separately and give it careful supervision, as a precaution against poisoning.

Numerous threats against Bell's life have been made since the purported Lingle confession, officials said, and feeling against him among the 1,500 prisoners reached a high pitch today when it was learned he had betrayed William Lenhardt, Cleveland killer, under sentence of death, in an attempted jailbreak last night.

Bell thwarted Lenhardt's escape by warning Warden David Moneypenny and Coroner Bundesen that the prisoner had a revolver and hacksaws concealed in his cell.

Besides the gun and saws officials found the killer had sawed a square out of his cell door and had sealed it up again with paste, awaiting time for delivery.

LITTLE TOWN ELECTIONS IN CONNECTICUT TODAY

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 5—(AP)—Thousands of Connecticut voters will go to the polls tomorrow to participate in the "little town" elections.

While the "little town" elections no longer enjoy the importance of former years, the outcome of tomorrow's balloting will be watched with some interest by political leaders for any development of party strength which may aid in foretelling the results of the state elections in the November.

For the most part the elections tomorrow will have no special political significance. Most of the voters will decide local issues at the polls such as taxation and appropriations.

The election in Windham stands out in point of interest in view of the town's financial difficulties. Frank P. Fenton, a democrat, town clerk and treasurer for the past 31 years, recently withdrew as a candidate for reelection after his accounts had been criticized by State Tax Commissioner William H Blodgett. The town's accounts are now being audited by accountants.

ROGERS ADDRESSED ITALIAN-AMERICAN REPUBLICAN CLUB

WATERBURY, Oct. 5.—The statement that Connecticut ranks first among all the states of the Union in liberal provision for care of tuberculosis and other communicable diseases was made tonight by Lieut.-Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, republican candidate for governor, in an address before the United Italian-American Republican club here. The republican candidate quoted statistics of the United States department of commerce to show that in per capita expenditure for treatment of such diseases, this state leads all others.

He also declared that in the per capita expense of states for charities, hospitals and corrections, Connecticut stands third, being out-ranked only by Massachusetts and Nevada. Lieutenant-Governor Rogers challenged "our opponents to successfully contradict these statements."

LEGION ADDRESSED BY CARDINAL O'CONNELL

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston and dean of the Catholic heirarchy in America, today told members of the American Legion, gathering here for the opening tomorrow of their annual convention, that their highest patriotic duty was "to guard and strengthen the religiuos spirit."

"That duty is made all the more imperative by the changing temper of the times," Cardinal O'Connell said in addressing the Legionnaires at mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. "The insatiable thirst for riches, the insensate rush for pleasure, and the growing disregard of laws, which are deplorable features of contemporary American life are symptoms that fill every true lover of America with apprehension."

INSTANTLY KILLED IN AUTO HER SON WAS DRIVING

ATHENS, Tenn., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Charlotte E. Wood, 50, of Arlington, Mass., was instantly killed today in an automobile accident near here. Her son, Cyril Wood, was driving. He was uninjured.

Mrs. Wood's body was sent to Arlington today.

OBITUARY

George H. Byrnes

WATERBURY, Oct. 5—(AP)—George H. Byrnes, 78, former chief clerk of the city water department, died suddenly this morning at his home here. Before entering the employ of the department, Mr. Byrnes had been in the construction business and had supervised the construction of many of the city's most important streets, waterways and sewer systems. He was retired a year ago by special act of the state legislature on a pension after serving the city city government for more than 30 years.

WHOLE STATE OF RIO GRANDE DO SUL, BRAZIL,IS IN REVOLT

Advices Reaching Montevideo, Uruguay, Say That the Federal Troops in the State Have Joined the Revolution—Brazilians Are Fleeing to Uruguayan Border Towns—Congress Has Granted President Luis $10,000,000 to Put Down the Revolution—Will Put Half the Population of Brazil Under Military Rul

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguary, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Practically the entire state of Rio Grande Do Sul, Brazil, was in revolt tonight against the Rio De Janeiro government.

Advices reaching here by way of frotier towns said that federal troops in the cities of Uruguayana, Bage, Santa Maria, Alegrete, and Santa Ana have joined the revolution and it was considered assured that the entire federal army in the state numbering 10,000, would act against the government.

The revolters have captured all national offices in the state, the reports declare, and have established a censorship on all outgoing and incoming cable and telegraph matter.

Yesterday the revolutionists attempted to capture all the public funds held in the national bank in Uruguayana, but employes diverted the funds to the English Bank of London, a branch of the bank in Rivera, Uruguay.

Rivera, and Artigas and Rio Branco, other Uruguayan border towns were practically filled with Brazilian families fleeing from the revolutions and expected fighting.

Dispatches from Rivera, on the frontier of Brazil and Uruguay, state that a revolutionary movement in sympathy with the Rio Grande leaders has broken out also in the state of Santa Catharina, immediately north of Rio Grande Do Sul.

The insurgents there were marching upon the state capital, Desterro.

A railway line runs north from Rio Grande Do Sul, across the states of Santa Cathadina and Parana, to Sao Paulo. The insurgents in Rio Grande have mobilized locomotives and railway coaches for their soldiers.

Officers of the sixth federal cavalry, captured by the insurgents at Alegrete, a city in the western part of Rio Grande were conducted to the Uruguayan frontier today. They were permitted to cross the frontier and take refuge in neutral Uraguay.

The rank and file of the regiment joined the insurgent army, which is commanded by General Jose Antonio Flores Da Cunha.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 5.—(AP)—President Washington Luis today was granted $10,000,000 by congress to put down the revolution in the states of Rio Grande Do Sul and Minas Geraes.

This follows the congressional decree of yesterday which declared a state of siege in Rio Grande Do Sul, Minas Geraes and Parahyba. This places half the population of Brazil under military rule.

The government declares that there is no evidence of trouble outside of Rio Grande Do Sul and Minas Geraes, with the great cities of Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo showing their normal calm activity.

OVERTURES MADE TO INSURGENT LEADERS

MONTEVIDEO, Oct. 5—(AP)—Frontier dispatches tonight reported that the Brazilian federal government had offered to open peace negotiations with the triumphant insurgents in Rio Grande Do Sul but that the insurgent leaders had refused to accept them.

CONSIDERING SELECTION OF NEW SECRETARY OF LABOR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Selection of a new secretary of labor is receiving considerable attention from President Hoover, who has several names before him, including John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and W. N. Doak, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Many observers believe the choice lies between these two, although other names frequently crop up in the discussions. Mr. Hoover is prepared to make known his selection shortly after the November election should Secretary Davis be successful at that time in his race for the senate from Pennsylvania.

Anticipating victory for Mr. Davis, friends of various men in line for the labor post have been increasingly active lately, Both Doak and Lewis are republicans and were active supporters of Mr. Hoover in the 1928 campaign.

It was reported at one time that Mr. Doak, a Virginian, was the choice of the president for his first cabinet but at the last minute Mr. Hoover asked Mr. Davis to continue.

It is understood that Mr. Lewis would have the support of the American Federation of Labor, although not the particular candidate of that organization. There is some question whether Doak has the united support of the American Federation of Labor, to which body his organization does not belong.

CONSIDERING PROGRAM TO STIMULATE INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Consideration of a program to stimulate all industry and to effect a geneari business improvement is to be the first objective of the National Association of Manufacturers, in a four day "national industrial inventory" meeting beginning tomorrow.

Lord Barnby, former president of the Federation of British Industries, will speak at the association's annual dinner Monday night, and an address by John E. Edgerton, president of the American organization, is scheduled for tomorrow's first meeting.

On the second day, the meeting is to consider unemployment and related problems of government and industry, including the probable increase in social insurance legislation expected in several states.

REPUBLICAN BULLETIN TO BE ISSUED THIS WEEK

HARTFORD, Oct. 5—(AP)—The Republican Bulletin, a campaign publication issued during each election by the republican state central committee, will be in the hands of party workers throughout the state early this week. A leading article in the first issue gives the statement of Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers on prohibition in which he tells of his vote against the ratification of the eighteenth amendment in 1921 when he was a member of the house. The state central committee has also issued the usual campaign handbook, has reprinted the "kepnote speech" of U. S. Senator Frederic C. Walcott in pamphlet form, and has issued postcards booming Rogers for governor.

TO RESUME SUIT OVER DIVERSION OF WATERS

HARTFORD, Oct. 5—(AP)—The suit between Connecticut and Massachusetts, by which this state seeks to prevent diversion by Massachusetts of water from tributaries of the Connecticut river, will be resumed in the United States supreme court in Washington tomorrow when Special Counsel Benedict M. Holden of Connecticut, will file a bill of 75 exceptions to the report of Special Master Charles W. Bunn, favoring Massachusetts. Massachusetts takes no exceptions to the report of Mr. Bunn and will seek an immediate decision in the case.

POLICE FIGHT STRIKERS IN STREETS OF BILBAO, SPAIN

BILBAO, Spane, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Police fought striking Bilboan workers to a standstill in the streets today and successfully defended a meeting of the Union Monarquia, Spanish political group which has for its purpose defense of the monarchy.

Although there was considerable firing, casualties were few. The mob, which gathered early intent upon preventing the meeting of the monarchists, who had come here from all Spain, broke into an ammunition store and obtained weapons and ammunition for their battle.

The police, after hours of fighting, emerged victorious and ran members of the mob out of the section where the meeting was being held. Three of the leaders, armed with pistols and daggers, were found hiding in the lavatory of a suburban school house and were arrested.

Leaders of the labor unions met tonight to consider whether they should continue their strike, which they called Friday so as to free the workers from their jobs for an attack on the monarchist meeting. The meeting was held despite their efforts, and most of them saw no purpose in continuing the strike.

MORE JUDGES NEEDED TO RELIEVE CONGESTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The appointment of five new district judges at a means of relieving congestion in federal courts was recommended today by senior court judges who met here last week to consider problems of the judiciary.

In a report made public today by Chief Justice Hughes, the judges also recommended that congress make permanent the temporary creation of 1[illegible] district judgeships and one circuit judgeship which will expire under present law upon the death of the incumbents.

The report, which asserted that congestion in federal courts was "a major problem," urged legislation to provide for an additional judge each for southern New York, eastern New York, northern Georgia, eastern Virginia, eastern Michigan and West Virginia.

The temporary judgeships were created in 1922 to handle the increased number of cases and the report said "experience has shown that the need was permonent."

TO CHANGE LICENSING OF EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

HARTFORD, Oct. 5—(AP)—A change in the procedure for licensing employment agencies, has been announced by State Labor Commissioner Harry E. MacKenzie, under which all applicants must present recommendations for persons of character in the community where they intend to operate before their application will be considered. The former practice has been for an investigation of labor department agents, but from now on this will be the second step, the commissioner said The commissioner recently began a sweeping investigation of alleged exploitation of the unemployment by labor bureaus, as the result of which one agency in Hartford has been closed.

PROVINCETOWN AGAIN THREATENED BY FOREST FIRE

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Oct 5.—U—Picturesque old Provincetown was threatened again by forest fire today. The new fire broke out early this morning and swept three square miles on the west side of the town. Three hundred men fought the flames on a mile long front which was only three-quarters of a mile from 400 frame houses.

As the afternoon passed the fire fighters were waging an even battle and seemed likely to control the blaze unless the northeast wind rose higher.

Last week another large wood fire burned close to the village before it was controlle

INTEREST IN WINDHAM ELECTION CENTERS ON OFFICE OF CLERK-TREASURER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 5—With the political machinery of both parties whipped into shape for a hard contest at the polls Monday, there were varying but interesting predictions by party leaders as to the number of votes to be cast in the bi-ennial town elections. There are about 6,500 voters on the lists and it is indicated that both factions will put in much effort to get these to the polls. The bulk of interest in the elections appears to center about the position of town clerk and treasurer. The republicans, backing Harold C. Lincoln believe that after 31 years, during which time Frank P. Fenton, democrat, has held the office, they will elect a member of their party for the office. The democrats are seeking to retain the position within their ranks by electing their candidate, Thomas A. Shea, who was named to fill the vacancy in the candidacy for the office upon the withdrawal of Mr. Fenton as nominee for re-election. The names of William A. Buck, democratic incumbent of the office of first selectman, seeking re-election and Albert L. French, his republican opponent, likewise occupy a prominent place in the political limelight.

As usual the voting will be from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m., and will be carried on at the four districts of the town including the "three Windhams." Elmer M. Young and James J. Lee, party mechanics, have sealed the voting machines in preparation for the voting. Raymond C. Comins, as moderator of the first district, will also be chief moderator for the filing and compilement of final results which is done in the district quarters in the G. A. R. dining room of the town building. Walter J. Costello will be moderator of the second district; Charles R. Cone of the third and William McIntosh of the fourth. The election officials are to be named during the day. The selectmen decided to change the location of the first district polling place from the corridor at the town building to the dining room of the adjacent G. A. R. quarters to eliminate cold drafts that have worked a hardship on the voting officials in the past. Entrance will be as usual from High street.

The election headquarters will be located in the following places: Democratic: First district, 49 High street: second, Harry Kaufman store, 35 Church street; third, Thomas Perreault home, 63 Milk street; fourth, Mrs Flora Maine home, 109 Pleasant street. Republican: First district, Fred Leclaire home, 29 High street; second, Lincoln and Potter office, 60 Church street; third, 160 Ives street; fourth, 144 Pleasant street for women and 124 Pleasant street for men.

CONG. RALLY DAY PROGRAM AND PRESENTATION OF GIFTS

The Congregational Sunday school observed Rally day Sunday by inviting the church, the home department and cradle roll to listen to a special program during the Sunday school hour. The platform was decorated in a color scheme of autumn yellow with quantities of marigolds with a harvest touch of pumpkins and corn, a white cross being the centerpiece. Over the pictures of three of the past superintendents, Deacon H L. Reade, Deacon William Soule and Deacon F. E. Robinson, was a large banner with the words, A Bigger and Better School. Mabel Thatcher dahlias and marigolds were decorations in the parlor, where the cradle roll members and parents sat. The primary department marched around the vestry with drum, cornet, tambourine, cymbals and bells, led by Herbert Webster, Jr., who, when the procession was halted and questioned by Mrs. Walter Benjamin, one of the primary teachers, said they were on their way to Rally day. After an opening service, Miriam McNicol offered a short prayer, and David Goodenough gave the welcome. An acrostic, Rally Day, was given by Evelyn Link Ivy Geer, Eileen Nichols, Paula Link, Mary Gertrude Howe, Helen Bromley, Ruth Richmond and Berylis Philbrook. Allan Whalley told why it was a good plan to carry his fishing rod on Sunday. Dolly's Rally Day was given by Ruth Mae Benjamin; Beatrice Dominique sang For You; Arthur Geer's selection was God Needs Boys; little Mertis Randall took A Small Girl's part. A few examples of different kinds of Sunday school workers were given by Lucille Thompson as reader, Margery Webster, Olga Zegeer, Donald Gill, Milford Mill, Leah Gill, Eva Shorey, Janet Wilcox, Helen Geer, Eunice Webster and Estelle Shorey. Bernice McNicol, dressed as an old-fashioned lady, told what she had missed. The primary department sang God is Love, after which Ralph Goodenough in overalls and straw hat told why he liked Rally day, after working all summer. "Grandma Talks" was by Barbara Payne. A Harvest exercise was given by Corinne Zegeer, Watie Wyatt and Agnes Broadfoot, who laid grain, corn and fruit at the foot of the cross The primary department then gave a demonstration of many things they had learned. A real Philippine village was arranged upon a table and with a map they told many interesting things they had been taught; and sang, also repeating their prayer. The older boys and girls sang a song arranged from Sir Arthur Sullivan, which was a lullaby. A new class was formed at this time with Mrs. Earl Robinson teacher. Ruth Richmond and Helen Bromley were graduated from the primary department, repeating the books of the Old Testament and verses of Scripture, and received diplomas. Six girls from Miss Virginia Goodenough's class received Bible picture book marks, these girls organizing the new class. Several members of the school having had birthdays during September, filled the missionary box with considerable money, according to the number of years they had lived. Lynwood Mills recited A Rule that Works Both Ways, which proved to be an invitation for a collection, which was received by Earl Robinson and Arthur Goodenough. Favors of Zeppelins, airplanes, oak trees, bells, whirligigs and pussy cats were distributed by Donald McNicol and Donald Gill. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. G. F. Goodenough. The accompanists were Mrs. W. H. Payne, the assistant superintendent, and Mrs. Walter Benjamin. The decorations were done by Misses Isabel and Christine Marshall, M. A. Burdick and Bessie Thompson. The arrangements were in charge of the superintendent, Mrs. Everett H. Hiscox, and the primary department superintendent, Mrs. Frank E. Robinson. The attendance was 130, the parlor being filled with the cradle roll babies and their parents. A surprising feature not on the program, was the presentation of a beautiful basket of cosmos and asters, in which were concealed several gold pieces to Mrs. Hiscox. Rev. G. F. Goodenough made the presentation, the remembrance being because of her resignation as choir director, and taking the office of superintendent. There was a large attendance at the church service. The decorations were of lavender and pink cosmos, asters and dahlias. The choir sang special music, under direction of the chorister, Mrs. Walter Benjamin. Miss Sadie Thompson being soloist.

At The Methodist Church

Rally day was observed at the Methodist church during the Sunday school hour the program being in charge of Hazel Johnson. Assistant Superintendent Everett Thornton conducted the program. The different numbers were: Welcome, Clarence Chase; Juniors' Welcome, Alice Rourke; Why We Rally, Maria Clark; A Light, Mabel Winroth; SOS, Dorothy Jeffers; Catching Things, Edith Bartlett; Their Rally Day Song, Clara Jeffers; recitation, Mary Lou Bartlett; What is the Use? Bernard Miner; Rally Day Girls Margaret Chase; recitation, Patricia Winroth; recitation, Alfred Winroth; trumpet solo, Norton Gardiner. Several other children who were expected to take part were unable to do so The church was beautifully decorated with fruit, flowers, vegetables, cornstalks and autumn leaves by Rev. J. W. Carter, Mrs. Dora Johnson, Hazel Johnson and Everett Thornton. Rev. W. C. Prentis, of Plainfield, occupied the pulpit in the morning. Mrs. Bessie Medick sang a solo.

Some few evenings ago, two officials connected with the Connecticut state constabulary came to Jewett City for the purpose of informally meeting the warden and burgesses of the borough and the selectmen of the town, in reference to some police plans that may be promulgated a little later. While here, and during the conversation, one of the officials expressed some surprise to find that one of the men he met was not only a selectman on the town board, but a burgess on the borough's governmental staff. This fact, he said was in all probability the only like case in this state. Now it has become known why such is the fact. It is because this man knows when to pick things and how, with no maybes—What did he do? Well, with the Athletics taking over the first two games in the world's series, Tom picked the Red Birds to win the next two. They did just that. It is reported on good authority that Thomas is now carrying around in his jeans several long greens of attractive denomination, as the result of his unerring baseball vision.

Infant's Burial

A host of friends of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Blake, of Main street, sympathize with them in the death of their son. The baby was buried in Greeneville Saturday.

Pomona Night Observed

Pomona Night was observed at Pachaug grange Thursday with the following program; Song, Smile, Smile, Smile; reading, How the McIntosh Apple Got Started, by Adam Medick, Jr.; vocal solo, 'Neath the Old Apple Tree, by Mrs. Bessie Medick; reading, Preserving Time, by Mrs. Arthur Park; selections, by the Lewis-Brand orchestra; discussion, My Favorite Variety of Apple, by Harold Geer Charles Armstrong, M. H. Bartlett and W. C. Terry; solo, Dream Days by Byron Kinnie; legend of Pomona, written by the Pomona of New London county, Mrs. Marian Hall, and read by the lecturer, Miss Clara Hyde selections, by the Lewis-Brand orchestra; two apple contests participated in by all. There were brief addresses by Worthy Steward Amos Gallup, of Mystic, Gatekeeper Edwin Lewis, and members of the executive committee of New London County Pomona, John Hollowell and M. H. Bartlett, and Lady Assistant Steward Miss Clara Hyde The next meeting of Pachaug grange will be in charge of the home economics committee. BOY FRACTURES SKULL BY FALL FROM MILK TRUCK

Jimmie Larrabee, 18, a helper on Babbit & Gagnon's milk truck, fell from the vehicle on Lenox avenue Saturday morning. Dr. G. H. Jennings was called and the lad was taken to Backus hospital, where it was found that his skull had been fractured. The driver was unaware that the boy had fallen until someone shouted from the street. The boy's condition was reported serious Sunday evening.

STANLEY ARBUCKLE TRIES TO HANG HIMSELF FROM FENCE

Stanley Arbuckle, 37, while temporarily insane, attempted suicide near the railroad station Saturday forenoon. After partially disrobing he tried to hang himself to the top of the pickets on the Aspinook fence. Gus Hassler, who keeps a store nearby, taking note of the man's peculiar actions, saw the attempt at hanging. Rushing across the tracks, Mr. Hassler was able to hold the mad-man until others hurried to his aid. Officer Henry Vegiard later took Arbuckle to Norwich State hospital, Brewster's Neck, where he has previously been a patient.

The first heavy frost of the season came just before sunrise Sunday morning. Flower gardens all through this section were ruined. The mercury touched 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Armin Hoffman and Maurice Burrows, of New York, spent the week end at their summer home in the village. Arthur Burrows, also of New York, will stay here this week.

Mrs. Inez Steadman, of Old Mystic, is visiting Mrs. F. H. Steadman of Haddonfield, New Jersey.

A large number of grange members attended the meeting of Stonington grange Friday evening in the Road Church district. Everett Ingram, of Westerly, entertained the crowd with his tricks of magic. Following the meeting and entertainment program ice cream and cake were served.

Mrs. Belle Tift and Mrs. Grace Cronin were recent visitors with relatives in Bridgeport.

At the Sunday morning service of Old Mystic Methodist Episcopal church Rev. H. E. Moore, pastor, preached on "Jesus, the Healer of Souls." During the service Leslie Haley sang "He Lifted Me." The mid-week service is to be held Wednesday evening in the parish house and at the close of the meeting there will be an official board meeting to consider buying an oil burner for the parish house.

TRAVEL TIDE TOWARD BOSTON SETS STRONGLY THROUGH NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 5—This afternoon hundreds of automobiles conveying members of the American Legion en route to the covention and parade in Boston, Monday and Tuesday, passed through New London. During the forenoon 16 special trains, including a train from Wyoming, ran through this city, the trains occupying the greater part of the forenoon and the passengers comprising a portion of the 600,000 who will be in the line of march Tuesday.

Many New Londoners will go to Boston Tuesday, leaving here on the special train at 7:25 and after witnessing the parade, will be ringside fans at the fight between Primo Carnera and Jim Maloney Tuesday night.

MANWARING HOME BURNED AT OSWEGATCHIE SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 5.—Fire practically destroyed the residence of Mrs. Edna Weaver Manwaring, widow of Selden B. Manwaring and proprietress of the Oswegatchie house and hotel cottages, Saturday forenoon. So fierce did the flames become that the hotel and cottages were threatened with destruction, resulting in assistance being obtained from New London. The roof and second floor of the Manwaring residence were completely destroyed and the ground floor was gutted. Besides the loss of the building, Mrs. Manwaring suffered the loss of jewelry and the greater part of the furnishings. It is estimated that the loss will be close to $30,000. Mrs. Manwaring had a close call from being caught a prisoner in the house and she escaped clad only in scanty attire.

The fire was discovered shortly after 8 o'clock, when Mrs. Manwaring, who had been asleep, was aroused by a crash of falling timber. She realized her danger, for the upper part of the house was a mass of flames, the fire having broken through the roof, and, fanned by a strong wind, was making rapid progress in its destruction. Mrs. Manwaring seized a dressing gown and slippers and, running down, notified the Waterford fire company. On the arrival of the firemen, sparks were being carried to the roofs of nearby buildings, including the Oswegatchie house, so assistance was requested of the New London department. Chief Thomas Shipman and the Pequot pumper responded but before their arrival the Manwaring house was doomed to destruction, although the Waterford company was playing a stream on the blaze. When the sparks ignited the roofs of the summer hotel and several of the cottages, the firemen climbed to the roofs and extinguished the fires as soon as they started. At one time firemen with chemical tanks were stationed on every roof in the path of the flying sparks. Because of the prolonged drought and the roofs being tinder-dry, the entire hotel colony was endangered. The fire, it is believed, originated from one of two causes, the dropping of sparks on the roof of the Manwaring house after a fire had been started in the fireplace by the janitor, or from a defective flue.

Local Catholic Interests

It was announced from the pulpit at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church Sunday that the men of the parish would receive holy communion in a body at the 8 o'clock mass next Sunday. Since October is the month devoted to the Rosary devotion, the four priests advocated more general family recitation of the Rosary, which summarizes the principal events in the earthly life of the Redeemer, while doing honor to His Mother as the model of all womankind. Rosary devotions in this church are held Tuesday and Friday evenings, also after the daily morning masses at 7 and 8 o'clock. At both Catholic churches, the number of sailors attending the Sunday masses, many of them receiving holy communion, is highly edifying to the congregations.

Sabbath Morning Scrap

Charles Ayers and Charles Grant were arrested at 4:45 o'clock this morning by Patrolmen Cornelius Moriarty and Clyde Murphy, charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of an employe of the Talage restaurant, 167 Main street. A short time after the men were locked up the complaint against them was withdrawn.

Edward Strand, New York, was arrested today, charged with begging and intoxication. He was locked up pending the convening of court Monday. Several cases of intoxication are also scheduled to be tried and among the accused is a resident of Putnam

Parked on Pearl St.

H. Reynolds Palmer, 385 Washington street, Norwich, was arrested Saturday night by Patrolman George McCaskey, charged with parking his automobile on Pearl street, which is restricted to parking. The driver was released with a warning. John Meditt, R. F. D., Norwich, was also charged with violation of the city's parking ordinances. He was arrested today when he parked on Jay street in restricted area. Meditt was also released with a warning to heed the city's traffic regulations in the future.

Edward Ashcraft, Montville farm worker, and Fred Furlong, a carpenter residing at 330 Huntington street, were arrested Saturday at midnight when found fighting on Bank street, and had crashed through a plate glass window of the Economy store. The men were arrested by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and today they were released, upon each furnishing a surety on his bond of $50. Ashcraft and Furlong will be in court Monday.

ONCE MORE HENRY WHITE GETS INTO LIMELIGHT

Harry White, a truck driver, residing at 73 Belden street, was arrested Saturday night by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He furnished a surety on his bond of $200 and was released. He will be in court Monday. White was driving on Bank street, and near the corner of Tilley street, his auto crashed against a car owned by William D. Rankin, 360 Jefferson avenue, being driven by W T. Pothel, submarine base. Both cars were damaged. White has a police court record and the last time arrested he was charged with theft, but the count was nolled. The arrest of White at that time was the result of his having accepted $160 which his son found on a circus ground, after the money had been removed from the pocket of former Patrolman Michael O'Neill by a pickpocket and then dropped when the former officer and Sergeant John Casey, Norwich police officer, seized two suspects It later developed that White had received the money and had expended it for the purchase of a second-hand automobile; but the money, being reimbursed, the charge against the truck driver was dropped.

BURGLAR WITH JIMMY SCARED FROM BROAD ST. HOUSE

NEW LONDON, Oct. 5.— Mrs. I. Marder, 239 Broad street, returned home Saturday night to find that thieves had been there, but so far as could be determined, entrance to the house was not gained. When Mrs. Marder discovered the break, she communicated with police headquarters and Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey who investigated. One of the rear windows had been jimmied, but the thief had evidently been scared away before he had opportunity to enter the house.

Motorists Arrested

Autoists ignored traffic signals this afternoon and as a result Max Soltz, 291 Montauk avenue, disregarded the signal at the corner of Bank and Howard streets, and was arrested by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan. The driver furnished a surety on his bond of $15 for his appearance in court Monday morning. Otto Ferry, 24 Main street, Norwich, was arrested by Patrolman Sullivan, charged with passing an automatic traffic signal that was set at danger and with driving a car with defective brakes. Ferry posted a bond of $15.

Herbert Shasha, 7 Hill street, was arrested this evening, charged with passing an automatic danger signal, corner Bank and Howard streets and driving an automobile with defective brakes. He was arrested by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan and posted a bond of $25.

Gamble By Candlelight

Harry Wolfe, 36 Grand street, reported to the police this afternoon that he is owner of a garage at 1 Grand street and that youths have browen into the building recently and have been gambling, having a table erected and providing candle light whereby the gaming is made possible.

Allen Guining, Wollaston, Mass., a sailor, was arrested this evening, charged with passing an automatic danger signal, corner Howard and Bank streets. He posted the required bond of $15.

Lodger Robbed

A Negro waiter, employed by the New Haven railroad, made complaint to the police this afternoon that while he was a lodger at the rooming house, 88 Bank street, Saturday night, practically all of his possessions, which he had in his clothing when he entered the house, were stolen while he slept.

FUNERALS

Dorothy Devona

The funeral of Dorothy Devona, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustina Devona, was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of her parents, 64 Belden street. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

OBITUARY

Thomas R. Sweeney

Thomas R. Sweeney, 68, well known resident of this city many years, died Saturday at his residence, 69 Harrison street, after illness of about a year. He is survived by a brother, Edward M. Sweeney, a sister, Miss Hannah Sweeney and there nieces, Miss Veronica Sweeney, of this city; Mrs David R. Dunham, Baldwinsville, N Y., and Miss Marian Sweeney, of Hartford. He was a brother of the late James, John H. and Timothy Sweeney Mr. Sweeney moved to New London when a young man and for a long time was employed by the former fish dealers, Hamilton & Powers, when that firm was located at the foot of State street. He later entered the employ of the former Rodewald bakery and for many years was employed in the fish department of the former Gage-Crawford company, which firm suspended business about two years ago

Arthur Koss, Niantic and Mrs. William Payne, 9 High street, Mystic, patients at Home Memorial hospital were discharged Saturday.

Marriage intentions filed with the city clerk include: Robert Stanton Barber, draftsman, of Pawcatuck and Miss Elizabeth Winship, 97 Lower Boulevard; Edward Peck, clerk, 261 Huntington street and Miss Anne Antis, saleslady, 35 Riverview avenue.

Successful Tag Day

The Italian Ladies' Aid society conducted a tag day yesterday and the money derived from the generosity of the public will be used in providing Christmas baskets for the needy.

David Ferguson, Niantic; Miss Gwen MacFarren, Connecticut College for Women, Miss Ellen Weiner, Groton and Mrs. Mortimer Murphy, 23 Belden street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Coughlin Case Nolled

Albert J. Coughlin, ice dealer, residing at 23 Stuart avenue, Ocean Beach, was in the police court Saturday charged with reckless driving but the case was nolled. Coughlin was driving his truck on Ocean avenue on Aug. 8 and on the running board were Howard Fern, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Fern, 1119 Ocean avenue and Richard Hammond, 15, son of Mrs. Annie Hammond, 15 Centre street. At the corner of Sherman street, the truck collided with an auto driven by Mrs. Ida Eskridge, of Maxson place and both youths were hurled to the highway. Fern sustained a fractured skull and Hammond received lacerations and contusions Both boys were taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital and Fern was a patient there several weeks. The testimony introduced in court Saturday did not go to prove that Coughlin was guilty as charged.

Fined $50 for Evasion

Homer Starkweather, a dining car worker residing in Plainfield, was charged with evasion of responsibility, upon complaint of Vernie H Walker, 285 Montauk avenue. He was fined $50 and costs. Starkweather was driving on Williams street last Thursday night when the auto collided with Walker's car. Instead of stopping to determine the extent of damage he had occasioned, Starkweather speeded away. Walker supplied the police with the number of the markers attached to the colliding auto and it was ascertained that Starkweather was the owner. The state police were requested to arrest the driver and this was done by Sergeant George Webber. In court Saturday Starkweather said that he did not stop because he was of the opinion that damage had not been sustained by Walker's auto, but the latter car, in reality, was badly disfigured.

Robert Hartnett, 96 Main street, a laborer, was charged with breach of the peace and was given the alternative of spending 60 days in jail or refraining from partaking of liquor Hartnett accepted the second choice and was placed on probation for six months.

DANIELSON

REDLACK-LITCH WEDDING IS BRILLIANT AFFAIR

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 5—Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Westfield Congregational church in the presence of relatives and guests Miss Ruth Margaret Litch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Litch of Stearns street, became the bride of Theodore Rudolph Redlack, resident here and son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Redlack of Minneapolis. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, the pastor.

The wedding was one of the prettiest of the fall season in eastern Connecticut, and the day ideal. Guests began arriving at the church a half hour before the time set for the wedding, passing in under a canopy reaching from the church doors down to the sidewalk.

The bride's attendants all were classmates of her's at Connecticut college. The maid of honor was Miss Jean Burroughs of Madison, N. J., the bridesmaids Miss Ruth Barry of Alden, Pa., Miss Ruth Kennedy of Portland, Me., Miss Jean Hamlet of New London and Miss Rosamond Holmes, of Mystic.

Harold Redlack, brother of the groom, of Philadelphia, was best man, and the ushers were William Murphy of Philadelphia, Robert Eddy of Providence, Dean Hildebrant of New York and Lieut. Edwin Cummings.

The bride's gown was of ivory bridal satin, silhouette style, the veil of Venetian net and point de Venice lace, cap effect. Her bouquet was a shower arrangement of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore a gown of cornflower blue chiffon, with net applique, and velvet hat and slippers to match. Her bouquet was of pernay roses and larkspur. The bridesmaids wore primrose yellow chiffon gowns, brown velvet hats and slippers to match, and their bouquets were of pernay roses.

Fred Puffer, organist, played during the wedding ceremony.

Following the marriage there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The home was handsomely decorated with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Redlack are now away on a two weeks' honeymoon trip by motor. Upon their return they will make their home in a new house on Peckham road.

Mr. Redlack, who is with the Killingly Worsted company at Elmville, is a graduate of the United States Military academy at West Point in the class of 1929.

At the week end Coroner Arthur G. Bill announced the appointment of Dr. Clarence E. Simonds of Willimantic as medical examiner for the towns of Windham, Scotland, Hampton and Chaplin to succeed Dr. Louis I. Mason, recently deceased. Dr. Mason filled the position that Dr. Simonds succeeds to for 22 years.

It was recalled today that as a young physician, more than two decades ago, Dr. Simonds was numbered among those of his profession practicing in Danielson.

This was no day of rest for the politicians, nor candidates for town offices in Monday's annual town election here. And it may be remarked that those who are interested vitally in the welfare of candidate for selectmen did not take much time off for sleep. There's a real battle on here this year, as to fighting for places on the board of selectmen. All of those who study politics closely were agreed today that this is not a year to take anything for granted, as to the outcome of this particular election.

Given a clear day on Monday, the vote is apt to be so large as to be close to a record, outside of a presidential year. The forecast is for all kinds of cutting and slashing on the vote for selectmen. If that proves to be true, and it likely will, it is going to be late Monday night before the final returns are in.

State officers of the Danielson barracks were busy Saturday night in Putnam, Danielson and Brooklyn checking cars in search of defective equipment. Numbers of cars were found to be in such condition as not to comply with the requirements of the state, and the operators of them were given tickets and told to make the necessary repairs. Lights and brakes, and their condition, claimed the attention of the officers in most instances.

Principal Carl Sears of the Goodyear school in a letter to the editor of The Bulletin that appeared in Saturday's paper took occasion to set forth that an item that appeared in this column and relative to impetigo in Goodyear "was greatly exaggerated and has caused the teachers and parents of Goodyear much uncalled for embarrassment," and adds "kindly correct the error at your earliest opportunity."

Principal Sears is talking out of turn, and today Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools had this fact called to his attention and the request made that Mr. Sears make correction.

There was no error in the item published in this column insofar as The Bulletin is concerned. Its information came, in written form, from Dr. W. H. Judson, health officer of the town, and it was printed without elaboration. If Mr. Sears or the Goodyear teachers have any quarrel about the publicity, it most certainly is not to be wished on to this newspaper. If there is any ground for complaint, it rests elsewhere.

Mrs. Stanton A. Winsor died at the week end at her home in North Foster, a few miles east of here. Mrs. Winsor was born in Burrillville, R. I., February 29, 1856, a daughter of Thomas T. and Clarissa J. Hopkins Holloway. Mrs. Winsor is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. Grace Cook and Mrs. William Hayfield.

Miss Gertude Stone of Academy street and Mrs. Merle Bell will be among the Danielson people in Boston for the great parade of the American Legionnaires on Tuesday. Following the parade they are to spend the remainder of the week at Martha's Vineyard.

FUNERALS

Raoul Brunet

Saturday morning the funeral of Raoul Brunet was held from the home on Prospect street, with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. The officers of the solemn high mass of requiem were Rev. John Tobin, M. S., Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Baldwin, M. S. Burial was in Wauregan. The bearers were Nelson Chenail, John Chenail, Victor Lucier, Amadee Vanasse, Joseph Dignault. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Arthur E. Penry

Saturday afternoon the body of Arthur Eugene Penry was taken from the undertaking rooms of Martin T. Burns here to East Killingly, where Mr. Penry died suddenly the past week, for services at the Union Baptist church at one o'clock. Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church was the officiating clergyman. Many attended the funeral, and there were beautiful floral pieces. The bearers were Claude Moran, S. Harrington, Frank Adams and Albert

PUTNAM

KEEN BATTLE EXPECTED AT POLLS TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Oct. 5.—Informal powwows of a political nature were held by members of the town's party leaders this evening for the purpose of lubricating and correcting minute defects in the republican and democratic machines that will set their forces in motion Monday morning when the community's voting strength begins its annual trek to the polls.

The outcome of Monday's election is to be an important one and will put the potential strength of both parties to a severe test. With the balance of governing power now resting in favor of the republicans, but with the democrats holding a goodly share of the important town positions, election returns Monday evening will decide which party will handle the directing reins for the ensuing year. The so-called dopesters are at a loss to explain the possible outcome of the balloting conflict. Two strong tickets are offered the voters, which in themselves are sufficient inducement to draw out a large vote.

The democratic hopes of thwarting another year of republican administration rests with their candidates for selectmen—Edward G. Girard, incumbent, and Francis X. Vadnais. The real contest certain to arrest the attention of every voter is the one to take place between Alderman Vadnais and the republican incumbent candidates, Clarence E. Pierce and William P. Warren. Mr. Vadnais said Saturday evening that he intends to make a determined fight for a berth on the board of selectmen.

Selectmen Pierce and Warren are seasoned veterans of many local political campaigns. Mr. Pierce has been in office for more than a quarter of a century and each year has been returned to his post which he has served so faithfully, by large majorities.

The situation this year is by no means an easy one and both party leaders realize this fact, the understanding being responsible for the well organized army of workers that are to be out scouting at an early hour tomorrow (Monday) morning enlisting support for their respective parties. With the stage completely set for the annual voting spectacle the individuals offering their lots to the public for the various offices are: Assessor, Arthur Tourtellotte, r; Adelard P. Pepin, d; board of relief: Oscar Dugas, r; Daniel Lebossiere, d; selectmen: Clarence E. Pierce, r; William P. Warren, r; Edward F. Girard, d; Francis X. Vadnais, d; agent town deposit fund: Henry N. Benoit, r; unopposed; auditor, Lucius P. Merriam, r; M. Edward Duffy, d; collector of taxes: Alfred Bonneville, d; Lewis T. Champlain, r; constables: republicans, Herman G. Carver, Ernest L. Chandler, Auguste Martin, Peter A. Gardner; democrats, George Basley, Thomas Duquette, David Beausoliel Joseph Durand, Alberic Robitaille; registrars of voters: Herman Carver, r; George Potvin, d; town school committee: Elvira A. Barber, r; Eric H. Johnson, r; John M. Hogan, d; Dorothy J. Bartlett, d; library directors: Ellen M. Wheeler, r; Ernest C. Morse, r; Lionel H. Charron, r; Bernard J. McGarry, d; Valarie Delage, d; Mary E. Keefe, d.

WEDDING.

Lathrop-Wilcox.

A wedding of interest to Putnam and Norwich folk took place yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Methodist Episcopal church when Miss Marion A. Wilcox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth S. Wilcox of Farrows street, this city, and Austin D. Lathrop of Norwich, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lathrop of Montville, were united in marriage by Rev. John E. Duxbury, pastor of the church. The ceremony was unmarked with elaborateness and only members of the immediate families were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop who were popular members of the class of 1930 at Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs are to reside in a new furnished home in Norwich, where the groom is employed.

Brooks. Burial was in the Bartlett cemetery.

There must be something doing up Boston way. American Legion caps were so plentiful in cars going through Danielson today as to indicate an advance movement of troops from everywhere toward a given salient. Local Legionnaires watched this onward movement with particular interest. Being not so distant from Boston, they were not hurrying today to get to that city, but there will be plenty of them on hand from this town to see the parade on Tuesday. It appears that the national convention of the Legion is being held this year in the Massachusetts city. No similar convention of the organization is likely to be held in New England the next decade, it is said, so everyone hereabouts who can so arrange is going to be on hand for this one.

FARMERS' CLUBS TO MAKE INSPECTION TOUR THIS WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 5—Thursday, Oct. 9, has been selected as the date for the field trip of the Brooklyn and Windham Young Farmers' clubs. They are to assemble at 9:30 a. m. at grange hall in Brooklyn. From that point the party will proceed to Windham Center.

From Windham four corners the party will drive to the farm of C. M. Bacon, in the Westfield district of Middletown. Mr. Bacon is the owner of a high producing herd of 20 cows and of young stock, and, in farming has the following sidelines: Four acres of sweet corn for seed, 200 hens, an acre of cauliflower, a good cropping system with large acreage of alfalfa. Mr. Bacon's barn is filled with alfalfa, of which crop he is one of the most successful growers in the state.

At noon there is to be a basket lunch.

From the Bacon farm the party will proceed to the Harold Strickland farm at Middlefield, where a fine herd of grade Guernseys, including 26 cows and 21 head of young stock, is kept. Here again the young farmers will have an opportunity to look over fields on which there are 4 acres of potatoes, two acres of cabbage and a fine poultry plant. On seven acres of this farm a young orchard has been started. The farm is well managed and very successful.

Another farm to be visited on the trip is that of Julian Taylor, also at Middlefield. With only 26 acres of tillable land, Mr. Taylor has developed a profitable dairy business. This farm is reported as an inspiring illustration of what a young man with grit and enterprise can achieve in a short time, notwithstanding heavy financial handicaps.

From the Taylor farm the young farmers will proceed to Gastler Brothers' farm in Durham to look over a commercial poultry plant. Started in 1928, with 355 birds, this place has been developed to its present position with 3,000 birds, barred rocks that are proving profitable with good farm management.

On the places to be visited account book records have been kept for a period of six years. The average farm income of these four places last year was $4,395.03.

Rev. Joseph Normand, assigned this week as a curate at St. Mary's church to succeed Rev. Ernest J. Bolleau, an assistant pastor at the church for the past two years who was transferred last week to the assistant pastorate of St. Anne's church in Waterbury, arrived here Saturday. Father Normand previous to receiving assignment to the Putnam church was a curate at a church in Bristol. Because of the absence of one of the priests at St. Joseph's church in North Grosvenordale this morning, Rev. Father Normand assisted the clergy there by celebrating mass at that church. He will commence his regular duties at St. Mary's church this week.

The drafting of Alexander Gilman by the democrats of the 28th senatorial district as a candidate for senator to oppose Walter C. Brown, of Ashford, is a political gesture of great interest to Putnam. Mr. Gilman, who is a former postmaster and now one of the city's leading business men and civic leaders, locally, will be one of the central figures in the coming state campaign. His name appearing in the democratic column is certain to lend local weight to the strength of the party ticket. Two years ago Mr. Gilman matched political strides with Senator Brown and was defeated by a small margin of votes.

The apparatus of the Central fire station in Union square was called out Saturday afternoon to extinguish a grass fire on a lot owned by S. Kaminsky and located on lower Livery street. The flames spread to an adjoining area cluttered with rubbish which burned slowly and stubbornly for several minutes but without creating any property damage. The firemen worked under the direction of Acting Chief Alphonse Dumas. This was the first call the firemen have received in more than a month.

The annual bazaar and social of the Holy Trinity church in Pomfret was held Friday afternoon and evening in Pomfret hall with a large attendance present. The affair went off very successfully and netted the church a sizeable financial return.

OBITUARY.

Frank G. Tripp.

Frank G. Tripp, for many years a resident of the Harrisville section of Woodstock, died at his home there Saturday evening after a short period of illness. He was in his 59th year. Mr. Tripp was born in Pomfret and attended the schools there. He moved to Woodstock a number of years ago and conducted a dairy farm there. Being of a retiring nature Mr. Tripp had few interests outside his home.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Ella Richard Tripp, he is survived by several brothers and sisters.

Putnam has many of its favorite sons taking part in the big grid-iron contests of the present season. At Providence John H. "Jack" Cronin, former Boston college football luminary, is carrying the pigskin for the professional Steamrollers. Rudolph "Rip" Nelson, star backfield ace of the semi-pro Belding Bulldogs of last season, is now in the line-up of the New York Aggies eleven. Nelson performed for the first time yesterday at Hartford in the New York Aggies-Trinity game and made a favorable impression upon the sports writers of state papers, who devoted much space to his activities. Over at Storrs, Charley Murphy, who cut grid capers at Putnam high school a few years ago, is captain of the Connecticut Aggies squad and is piloting the Sumner A. Dole outfit with the same spirit of aggressiveness that he so ably displayed when playing at end and half back positions for the Blue and White.

John Joliceure of 25 Livery street, Putnam, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital suffering from a fractured leg and injuries to his ankle, which were sustained Friday evening when he was struck by a truck operated by Edward A. Morrissey of Gardner, Mass. Joliceure was returning in a taxi cab from Ballouville. He left the cab at the cross walk on School street opposite the Israel Putnam school, walked to the rear of the cab and into the street. He apparently failed to observe the truck which was coming in a south direction, for he was knocked down at a point about in the center of the street. He was rushed to the hospital where he was treated for his injuries. Sergt. A. J. Sponcey of the local police investigated the accident, but made no arrests.

Rev. U. O. Bellerose announced at all the masses today that the annual parochial enumeration of members of St. Mary's church, to be made by the pastor and curates, will begin this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton T. Mongeon and Miss Helen Mongeon of Pawtucket, were visitors in this city today.

Edward Keefe of New Haven spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Keefe, of Ring street.

Hayden Franklin, student at Northeastern university, in Boston returned to his studies there today, after spending the week end at his home on Chapman street.

Legionnaires from many of the eastern states en route to the national convention of the American Legion to be held this week in Boston, passed through this city today. The ex-servicemen were distinguished by the familiar headgear adopted by the organization, which is known as the "overseas" hat.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

LOCAL CHURCH TO BE SERVED BY PASTOR FROM PLAINFIELD

A special meeting of the North Plainfield Ecclesiastical society and members of the church was held in the vestry, Friday evening, to consider ways and means of supplying the pulpit at the local church the coming year. A letter was read from the clerk of Plainfield Congregational church stating that the church had passed a vote to invite the local church to join with them, their pastor, Rev. Wm. C. Prentiss, to preach here Sundays and to do certain pastoral work. The society voted to accept the invitation and a committee was appointed to confer with a committee from the Plainfield church. This committee on the regular society committee, Edward C. Tillinghast, Stuart Ellsworth and Mortimer Stetson, and the pulpit supply committee, Mrs. George W. Loring, Wilfred Lawson and Mrs. Stuart Ellsworth. This plan is to be tried until January 1, to see how it works out, and if it proves satisfactory it may be continued. The plan is in a line that of other churches in Connecticut have found practical to follow, on account of financial conditions. In the meantime, it is proposed to have the every member canvas as has formerly been done.

Mrs. Eugene Boyle of Sterling, visited her father, Valentine Burdick, Friday.

The Central Fire company was called out Saturday afternoon for a grass fire back of the Farnsworth tenement house, on the Moosup road.

James Rennie is employed at Baltic.

Miss Eugenia Violette was a Norwich visitor Saturday.

TWO JURY CASES UP FOR TRIAL AT TUESDAY'S SESSION OF SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Oct. 5.—Cases assigned for trial at the civil term of superior court to reconvene in this city Tuesday morning at the order of Judge Newell Jennings, of Bristol, are as follows:

To jury—At Putnam, 10 o'clock, a. m. Charles Lincoln vs. Patrick Cahir. Cornelius Shea, Admr. vs. Andrew Link, Jr. and Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

To court—Lillian Lord vs. Lloyd James McMerriman, Thursday, Oct. 9, 1930, at Putnam, 10 o'clock, a. m. Grace V. Wood, et al. vs. Rae D. Wood.

For the convenience of western county members of the bar, Judge Jennings has assigned the following cases for trial at Willimantic on Friday, October 10, following the short calendar session which will be held in that city:

Alfred J. Bousquet vs. Leo Farland, D. A. Tuesday, Oct. 14, 1930, at Willimantic, 10 o'clock, a. m. Gregory Swelki vs. Byron M. Lewis. Romulus Paquin vs. Maude A. Starr and Robert J. Starr.

A special session jury trial will be held in Willimantic on October 21, at which time the Margaret Alice Shea appeal from the probate estate of Dennis Shea will be heard. Judge Jennings will preside at the session. Attorneys for the plaintiff are State's Attorney Hugh Alcorn of Hartford county and Samuel B. Harvey of Willimantic and for the defense, W. A. and J. H. King and Day, Berry and Reynolds. The trial is expected to endure for about a day and a half, according to an explanation made in court Friday by Attorney J. H King, of Willimantic, a member of the defense counsel.

At a session of court to be held on Tuesday, October 28, the civil action instituted by State Officer James F. Carmody of Danielson barracks against William C. Raill, will be tried at Willimantic.

MONTVILLE

John Lynch entertained the members of Maple camp, Royal Neighbors of America, who are in the cast of the play, "Always in Trouble," at his home at Palmertown, Sunday afternoon, following rehearsal. Refreshments were served by Mr. Lynch, assisted by Mr. Tisky. Those present were: Emma Gauthier, Sally Monahan, Mary Conasavage, Pauline and Mary Stepanick, Frank and Stephen Tisky, Edward Sckozylas and Jack Daniels.

A special session of the selectmen and town clerk will be held October 11th and again on October 18th for the purpose of administering the elector's oath to all persons whose names appear on the "to be made" list, providing they are first qualified to be made voters.

Saturday Evening Arrests.

Saturday evening, at the Four Corners, Uncasville, State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh arrested Fred Nagle, of New London, on a charge of breach of the peace and intoxication. State Trooper John Smith arrested Stephen Radgonski, of Montville, charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, and State Trooper William E. MacKenzie arrested Francis Fitzsimmons, of Uncasville, on a charge of intoxication. The accused will be tried before Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church, Wednesday, at 2 p. m.

Masses On Winter Schedule.

At the three masses Sunday in St. John's Catholic church, Uncasville, Rev. Thomas F. Lynch and his assistant priest, Rev. James P. Timmins, of St. Thomas' seminary, Bloomfield, announced that beginning Sunday next masses will be at 8, 9 and 11 a. m., instead of 7.30, 8.30 and 10.30, as has been the custom. The Children of Mary and the Rosary and Scapular societies received communion in a body at the 7.30 mass and all the Sunday school children received communion in a body at the 8.30 mass. The pastor was greatly pleased with the large body of children who received the eucharist and expressed the wish that the children continue this practice every month. Father Lynch spoke of the amount of work that has been done in beautifying the cemetery and he appealed to the people who have dear ones buried there to co-operate with him in keeping the cemetery beautiful.

At The Baptist Church.

The Meaning of Communion was the theme of the sermon at the 10.45 a. m. Sunday morning services at Palmertown Union Baptist church by the pastor, Rev. Raymond F. Bates. Church school was held at noon. At the C. E. society meeting at 6.30 p. m., the pastor began meetings of the Brotherhood class for all the men in the community who are interested. The leader of the C. E. meeting was Mrs. Charles Allen, who took for her subject, How May We Help Folks in Our Community. The pastor closed the day's services at the 7 o'clock Glad Hour with an address on "What Is Eternal Life?" There was special music by the choir.

At Legion Convention.

John Killeen and Thomas Brannigan left for Boston Saturday evening to represent Montville post, No. 12, American Legion, at the national convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carr, of Westerly, were callers on Miss Emma Gauthier.

Among local fight fans who attended the Mays-Aguilar bout in New London Friday evening were Ernest Moss, Joseph Tisky, George Chagnon and Herbert Ungerer.

Walter Morosky left Sunday for Danbury where he will spend a few days with his sister, Mrs. William F. McCarthy.

C. O. Manchester was a business caller in New York over the week end. His mail route was covered by Wallace Potter.

Michael Rheaume of Uncasville, is painting one of his houses on the Norwich-New London highway.

Among those from Montville at the democratic county convention held in Norwich, Saturday morning, were Seth Armitage, Charles E. Ramage, John Doyle, John Lynch and Jerome House.

James McDermott and Peter Morosky motored to Danbury, Sunday.

WESTERLY

HUNDREDS OF LEGION DELEGATES VISIT WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 5.—On Sunday afternoon alone, no less than ten or a dozen special trains passed the Westerly station, Boston-bound, with Legion delegations on board and all regular expresses, some operated in sections, had special cars attached and regular seating filled to capacity. Convention-bound attendants passed over Westerly on Sunday afternoon in airplane fleets also. One formation of five planes was followed by a single plane and shortly after a fleet of four planes and another of three were in sight almost at the same time.

American Legion convention goers, who are passing through Westerly, have used the tent of the Merrill post in the square and have sought information. Those late yesterday afternoon were sent on to Cranston where they could find plenty of camping grounds and tents put up for their convenience. Cranston Legion has set up a tent colony just to the north of the state institution. Some 40 or 50 army tents are there, where those coming from a distance may stop over night and find rest and comfort.

The information booth of Merrill post of Westerly, located on the site of the Rhode Island hotel in the square, is in charge of Capt. Robert Freestone and Corp. William Senior. The tent was kept open until 10 o'clock Saturday and Sunday nights and scores of Legionnaires stopped for information before continuing on to Providence and Boston. A number of out-of-town Legionnaires remained at local hotels.

Westerly Fire Chief Robert Bonner also had the central fire station headquarters building on Union street available and a number took advantage of the opportunity to stop, rest or wash up.

Evening school sessions of Westerly public schools will begin on Tuesday night of this week for the fall term.

On Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock seven-year-old Bernard McIninish, residing at 168 High street, was painfully injured, when he ran into the path of an automobile operated by Crist Dalby, of Marion, Mass., and owned by R F. Hoyet, of 44 East 71st street, New York. The boy was attended by Dr. M. H. Scanlon, who took three stitches in his arm to close a gash. The boy lost a tooth and another one was loosened.

Officer Paul McCarthy investigated the accident and reported that the boy had run out to get a ride on the rear of the wagon of F. R. Cottrell and when he was chased off he ran across the road into the path of the oncoming automobile.

Two instances of petty thievery were reported to the Westerly police the past week-end. Clothing valued at $100 was stolen from the automobile of Max L. Zisquit, of 98 Whitmarsh street, Providence, according to a report made to Officer George L. Madison Friday night. Zisquit, who formerly conducted the Fashion shop on Canal street, had parked his car at Fain's Inn on Main street, while he was having his supper.

Zisquit told the police that when he returned to his machine he found that a blue suit of clothes, a topcoat, leather jacket and three women's dresses had been stolen. There was much other merchandise in the car which was undisturbed.

Returning to his Bradford home from attendance at the United theatre on Canal street, Nicolo Vuono, on Friday night, got into his auto but found that he could not start the machine. Investigation showed that the battery was missing.

Vuono parked his Ford car in the rear of the Rite Bite diner on Canala street while he attended the movies. He reported his loss to Officer George L. Madison.

On Monday evening, republican caucuses will be held in the Westerly town hall for the nomination of a senator to the Rhode Island general assembly and followed by caucuses in the first and second voting districts for the nomination of legislative representatives.

Monday will be election day, when qualified electors of the town of Stonington will assemble in the five voting districts of the town for the election of town officers only, and both the republicans and democrats have full tickets in the field. Both sides are predicting victory and in spite of little pre-election excitement, the heads of the parties are planning to get out a sizeable vote.

Installation of newly elected and appointed officers was made at the regular meeting of Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 19, I. O. O. F., held last week in Odd Fellows hall in the Porter-Loveland block on High street. With Rhoda B. Bliven, noble grand, the officers for the new year were installed by the district deputy president, Elsie W. Stedman, and suite. At the close of the meeting a supper of cream chicken patties, potato chips, rolls, coffee, jello and cake was served to the large number present by Past Noble Grand Rhoda B. Bliven, Angie S. Noyes, Annie S. James and others.

The following officers were installed and committees appointed: Noble grand, Minnie O. Shepherd; vice-grand, Merribel C. Macomber; recording secretary, Mary G. Bamford; financial secretary, Jean G. James; treasurer, Annie S. James; warden, Mabel L. Hall; conductor, Daphne H. Sanders; chaplain, Margaret Hair; R. S. to N. G., Emma M. Gardiner; L. S. to N. G., Louise M. Burdick; R. S to V. G., Lillian T Freeman; L. S. to V. G., Edna H. Johnson; inside guardian, Flora D. Gray; outside guardian, Gertrude E. Holdredge; assistant warden, Elizabeth T. Stillman; assistant conductor, Barbara M. Francis; musician, Mary W. Perrin; past noble grand, Rhoda B. Bliven.

Finance committee, Merribel C. Macomber, Louise M. Burdick, Mabel L. Hall.

Relief committee, Minnie O. Shepherd, Merribel C. Macomber, Elizabeth T. Stillman, Margaret Hair, Mary W. Perrin.

Hall committee for three months, Lucy C. Wilcox, Gertrude E. Holdredge, Edna H. Johnson, Elsie W. Stedman.

Delinquent committee, J. Edwin Gardiner.

Membership committee, Clara S. Macomber.

Follow-up committee, Flora D. Gray.

Entertainment committee, Gertrude E. Holdredge, Edna H. Johnson, Clara S. Macomber, Lucy C. Wilcox, Elizabeth T. Stillman, Daphne H. Sanders.

Infirmary committee, Jean G. James, Elsie W. Stedman, Mary G. Bamford, Emma M. Gardiner.

Floral committee, Mary G. Bamford.

On Saturday afternoon an automobile accident occurred on the Stonington state highway, between Pawcatuck and Solomonville, when Joseph Stevens, of Bridgeport, proceeding toward Westerly, came out of a line of cars and crashed into a machine driven by Roland H. Davis, of Medford, Mass., which was going toward Stonington.

Both machines were damaged in the collision, but no one was hurt. It was estimated that repairs to Davis' machine would cost $100, while Stevens' car was damaged to the extent of $25. The accident was investigated by Connecticut State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh, and Stevens was ordered to appear at the session of the Stonington town court on Tuesday to answer to a reckless driving charge.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Mapes, after occupying their summer home at Weekapaug, R. I., during the past season, left Westerly on Sunday, returning to their home in New York city.

Joseph T. Crowley, Pullman conductor on the New Haven railroad, was a New York visitor over the week-end with relatives in Pawcatuck.

Timothy J. Connors has returned to his home in Pawcatuck, after being in Bridgeport Saturday, where he attended the funeral of a relative.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Parkinson and son Francis were visitors in Norwich on Saturday.

Mrs. Isaac G. Smith was an automobile caller in Norwich on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pickering are enjoying a motor trip vacation of a week, which will take them through the White and Green Mountains.

The regular October meeting of the S. D. B. society was held at the home of Mrs. Helen T. Greene, on Spruce street.

Two cars of the Sperry Rail Service Corp. were at the Westerly station over the week-end, being used on the division for road bed test. The crew staying aboard had a portable radio to get the Sunday baseball game.

LEGION OFFICIAL SEARCHES WESTERLY FOR MISSING MONTANA DELEGATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 5.—Has anyone seen anything of the lost Montana state delegation to the 12th annual convention of the American Legion to be held in Boston Oct. 6, 7, 8 and 9, which left Butte, Mont., a week or ten days ago, about 350 strong? Its disappearance or whereabouts was giving the Legion convention officials in Boston some concern on Sunday afternoon. During the World war much was heard about the "Lost Battalion" which eventually was located, and it was hoped that a similar lot might befall the New England proposed visitors from the Pacific state.

Sergt. Eugene N. Tower of Conahasset, Mass., (in peace times at the Milk street office of the American Tel. & Tel. Co. in Boston as cashier) and attached for the 1930 National Convention Corp., to the liaison departments committee, Basil B. Mulligan, chairman, made the dusty trip Sunday afternoon all the way to the Connecticut-Rhode Island border at Westerly in an almost fruitless sortie to ascertain. His quest in a measure was successful for he found that, in company with the Colorado and Wyoming state delegations, they had all traveled together as far as Washington, D. C., but coming into and out of New York city their trail vanished. Even New Haven railroad officials, onto which system their itinerary led them, gave up their location and Sergeant Tower was despatched to Westerly as a "tracer."

The sergeant admitted that even Boston & Maine railroad officials in Boston were "all at sea" regarding information from in-coming trains and delegations as many changes had been made the last minute (for certain known reasons), and even insistent demands to have trains from western states all routed through Canada, en route to Boston. He arrived in Westerly on the New Yorker express to check east-bound expresses to see if their passenger lists included the Montanaites. He was pretty close when the Boston-bound New Yorker express arrived, for on board were Colorado and Wyoming delegates and they had seen them en route and the liaison committee member proceeded to Providence with them. He had orders to locate the Montana Legionnaires and have them dismount from their iron steed at the Back Bay station, Boston, for a band to meet them and parade them to their Boston headquarters at the Westminster hotel. Boston headquarters were most anxious that service men who had traveled the many miles to Boston should be properly met and escorted to their headquarters.

A sea gull which flew to Mt. Rainier National park recently hovered around a pile of crushed rock, which was the nearest approach to a gravel beach it could find.

TONIGHT'S TOWN MEETING

The affairs of the town should interest every one of its taxpayers and citizens. They are the stockholders in the corporation and it rests with them to say what shall be done and how much shall be spent by the officials who have been chosen to conduct the town's business.

The annual town meeting is the occasion for learning how the business has been conducted during the past year and for determining what shall be done during the coming 12 months. There are the reports and recommendations of officials, statements of probable receipts and expenditures, and a list of items for which appropriations are asked which are outside of the necessary town expenses. Further than that, there is the sum which is asked by the school committee for the conduct of the public schools during the year.

Among the extras there are numbered such things as the payment of the tuition of the Norwich pupils at the Academy, the appropriation for the Otis library, the continuance of the medical and health work in the schools, together with several other matters involving lesser sums or involving the sanction of a town meeting.

It is upon such expenditures as are authorized in the town meeting that the amount of tax for the next year is determined. While the tax will not be laid until an adjourned meeting next spring when the next grand list has been perfected, the amount to be raised by taxation will be determined by tonight's meeting.

It is, therefore, a matter of much importance to all townspeople that they should get to the town hall this evening, if possible, participate in the discussion and have a voice in the determination of what shall and what shall not be done by the town. It is their opportunity to be heard. It is their chance to indicate to the officials what they want, to make inquiries concerning anything they do not understand and to base their votes upon the facts as they are presented.

It is vital business which should not be left to the dictates of a few. The town meeting always affords opportunity to hear and be heard, to get the facts and to get warped claims and ideas untwisted, and all who can do so should be in attendance.

CHILDREN AND BONFIRES

Considering the season of the year and the large amount of leaves that is already filling the highways, there is an early warning in the case of the eight-year-old New Britain girl who was critically burned while playing with other children about a bonfire.

Children delight to watch and play with fire. They like to tempt fate by trying to get just as close as they can to the flames without getting scorched. They like to run and jump through the smoke and the flames to prove that they are ready to take a bigger chance than the rest. The danger involved isn't so much thought of as the possibility of getting the smoke in their eyes. They do not realize the real seriousness of what they are doing when they engage in such stunts, and it is to be presumed that the group of children about the bonfire in New Britain was a characteristic one.

Whether death is going to claim that youngster's life whose clothing caught and was entirely burned from her body remains to be disclosed. If it does it will mean a needless sacrifice of life. If it doesn't it will mean that the child will probably bear scars as long as she lives.

What the New Britain children were doing was what many others are constantly doing during the days of many leaves and bonfires, but highly dangerous, nevertheless. They are not disposed to heed warnings extended to them in a considerate manner. They are concerned solely with their endeavors to have a good time and in many instances may never receive the parental advice that should govern under such circumstances. They play about fires much the same as they run and jump in the streets in the face of motor vehicle traffic.

Too many are the instances where children are permitted to have matches with which to start bonfires without any thought of supervision by elders. Where the match will be applied, the danger to themselves or nearby property is not known. Perhaps the real ground for wonder is that more lives are not taken in such a manner, but certainly those cases like that at New Britain should serve to make parents realize their responsibility and guard their children against such frightful accidents and untimely deaths.

WANTS TO BE SENATOR

Mississippi is a state where good education is quite as important as in any other state in the country. Some might harbor the idea that it is more needed there than in some other states, but it seems to be the view of its governor that anything is all right as long as it is directed by his henchmen.

Governor Bilbo is said to be desirous of being sent to the United States senate. In order to accomplish that, he is endeavoring to build up a machine that will see he is elected. Of course, everything is democratic down there, but a Bilbo machine is going to get Bilbo results.

In recognition of the conditions the governor has begun to operate on the colleges. He has placed in control of the schools of higher learning those who are in sympathy with him and through them he has discharged the presidents of four colleges conducted by the state and the new heads have seen to it that 179 professors have been turned out and their places taken by others. He has made a son-in-law professor of materia medica in the medical college, a power company press agent has been selected for the president of another, and a democratic national committeeman has been put in the place of a distinguished head of the law school.

That Mississippi doesn't like it is indicated by the fact that two-thirds of those enrolled in the freshman class have withdrawn and national organizations are threatening to withdraw recognition of the institutions. Federal aid which has been going to the agricultural and mechanical college is being withheld.

Altogether, it is not a pleasant picture to contemplate for the people of Mississippi. It is a move which should result in securing results diametrically opposite to what the governor desires. Instead of inspiring the people of that state with his methods, he could have done nothing that would convince them more of his incompetece for governor, to say nothing of United States senator. If he doesn't succeed in driving himself out of office it will be a seven-day surprise. Still the senate is a great catch-all.

THE R-101 DISASTER

Once again the world is shocked by an airship disaster, the loss of the R-101, the largest dirigible ever built. When this airship was constructed it was of the same dimensions as the R-100, which visited Canada this year. By cutting it in two and constructing a new section amidship it was considerably lengthened and hopes had been entertained of putting it into regular service between England and India. It was while on the initial trip, with prominent individuals aboard, that it struck and exploded.

In connection with flying, it has been felt on many occasions that the dirigible came as near as anything to furnishing safety in the air. Many who would not trust themselves in an airplane have been disposed to risk a flight in an airship. This was because it was felt that there was less probability of a dirigible crashing.

Still it has been the experience with such aircraft that just as bad accidents have occurred with them as with flying machines. The Shenandoah demonstrated how quickly such an airship can collapse, while the British have suffered the loss of several such gas bags, and even this latest and largest had been regarded with much uncertainty.

To have the R-101 crash was bad enough, but to have the horror of fire added to it was deplorable. The severe storm is given as the initial cause of the disaster and that is one of the serious handicaps for such airships. Inquiry will probably be made to learn as many details as possible concerning the crash, for in some manner hard to understand some managed to escape and will probably live.

Just how much of a black eye this will give to dirigible construction is uncertain. It is by no means the first disaster, even though it represents the last effort in British construction. In the past, disasters have taught valuable lessons in construction, and it is not improbable that such will be the result in this case.

DEMOCRATS NAME AYLING

The democrats in probate convention Saturday are to be commended for their decision to nominate Judge Ayling to succeed himself as judge of probate. This is in keeping with action which they have taken on previous occasions and a recognition that efficient service by an experienced man is worthy of endorsement.

Judge Ayling by this action is as good as elected. He has held the office for a quarter of a century and handled the business before him in such an excellent manner as to convince the people of this district that he is the man for the place. There ought to be no thought of allowing such an incumbent to be subjected to the possibility of being thrown out of office by the uncertainties of politics and an untried and inexperienced opponent dropped into the office simply for partisan reasons.

There has been a growing determination to keep the judicial positions entirely free from politics. Republicans have endorsed democrats who have demonstrated their fitness, and Norwich is one of the districts where the democrats have appreciated the wisdom of such action. This is contrary to the orders issued by the new head of the democratic organization in this state, and against the views of the democratic candidate for governor, but it is in accord with democratic action in other probate districts and one that will commend itself to the democrats of any district who stop to give consideration to the importance of having the right men, and trained men, for such important places.

Instead of being told what they must do, the democrats of the Norwich probate district have displayed better judgment. It was the thing to do.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Town meeting night.

The man on the corner asks: What effort are you making in behalf of rain?

If the temperature of Venus gets to 26 below zero, she cannot be suffering from high blood pressure.

It is said by the Bruening government in Germany that it can take care of the situation. It is certainly to be hoped that it can.

Bear in mind that there are important questions before the annual town meeting tonight which call for the attendance of as many taxpayers and voters as can get there.

THE VACANT CHAIR

Dot welcomed Ellen Freemont's invitation to join the evening section of the Woman's Literary club because it afforded her escape once a week from her own fireside. She was slightly amazed at the audacity of her desire, but memory of the exasperating habit that was growing on Bob of treating her in the evening as if she were a mummy or a piece of furniture reassured her. For a long, long time she had been at her wits' end to ward off this gulf of silence with which Bob was gradually surrounding himself.

Without fail, as soon as dinner was finished, he barricaded himself behind the evening paper and discarded the slightest pretense of conversation. At first fears had assailed her; maybe he was ceasing to care for her; perhaps the sight of her was becoming so obnoxious to him that he drew the paper before his eyes as he might have drawn a curtain. A craving for retaliation had induced her to become uncommunicative like Bob. She would show him that she could be as scathingly silent as was he, but the little experiment had proved far more tantalizing to herself than to her husband. He appeared neither to notice nor to be affected by her reticence. Dot welcomed Ellen's invitation.

"Maybe my vacant chair by the fireside will speak in my behalf," she sighed. She prepared a delicious dinner. She was determined to leave him for the evening, but she would leave him well fed.

"That's a ripping pudding," remarked Bob. "Any more in the kitchen?"

Dot was comforted by the remark. Bob had always praised her cooking. That was one point in her favor. Or was it? As she refilled his dish in the kitchen she remembered a man who had divorced his wife and married a flapper but who persisted in remarking at random among his friends that he missed his first wife's biscuits at breakfast. No, it was far from satisfactory to feel that one's only hold on one's husband was one's culinary art. With flagging spirits she watched Bob dispense with his second helping of pudding.

"I guess nobody's perfect," she observed.

Bob looked up, spooned a raisin, shrugged his shoulders.

A slight shiver trembled through Dot. How to begin about the club? Heretofore she had slightly resented the fact that Bob discounted the importance of club life. But now, suppose that he should say to her, "Sure, go ahead, join it," would she welcome his enthusiasm?

While she was groping for balance in thought and action Bob swallowed his last bit of pudding, leaned back in his chair with a satisfied air and yawned. "On the way home this evening Ed Hennessy and I were discussing the perfect wife. We decided a good woman was like a good game, went more or less by a set of rules, but had aggravating possibilities. Ed says Rose is as perfect as a peach about things that seem to matter, but it's what she does that doesn't seem to matter that gets his goat."

"And what," demanded Dot, "is it that doesn't seem to matter yet matters so much with Ed?"

"Evenings," grunted Bob. "She won't let him alone of an evening. If she hasn't got some sort of a party planned she talks the life out of him, and if she doesn't talk she expects him to. She doesn't seem to realize that he's been gabbing all day and would appreciate a little rest. If she keeps it up, some of these days I'll bet Rose'll have a vacant chair to sputter to instead of a husband."

"And what did you say?" inquired Dot.

"I said, 'Ed, you ought to have a wife like mine. She used to fuss around a bit now and then; but of late it seems as if she's come to understand just what a tired guy needs. Our evenings are models of peace and domestic contentment.'"

"No, you didn't, did you?" murmured Dot incredulously.

"Sure," replied Bob earnestly. "Well, I guess I'll go in by the fire and read the paper."

"Oh, Bob," Dot called a moment later from the kitchen doorway, "if Ellen Freemont telephones tell her something unexpected has come up, that I'm awfully busy and that I'll call her tomorrow and explain."

"Umhum," promised Bob, and settled himself comfortably behind a copy of the evening paper.—Chicago News.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Greedy Selfishness

Naught so selfish is as greed;
Careless of another's need.
—Old Mother Nature.

These were busy days under and in the beechnut trees. Yes, indeed, these were busy days. All the Squirrel family, including Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, Rusty the Fox Squirrel, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Striped Chipmunk, Impy the black Chipmunk and Timmy the Flying Squirrel, were there. The latter came after dark; but all the others, with their mates, were on hand with the coming of daylight and remained until the Black Shadows came creeping out. Buster Bear got around once a day. Lightfoot the Deer and Mrs. Lightfoot were around, sometimes two or three times in a day. Thunderer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse feasted there daily. Sammy Jay came often. Little Whitefoot the Wood Mouse got his share every night. Even Bobby Coon and Unc' Billy Possum visited the nut trees. So you see it was very busy season.

Now, Buster Bear and Lightfoot the Deer, the largest of the visitors, seemed not to care how many others might be enjoying the feast. It was a good deal that way with Bobby Coon and Unc' Billy Possum. So long as no one interfered, these folk did not care how many others might be there. But it wasn't so with some of the smaller people. Happy Jack Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel were continually quarreling. Chatterer was especially quarrelsome. Both were as mean as they could be to the Chipmunks. Whenever they happened to be on the ground and Striped Chipmunk, or Impy the black Chipmunk, appeared, Chatterer and Happy Jack would forget their own quarrel and try to drive the Chipmunks away. It was only when Happy Jack and Chatterer were up in the trees that the Chipmunks had any peace at all.

"I don't see what is the matter with Happy Jack and Chatterer," said Impy to his father, Striped Chipmunk. "If I happen to pick up a few nuts near Buster Bear, he doesn't say anything. Lightfoot the Deer doesn't say anything if I find some nuts right beside his nose. Mr. and Mrs. Grouse never say a word. But those two cousins of our seem to hate to see me get a single nut. I don't understand it."

"It's selfish greed," replied Striped Chipmunk. "Buster Bear, Lightfoot the Deer, Mr. and Mrs. Grouse, Unc' Billy Possum and Bobby Coon take only what they can eat at the present time. They do not store up food. So, as long as there is enough for the present meal, they don't care how many you and I take. Chatterer and Happy Jack have storehouses just the same as we have and so they want all the nuts. It's selfish greed and nothing else."

"Is that so?" barked a sharp voice, and Striped Chipmunk dodged just in time to avoid the rush of Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

"Yes, that is so!" retorted Striped Chipmunk. "And all the Green Forest knows it. Never in my life have I seen any one as selfish as you and Happy Jack. If you had your way, the rest of us would starve and you would have so much you wouldn't know what to do with it. But as long as there are nuts here, I'll have my share and don't you forget it!" He tucked another brown nut into one of his cheek pockets as he spoke.

This so angered Chatterer that he made a rush at Striped Chipmunk and then chased him for some distance. Meanwhile, Impy the black Chipmunk hastily stuffed his pockets in his cheeks with a lot of little brown nuts that Chatterer had found just before he drove striped Chipmunk away. By the time he returned, Impy had disappeared. So, of course, had the little brown nuts. Such a rage as Chatterer flew into then! He shrieked "Thief!" at everybody in sight and no one paid the least attention to him. Meanwhile, Impy had hurried home to empty his pockets. He told little Mrs. Impy, who was there ahead of him, all about Chatterer.

"Selfish greed doesn't pay," said she, nodding her head sagely.

YOUR HEALTH

The Fear Of Knowing (Continued)

By Hart Ellis Fisher, M. D., Chief Surgeon, Chicago Rapid Transit Company, Chicago.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In our discussion yesterday we named the various origins of fear and worry and we stated that improper functioning of organs due to fear and worry are rarely ever relieved by medicine or by the surgeon's knife. Fortunately, however, the medical profession is cognizant of the effect produced on mind and body by fear, and takes the necessary steps to ferret out the underlying cause of the trouble. Many so-called neurotics are victims of fear and worry. Their symptoms are genuine to them, even though they may appear ludicrous to the uninformed. The ability to detect these underlying factors is a real test of any doctor's ability.

In our previous discussion we left our fearful young adult worrying as to whether he would get on in the world. At last we find him married and experimenting the identical fears that his parents did, about the advent of an heir. So the cycle goes on and on. The prevalence of the fear element is again demonstrated. The child's fear for its offspring is in proportion to that felt by his parents for him. On the other hand, however, we find a great many people who are normal, but fear that they have some physical defect in their makeup. They hesitate to seek proper medical advice and learn the truth about themselves. In reality, they are not afraid of the truth, but they fear they will be given incorrect information. Happily, the average individual has enough confidence in his family medical advisor to bring him to the doctor instead of keeping him away.

Experience during the past eighteen years has shown that the greatest percentage of physical defects which were found while making periodical medical surveys of some of the large public utility companies in Chicago, have been easily corrected. The knowledge that a man is sound in body and mind is a source of great relief and satisfaction, and brings with it a soothing peace of mind.

The things that people fear and spend a great deal of time worrying over oftimes never really materialize. When they look back over the things that gave them great mental concern and never happened, they realize how futile and useless it all was and vow to shape their future lives with the omission of worry. Then something of an entirely new nature will arise and certain conditions develop which will cause them to lose confidence in their past experience and the old bugaboo of fear and worry is back again. This time it may be ushered in by baseless gossip, and ignorant statement, or it may be the product of a dishonest mind, but nevertheless it is there. When a person feels ill or develops some unusual condition and confides in others, many times he is at once assured with some front of authority that they knew such and such a person who had the same thing and died from it. Many times at social gatherings one hears someone relating harrowing details of his operations and illnesses. A susceptible person, hearing such tales, easily becomes fearful that the same thing will occur to him, and he loses sleep worrying over the possibility that he might some day be a victim of the same thing.

People should not hesitate to seek the advice of their family physician when they are fearful or worried over some condition of their physical makeup. Your doctor is your medical friend. He will be sympathetic and in many instances may be able to explain away the conditions. As the human body ceases to become a mystery, as health education develops, our children will inherit light and knowledge and their minds and bodies will be free. By calm action they will so shape their lives that there will be less hurry and worry in the future, preventing many needless illnesses and premature deaths.

After all, this has been the doctrine of the Gorgas Memorial Institute from its inception.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—Nobody seems to know just what inspired Henry Prather Fletcher of Pennsylvania to insist on taking a second oath of office when he was sworn in as chairman of the revamped tariff commission.

It set out that the affiant had not bribed his way into office. And as nobody suspected such had been the case, Mr. Fletcher's little play caused some comment.

As one of the most thoroughly trained and experienced career diplomats the United States has yet turned out, he could have been expected to conform to precedent. That's what diplomats seem to worry most about. Yet there was no precedent for the dual oath-taking for tariff commissioners.

Thirty Years of It

Still there are other unprecedented things about Fletcher's career. He has known how to get forward in the various phases of his life.

Here is a young Pennsylvania lawyer who made the war with Spain a stepping stone to numerous important federal jobs for the next three decades. Except for about a year in 1920-21 and for the months since his resignation as ambassador to Italy, Henry Fletcher has been a sworn officer of the United States continuously since 1898.

He began with his oath of enlistment in Colonel Roosevelt's celebrated Rough Rider outfit, then became a volunteer doughboy "looie" in the Philippines. A regular army career seemed in prospect. But Fletcher had learned Spanish in Cuba and the Philippines and had another idea.

He hopped into the diplomatic service as a junior secretary at Havana. And except for two brief hitches in Peking, all the rest of his career service as a diplomat with with folks of Latin origins.

As ambassador to Chile, Mexico, Belgium and Italy he has had opportunity to learn Latin complexes.

Into Politics

Just how all that is to be particularly useful to him as chairman of the tariff commission is hard to see. But this much is quite clear. Back in 1920, when he resigned as ambassador to Mexico during President Wilson's time only to come back as undersecretary of state under President Harding, Fletcher put career diplomacy behind him in favor of political diplomacy.

He was supposed to harbor hopes of being the Hoover secretary of state in 1928-29.

And when that failed, Fletcher resigned as ambassador to Italy at a time when his action indicated he was hoping for a governorship or seat in the senate.

Neither of these worked ont and the tariff commission job came along.

Minerva Hunter

Nora Lester looked with approval at the foods arranged so carefully on the table in the kitchen. "All ready for the last minutes of work before dinner," she mused. I'll get a cloth from the chest in the hall and cover these things."

"Go, go," gurgled Baby Ben and he toddled jerkily into the hall at his mother's heels.

"Mother's precious boy!" Nora exclaimed. "You help me, don't you? You were with me while I cleaned each room in the whole house and with me when I cooked. Some mothers think it a bother to have their babies with them. You help me, Baby Ben."

"Ah," Baby Ben agreed. With a final lurch he grabbed his mother and looked up expectantly.

As usual, Nora stooped and picked him up.

Just then a loud noise sounded in the kitchen. Nora jumped and held Baby Ben closer. A cloud of stifling dust came through the kitchen door. Nora ran to look. A great hole gapped in the ceiling and the delicious food upon the kitchen table was filled with the fallen plaster.

Nora wanted to cry, but she knew there was no time for that. She closed doors quickly to diminish the spread of dust to the rooms. She must hurry. The train would reach the station in twenty minutes and in another twenty minutes Big Ben would arrive with the guests.

Boxes to remove the fallen plaster—that was the first thing. Two large cartons were in the basement. Nora placed Baby Ben in his crib and began her hurried work.

"Ah!" said Baby Ben in protest.

"Help Mother," Nora said soothingly. "Stay in your crib."

"Go, go," the baby insisted, holding up his arms.

"No, no. Mother can't take you," Nora explained and she hastened away.

Baby Ben wailed. Never before had his mother refused to let him go with her and "help." And to be left alone when awake, that was new and unbelievable to him. He could not understand that the dust would stifle him and soil his clothes and that his mother had enough to do without dressing him again. To Baby Ben the situation was new and unpleasant. He howled.

Nora had to let him howl, though the sound of his great distress added to her burden. Suddenly she realized that heretofore she had considered having the baby with her a help. She had insisted it was the greatest help to look up from her work and see his smile. She had not thought whether or not she was helping him. Now she knew she was not helping the baby in keeping him with her every minute. Even babies must learn to be alone sometimes and rely upon themselves. "I have had this helping business all crooked in my mind," Nora reasoned, "folks who cannot help themselves and entertain themselves are little help to others. Baby Ben will have to learn to entertain himself. He must learn to play alone. Then he will not be so unhappy when emergencies come and I cannot be with him."

WAY TO GET AT A COLD IS THROUGH THE BOWELS

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Hall Organ Company, West Haven.

The Hall Organ company of West Haven, originated in 1897 as a partnership composed of Harry Hall and Frederick Campkin. This partnership engaged in the reconstruction, rebuilding and general repair of pipe organs, and was located in a small factory on Water street, New Haven.

In 1896, the construction of new organs was started, shortly after George A. North became associated with the partnership as business manager. The first contract was for an organ for the Congregational church, West Medway, Mass.

In 1912, the Hall Organ company was incorporated and a new and modern factory built in West Haven. From time to time, this factory has been enlarged and new equipment installed to take care of increasing business.

The business has grown during the past 30 years until the company now has a national reputation, and organs are being furnished not only for every state in the Union but also for the Canal Zone and the Bahama islands.

In 1915 an organ was exhibited at the Panama exposition for which the company received the gold medal award. Before the close of the exposition, this organ was purchased by a church in San Francisco, where it is still being used.

In 1919, the vice president and sales manager, C. B. Floyd, joined the company. In December 1926, Harry Hall withdrew from the company because of ill health.

The present officers of the company are: George A. North, president and treasurer, C. B. Floyd, vice president and secretary; Frederick Campkin, vice president, and Edward H. North, factory manager.

LIQUOR VIOLATION ARREST ON WEST MAIN STREET

Michael Lasienski, 35, a boarder of Mrs. Mary Morris at No. 215 West Main street, was directly responsible for Mrs. Morris' arrest early this (Monday) morning on a charge of violation of the liquor law. Lasienski was arrested about midnight Sunday on a charge of breach of the peace. He is alleged to have beaten Mrs. Morris' 14 year old daughter at her home.

After Lasienski was placed in a cell in police headquarters Sergeant John Casey sent the arresting officers, Patrick Snahan, Peter Vuono, together with Eugene Calkins, to summons Mrs. Morris as a witness against Lasienski. Upon their arrival at her home they found that Mrs. Morris had broken several bottles of alleged liquor in the yard. Further investigation resulted in the officers finding a still in another part of the yard and a large quantity of illicit liquor in the house.

The contraband included two and a half gallons of liquor, 19 small and large bottles of home-brew beer, a dozen small and large empty bottles, and 50 gallons of mash in a barrel. The mash was destroyed by the officers, while the other evidence was taken to police headquarters. Mrs. Morris is held at the police station under bonds of $1,000 for her appearance in the city court this (Monday) morning.

RED TAGS PLACED ON WILLOW STREET PARKERS

Four motorists had their machines redtagged on Willow street Sunday evening for violation of the city ordinance in relation to parking. All four drivers left a bond of $2 at police headquarters to cover the fine which will be meted out this (Monday) morning.

WEDDINGS.

Langworthy-Bussey.

At 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon Miss Natalie Frances Bussey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Bussey, of No. 22 Hawthorne street, was united in marriage with Donald Alan Langworthy, of Brooklyn, N. Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne L. Langworthy, of Westerly, R. I. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents and was performed by Rev. A. N. Foster, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist. The double ring service was used. The home was attractively decorated with dahlias and autumn foliage.

After the ceremony there was a reception for the immediate families and intimate friends of the couple. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was beautifully gowned in aquamarine blue chiffon, her slippers were of pale crepe de chine, and she carried a shower bouquet of garden flowers. Miss Villa Cutler Bussey, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid. She was gowned in Burgandy chiffon with lace, wore slippers to match and carried a shower bouquet of garden flowers. Emerson Tower of Meshanticut Park, R. I., was the best man and Miss Marion B. Bradley of Springfield, Mass., rendered the wedding march. An unusual feature was that the bride made the rings as well as the gifts for the atendants.

The bride is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1923, and attended the Norwich Art school. She has been employed at the studio of Edward E. Oakes, of Boston, manufacturer of hand wrought jewelry. The groom is a graduate of Rhode Island State college and attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is employed by the New York Telephone Co.

After a wedding trip through the White Mountains and to Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Langworthy will reside at No. 3601 18th avenue, Brooklyn. They will be at home to their friends after November 1st. The bride received numerous and beautiful wedding gifts

President F. M. Holmes of the North & Judd Manufacturing company at New Britain, was elected treasurer of the corporation to succeed the late Samuel McCutcheon at a special meeting of the directors Friday afternoon. Mr. Holmes who is a native of this city, will fill both positions.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Emerson motored from Providence Sunday and with Mrs. William B. Birge were dinner guests, at Norwich inn, of their cousin, Miss Stella Bell.

Mrs. William H. Palmer and Mrs. Gardiner Greene have returned, after several days' stay in New York.

Mrs. Eben Learned and Miss Constance Learned have closed Scallop Shell, their cottage at South Chatham, Mass., after the season and are at their home on Broadway.

Sunday at 6 o'clock, Mrs. Albert L. Reynolds entertained about twenty friends at tea. The decorations were fall flowers. Mrs. Albert Lewis served coffee and Mrs. Gardiner Greene poured tea.

An outdoor luncheon in Mohegan park Saturday opened the season of the Norwich College club. Mrs. Russell H. Waldo was chairman of the committee of arrangements.

At the Saturday evening dinner-dance at Norwich inn, Mrs. Philip A. Johnson entertained in compliment to her sister, Mrs. Howard G. Wheeler, of Swampscott, Mass.

Miss Russell and Miss Sarah B. Russell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who have been guests of Mrs. Philip T. Welles, left Saturday to motor to Stockbridge in the Berkshires, where they will spend October at the Red Lion inn.

Saturday afternoon, when Admiral and Mrs. Frank T. Arms, of New London, gave a reception to announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Grace Kingsbury Arms, to C. Philip Donnell, Jr., of Norfolk, Va., Mrs. John Middleton Holmes, of Norwich, was among those assisting at the tea. Those attending, to express best wishes to Miss Arms and to congratulate Mr. Donnell, included from Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. L. Goffe Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Holmes and H. Reynolds Palmer.

An artificial coffee oil has been placed on the market.

FORESTRY MEETING GIVES ENDORSEMENT TO ROCKY NECK BEACH PAR

Strong endorsement of the proposition that the state acquire for its park system the property known as Rocky Neck beach near Niantic in the town of East Lyme was given Saturday afternoon when the fall field meeting of the Connecticut Forest and Park association was held at the beach with attendance of about 100, which included a good-sized delegation from Norwich.

With President Theodore S. Woolsey of the state association introducing the speakers, the meeting was held on a wooded slope overlooking a broad parking space field.

Declaring that the entire state's "natural heritage of open shore front" is being rapidly reduced, W. O. Filley, forester of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station, recommended that the state acquire parks on Long Island sound to serve the needs of its citizens.

"Shall we be satisfied to envy the fortunate family that possesses an estate or even a building lot that fronts on Long Island sound?" he asked "The cities along the sound have provided for the needs of their people with such fine shore parks as Ocean Beach at New London, Lighthouse Point at New Haven and Seaside Park at Bridgeport . . . but the simple fact is that no municipal beach in the state is large enough, or has facilities adequate, to take care of all comers, including many visitors from other states."

Mr. Filley called attention to the fact that the state park commission in 1915 reported to the general assembly that there were five sites on the sound admirably suited and then available for state park development. Hammonassett beach was purchased by appropriation of the legislature and the commission acquired part of Sherwood island in the town of Westport, but because of local opposition, he said, this tract is still undeveloped and incomplete in area. A group of citizens has bought land at Rocky Neck with the view of holding it until the general assembly can act on a purchase for a state park

"Hammonassett beach is the best argument the park commission can offer for more state parks on the seashore," Mr. Filley stated. "Here at Rocky Neck there is an opportunity for such a park and the time is ripe for its acquisition. With less area than Hammonassett, but with a finer beach, we cannot afford to let slip this chance to save a portion of our heritage. It will have the unqualified support of the park commission and, we hope, of the next governor. All that is needed to assure success for the project is an organized effort on the part of New London county."

Lieut.-Gov. Ernest E. Rogers of New London spoke of the advantages of the site afforded and of the spiritual value to the people in recreational spots like this and of the great asset which its state park system is to the state.

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins of this city gave his warm endorsement of the plan to have the state acquire this property so as to afford a public beach for this southeastern part of Connecticut.

John J. O'Rourke, secretary of the Willimantic chamber of commerce, was another speaker, reporting that the Willimantic chamber and the Willimantic Exchange club were both in favor of having the state secure this beach property, declaring that Windham county would be found solidly behind the project when the time for action came

Among those attending from this city were Arthur L. Peale, a member of the state park commission, Miss Mary E. Bundy, secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, which is endorsing the proposal for a state park, and a delegation from the Woman's City club of Norwich.

BOZRAH PASTOR CONDUCTS SHELTERING ARMS SERVICE

Impressive religious services were held Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the Sheltering Arms, with Rev. George H. Strouse, pastor of Bozrah Congregational church in charge. Mrs. Albert J. Bailey, soprano at this church, and Dr. Charles H. Lamb, tenor of Norwich Town, provided special music. Miss Alice Bishop, organist at Bozrah church, was the piano accompanist. The service opened with three hymns. After Rev. Mr. Strouse read the Scripture lesson, Luke 5, Mrs. Bailey and Dr. Lamb sang effectively as a duet, In Heavenly Love Abiding, by Holden. After the prayer by Rev. Mr. Strouse, Mrs. Bailey, in splendid voice sang Beautiful Land of My Dreams, by Blount. In his address, the speaker dwelt largely on two texts, that of Michael Farady, I Know Whom I Have Believed, and Hudson Taylor's great text, Finished Work of Jesus on Calvary. Dr. Lamb then sang in pleasing voice Calling Me Home to You, Dorel. Prayer and benediction by Rev. Mr. Strouse brought the service to a close. There were nearly 40 attending the service as there were a number of visitors.

PRIEST TRANSFERRED FROM WILLIMANTIC TO TAFTVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 5—Rev. Hormisdas C. Belec, assistant priest at St. Mary's church, has been transferred to Sacred Heart church at Taftville, as assistant, according to the list of 17 transfers and changes of priests announced for the Hartford diocese by Bishop John J. Nilan. Rev. Father Belec has been stationed in this city for the past six years during which time he has been especially influential in the development of social and athletic work among the boys of the parish.

Fatheer Belec is replaced here by Rev. Ubald Laurion who has been assistant priest at St. Ann's church, Hartford for many years. The changes took effect Saturday.

For Synagogue Services

Rabbit Theodore Shabshelowitz has been called suddenly to New York because of illness in his family so that the Community synagogue will have Rabbi Eisenberg of the Jewish Theological synagogue of America to conduct the Succoth holiday services and deliver the sermon. The holiday observance begins with the service at 7:30 this (Monday) evening. There will also be services on Tuesday at 8 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. and on Wednesday at 8 a. m. The topic of the sermon Monday night will be "The Meaning of Succoth and the Succoth." Rabbi Eisenberg comes highly recommended by the seminary, is a graduate of Columbia college and a man of great learning.

CHRIST CHURCH MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR THURBER

Next Wednesday evening at 7:45 o'clock, a memorial service is to be held at Christ Episcopal church for a former Christ church boy, Christopher C. Thurber, acting as Near East Relief director at the time of his death in Greece on May 31, 1930.

Arrangements are being made to have Mr. Thurber's companion, Rev. Harold C. Jaquith, as the principal speaker for the service which will be for the general public and at which a large attendance is anticipated. Announcement of further details for the service will be made.

Mr. Thurber was born in Norwich. He gave his life for his fellowmen in the Near East service and when he died this year in the city of Athens he was buried in Greek soil at his own request. The day of his funeral the entire Greek nation joined in honoring him. He is the first American in Greek history for whom a national funeral and national mourning have been decreed.

During the nine years of Mr. Thurber's association with Near East Relief, his career was brilliant and marked by spectacular achievements. He directed the transportation of 7,000 little children from Swas, Turkey, across mountains and snow to the Black sea and accomplished in doing so, a miracle of feeding and organization. Another time, in Constantinople, he had charge of 11,000 typhus-stricken refugees in the Selemic barracks of Florence Nightingale fame. There again, he performed a notable piece of organization.

Mr. Thurber's chief concern, however, always was the orphan children. With them and for them he worked, night and day, sharing their hunger and vicissitudes.

In the varied fortunes of war, while carrying on his work, he was so severely bastinadoed that he was lamed for the remainder of his life; later the same city whose soldiers beat him, gave him high official honors—those of a general.

Mr. Thurber's most recent scene of action was in Greece where he organized homes for working boys; homes for aged and destitute refugees; a deaf-mute school, the first in all Greece. When he died he was engaged in planning a programme for Near East foundation, the new organization formed by the trustees of Near East Relief to carry on a broader, constructive work among the peoples of the Near East.

High above the city of Athens, at a town called Soteria, stands a gleaming white building on a green hillside. It is the Thurber Memorial pavillion, dedicated to the memory of Christopher C. Thurber. There will be carried on the work he began for the care and treatment of tubercular children. Connecticut hopes to raise a fund to be known as the Thurber fund for the continuation of Mr. Thurber's work. It is hoped that the city where Mr. Thurber was born will heartily support this memorial to her famous son. An offering solely for this purpose will be taken at the service.

OTIS LIBRARY YEAR LARGEST IN HISTORY

Otis library had a circulation of 142,249 volumes in the year just closed, which was 17,543 more than the preceding twelve months and made a new record for the library, according to the annual report of the librarian, Mrs. Rosina S. Hamilton. There were 2,250 new books purchased during the year. The daily average of issues was 471.

In her report, Mrs. Hamilton says in part:

Otis library which has just completed its eighty-second year of service to the community, and which has been free to all inhabitants of the town for thirty-nine years has been used more in the past twelve months than ever before. The number of volumes circulated, 142,249, exceeds by 17,543 the circulation of 1928-1929, until now our busiest year.

During the months of July and August the interior of the library has been completely renovated. We were obliged to close for two whole days and for several mornings while this was going on, and the children's department was closed for nearly two weeks. The walls and woodwork have been painted and refinished, new linoleum covers the entire floor; the many windows have been fitted with new shades, new desks and chairs have taken the place of the very old and unsuitable ones in the librarian's office and a new electric clock adorns the west wall. All these changes were much needed and have made such a decided improvement that it is noted by all patrons of the library with much pleasure.

The number of users' cards has increased to such an extent that a new system has been installed to take care of them, which has met with great success. As all our cards are kept in the library, a special desk had to be built to do this which has worked out so well as to be of interest to other libraries.

The most urgent need of the library is more shelf room. With the addition of new books and bound magazines we have reached the point where it may almost be said that there is no room for more. Many towns have beautiful library buildings, but a very small collection of books. Our collection is a very large and fine one for a town of this size, but the need of more space grows more noticeable every year.

According to the report of Treasurer Frederic H. Cranston, the library expenses were $16,548.39, and its principal source of income is an appropriation of $6,500 from the town and $8,494.76 from invested funds.

DEMOCRATS NAME FITZGERALD TO RUN FOR SENATOR

The 19th senatorial democratic convention held Saturday morning in the town hall selected as the democratic candidate for state senator, William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the city's recreation commission for the last eight years. The district includes Norwich, Ledyard and Preston. Mr. Fitzgerald will run in opposition to Charles W. Cassidy, the republican nominee, in the election next month. State Central Committeeman T. J. Kelly called the convention to order, at 10:45 o'clock and former Mayor Milo R. Waters was chosen chairman and Andrew J. Bovens was the convention clerk. Mr. Fitzgerald was nominated by Thomas F. Beckley of this city.

In making the nomination Mr. Beckley referred to Mr. Fitzgerald's achievements in his many lines of public endeavor especially as head of the city's recreation commission. Oscar Silverman seconded the nomination, which was unanimous. Mr. Fitzgerald, as he was escorted to the platform, was loudly applauded. After thanking the delegates for the nomination, Mr. Fitzgerald stated that, if successful in the election, he will uphold the planks and platform of the party. He promised to work for the expansion of facilities at the tuberculosis sanatoria in the state, to support the dirt road programme and the old age pension bill. With reference to the old age pension fund he said that Connecticut will have it, if the democrats are elected. Mentioning some of the democratic candidates Mr. Fitzgerald said that the democratic state ticket is well balanced. Mr. Fitzgerald was roundly applauded at the close of his remarks.

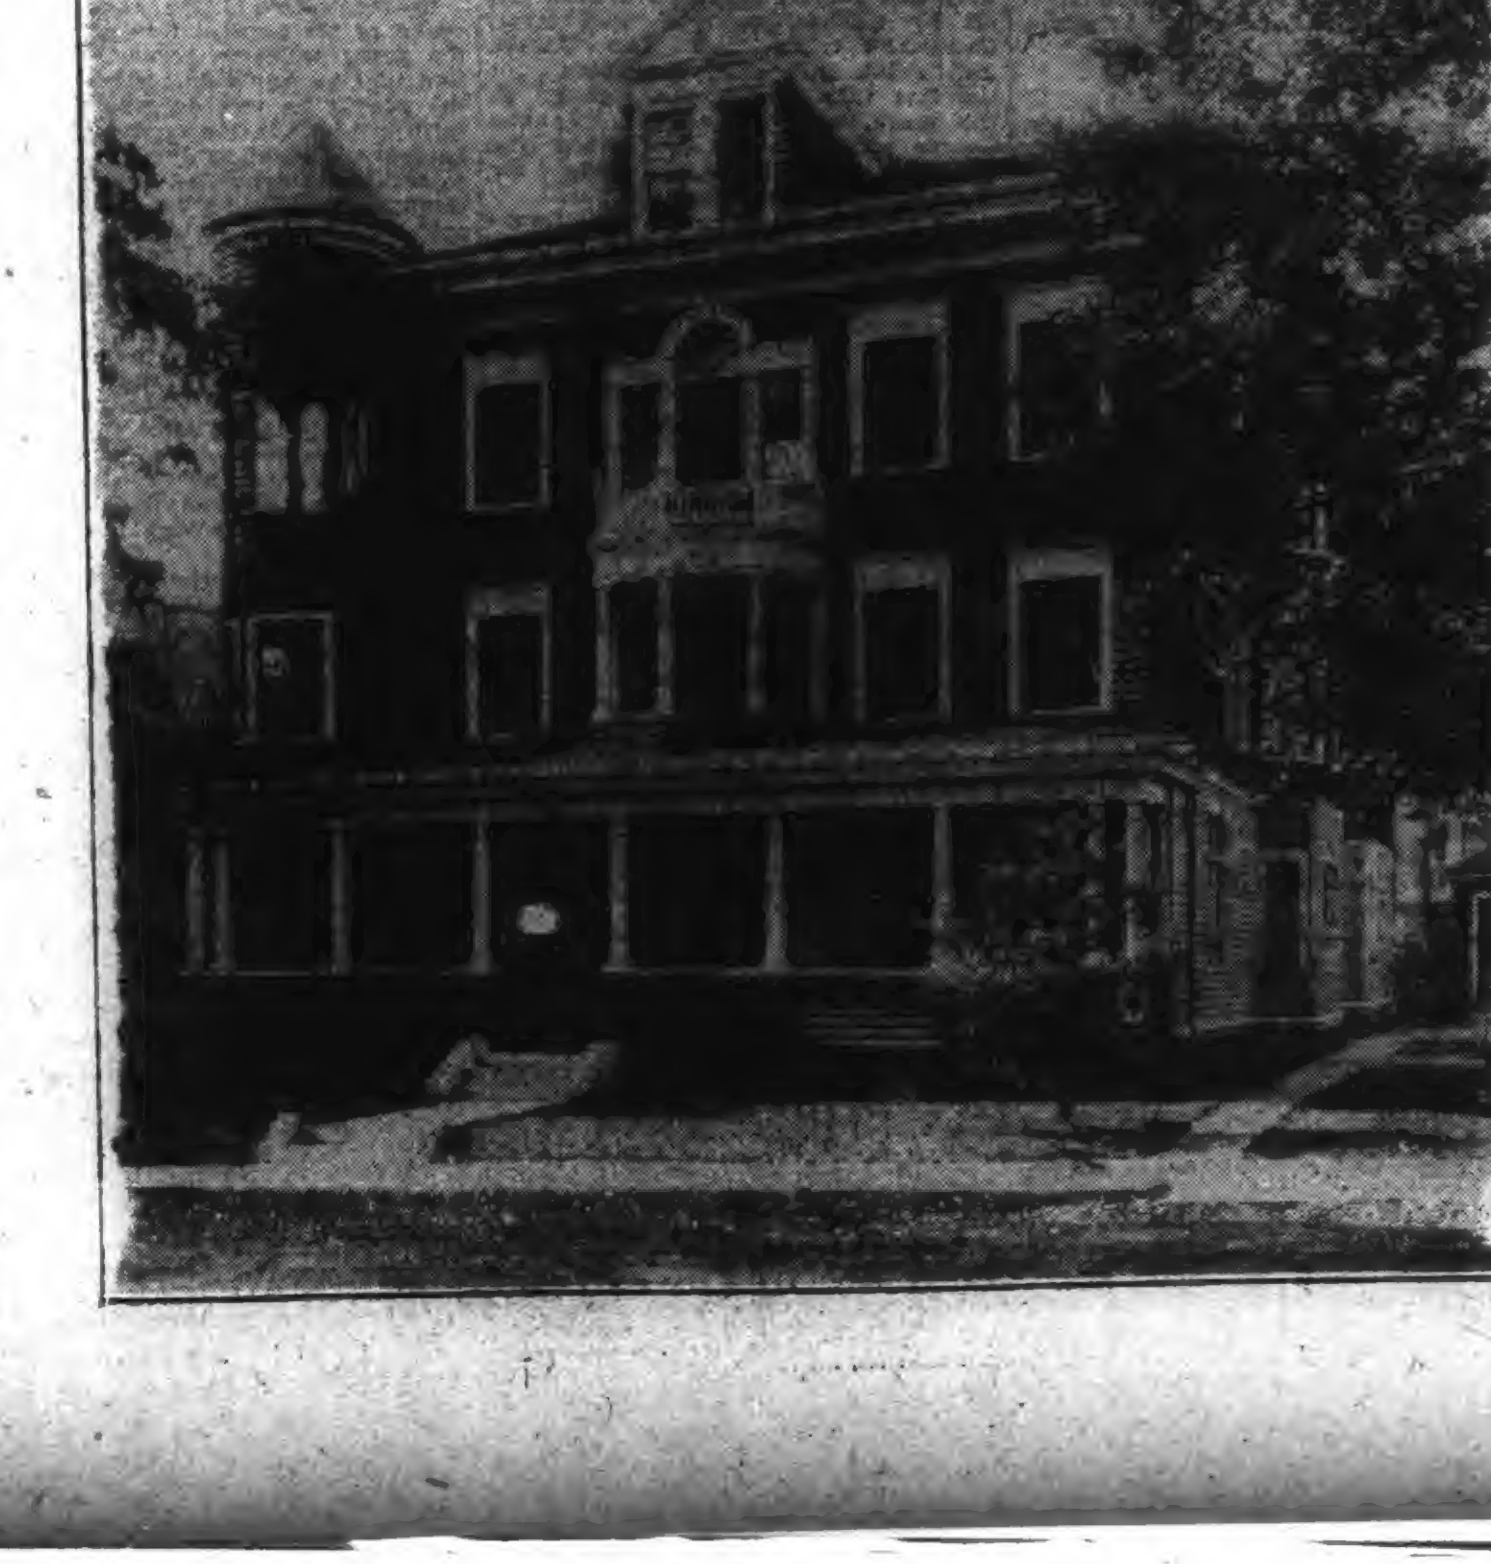
THE HUNTINGTON, 170 BROADWAY, REMODELED BY D. T. SHEA



STARTING SEASON FOR THE GIRLS' CITY CLUB

The Girls' City club, under the auspices of the Woman's City club, started its fall and winter activities with a largely attended meeting last Friday evening at their club room at 9 Washington street. Several members of the girls' work committee of the Woman's City club were present, including the new chairman of the committee, Miss Constance Raymond, who was introduced to the girls, most of whom were already acquainted with her. Miss Raymond spoke interestingly to the girls along the lines of club work and following her talk, Mrs. W. B. McKean, the club director, spoke to the girls about the three things that the club stands for, viz., friendships promoted through contacts with other club members; the friendly spirit which would necessarily be the result of friendships between all the members of the club and true sportsmanship. Reference was made to the strong support the club is receiving from the Woman's City club which in turn is proud of the progress that the Girls' City club is making. Grateful appreciation was expressed to the United Workers for the use of one of their rooms for a club room for the girls. The committee and director in charge of the girls work hope that some day their fondest dreams may be realized — that a building may be secured to house the club so they may broaden their programme and carry on their activities more effectively and reach a larger number of girls. This year, the club will meet twice a week — Tuesdays and Fridays from 7:30 to 9:30. At the Tuesday night meetings, classes in several of the industrial arts will be conducted and two of these classes will start next Tuesday evening—one in dramatics and one in sewing. The Friday night meetings will be chiefly for recreational and social purposes. Plans for a Halloween party are already under way and on the first Friday night in December, election of officers for the following year will take place. The committee and director will be happy to welcome any girls, 15 years of age and over, to membership in the club.

UNUSUAL COURSE OFFERED IN BOY LEADERSHIP

Adult leaders of boy's work in Norwich are offered an unusual opportunity to enroll in a course training for leadership of boys. The course is offered by the Eastern Connecticut Council, Boy Scouts of America, beginning Wednesday night, October 8, at 7.15. The course will include 12 two-hour sessions and at its inception will be held each two weeks subject to the wishes of those who enroll. The opening meeting will be held in the Thayer building in room 215.

The addresses and discussions will be led by men of exceptionable experience in boy's work. The opening lectures and discussion will be led by Scout Executive Fred Hill of Hartford, assisted by Field Scout Arthur Adams. They will discuss "The Nature of the Boy," and "A Scout Program Which Meets the Boys' Needs". The second session of the course will be conducted by O. H. Benson, director of rural scouting of the entire United States and founder of the 4-H clubs. The third session of the course will be conducted by J. Harold Williams, scout executive of the Greater Providence council, author of many boys' plays and stunts. Other notable men will be secured for the course.

This course will include a study of the nature of boys and their activity urges and a review of the aims and methods of education, with their application to the scouting program. Scout leaders in this course will examine the processes of habit formation and the aims and outcomes of scouting education. They will also study the principles of program building and the methods of troop administration and will review and discuss problems of program administration in their own troops and other troops which they will visit during the course.

Troop and patrol organization will be maintained throughout the course. Each session will include a formal opening period followed by a lecture and seminar period of one hour, a morale period followed by another lecture period. Adjournment of each session will be automatic at 9.30 p. m. Reference for the first lecture will include pages 263-292 the Scoutmasters' Handbook and the pamphlet, "The Heart of a Boy." A complete library of all scout literature can be found at the Otis library for reading and reference work.

The training committee sponsoring the course is composed of C. B. Gilbert chairman, Joseph P. Cummings, Herman Stelzner, Josiah Greenstein, and H. E. Robbins. This committee held its first season meeting Friday evening and laid plans to enroll as many men as possible in the course. A questionnaire calling attention to the course has been sent to churches and schools throughout this district. Church, school, and organization heads have been urged to encourage their boy leadership to attend the course. Enrollment blanks and further information regarding the course are obtainable at the local Boy Scout headquarters at Room 304, Thayer building.

RE-MODELS HIS APARTMENT HOUSE ON BROADWAY

One of the well known apartment houses of the city, The Huntington, at 170 Broadway, has just been completely remodeled by its owner, D. T. Shea, so that it now contains eight fine five-room apartments which are designed and furnished to meet modern requirements. The building is of four stories and was originally built for three families, having nine rooms on each floor. In 1920 the fourth floor was made over into two five room apartments and the three lower floors have now been re-arranged to contain two apartments on each floor.

All apartments have polished oak floors and modern open work plumbing, with brass piping and white enamel bathroom fixtures. The interior walls throughout have been treated with a new and attractive material that provides softly blending colors and charm to every room. The woodwork has received three coats of pearl paint and enamel and the stairs are of solid oak of beautiful design and finish. Steam heat and hot water are supplied through an oil burner which has clock thermosat control and each apartment has an electrical refrigerator purchased from the city gas and electrical department. George E. Boucher had the general contract for mason and woodwork.

STORRS HENS AVERAGING OVER 199 IN CONTEST

Just three laps to go and the Storrs laying trials design to coax hens into laying the maximum number of eggs. The forty-eighth week concluded with a total of 2,905 eggs or a yield of 41.5 per cent.

The average yield for each of the 1,000 birds since the contest started last November is now better than 199 eggs per bird. If these hens can manage six eggs each during the coming three weeks they will have equalled the best previous record and anything over and above will be another high mark at which hens in subsequent contests can aim.

Both the birds in the 300 egg club are Barred Rocks. Pullet No. 24 bred and owned by James Dryden of Modesto, Cal., ranks first with the score of 309 eggs. Pullet No. 147 entered by R. C. Cobb of Littleton, Mass., is the second and only other bird that has thus far qualified. Her record totals 305 eggs.

During the past week R. C. Cobb's pen of Barred Rocks outlayed all other pens with a yield of 57 eggs. Edward N. Larrabee's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Peterboro, N. H., was second in line with a total of 53 eggs.

James Dryden's pen of Barred Rocks, Homestead farms pen of Reds from Newtown, Conn., and Cloverdale Poultry farms pen of Leghorns from Cortland, N. Y., all tied for third place with 51 eggs each. Fisher Poultry farms pen of Wyandottes from Ayton, Ontario, was in fourth position with a tally of 49 eggs.

The leading pens to date in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes— The Locusts, West Cornwall, Conn., 2295; Jack Wrennal, Barton, Near Preston, Eng., 2126.

Barred Rocks—R. C. Cobb, Littleton, Mass., 2503; Pratt Experiment farm, Morton, Pa., 2413; James Dryden, Modesto, Cal., 2264.

White Rocks—E. H. Rucker, Ottumwa, Iowa, 2140; Adam F. Polti, Hartford, Wis., 1902; Davidson Bros., Upton, Mass., 1860.

Rhode Island Reds—Edward N. Larrabee, Peterboro, N. H., 2654; Homestead farms, Newtown, Conn., 2454; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2,452; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2369.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Light frosts have appeared during the week but very little produce is left in the farmers' gardens and much less damage reported than in other sections of the state.

Light supplies on the morning's market and some of the products which were firmer and higher were lima beans, fancy snap beans, cucumbers, tomatoes and cabbage. Evergreen corn of good quality is still available in a small way and a few native hothouse cucumbers were noted. Potatoes continued to hold steady. Price quotations for most cities of the state remained unchanged, while large terminal markets of the east reported a little price advance and a firmer tone.

Very liberal supplies of MacIntosh apples in a wide range in price and quality and demand very moderate.

HAINES PITCHES BRILLIANT GAME TO BRING CARDS TO EVEN TERMS WITH ATHLETICS IN THE SERIES

Veteran Hurler Outpitches Lefty Grove to Win 3 to 1—Gelbert, playing in His First Series, is Star of St. Louis Team—Dykes' Error in Fourth Proves to Be Very Costly For Athletics—Earnshaw and Grimes Oppose Each Other Today

By ALAN J. GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Oct. 5—(AP)—The Red Birds, in the full flight of one of the greatest of world's series come-backs, flew up to even terms today with the Athletics, deadlocking the baseball battle at two games each.

They swooped down on the great Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove and beat the famous southpaw, 3 to 1, while his defense crumbled about him, and his heavy artillery was effectively spiked after the first inning by 37-year-old Jesse Joseph Haines in a highly dramatic battle, the fourth game of the series.

With the roaring echo of a home town crowd of 39,946 fans reverberating the veteran right hander of the Cardinals surpassed even the brilliant southpawing of Bill Hallahan, hero of yesterday's St. Louis victory.

Haines Celebrates

Haines held the slugging Mackmen to four singles and although a trifle wild at times, he allowed only one safe blow in the last eight innings as he celebrated the fourth anniversary of his shutout against the New York Yankees here on Oct. 5, 1926.

Four years ago to the day and hour, time and place, Haines not only blanked the Yankees but contributed a home run to the victory that put the Cardinals in the lead and enabled them later to overcome the New Yorkers in the last world's series triumph scored by the forces of the National league.

Today, the big Phillipsburg, Ohio, right-hander, classed among baseball's pitching ancients, not only baffled the heavy hitters of the world's champions, but lashed his rival, Grove, for a hit that tied the score and spurred his teammates to continue their attack decisively on the fire-ball southpaw in the fourth inning.

Dykes Error Costly

A fatal wild throw by Jimmy Dykes, the usually reliable third sacker of the Athletics, enabled the Cardinals to score what proved to be the winning run in the fourth inning, the last in which the Red Birds were able to do anything with Grove.

Two were out and Chick Hafey, the bespectacled Card left fielder, was on second as the result of a ground-rule double into the right field bleacher screen, when Dykes took a smash from Ray Blades' bat, passed up a chance to tag out Hafey on the base line, near third and then threw wildly to Jimmy Foxx for an attempted third putout at first. Dykes, for some unaccountable reason, stepped around Hafey to take the chance on a throw-out but the toss was so wide that it got away from Foxx. Hafey was across the plate by the time Foxx got the ball to Cochrane.

Two subsequent scratch hits, a Texas leaguer to right by Wilson and a single off Grove's glove by Gelbert, accounted for the third Cardinal run but it proved just that much margin of safety. The damage to the cause of the A's had been done and not even the hitless pitching of Grove for the last four innings could do anything about it.

For the second successive day, the maulers of the House of Mack were held in check except for Al Simmons, who drove in their only run in the first inning and collected two of the four hits collected off the fast and baffling delivery of Haines.

Series Now Deadlocked

As a result, the series that started out like a rout for the Athletics, now has become a free-for-all, with the Cardinals on the crest of the wave and played the kind of dashing, effective baseball that swept them to their sensational pennant victory by winning the third and fourth games behind the brilliant box work of Hallahan and Haines.

After dropping the first two decisions to Grove and Earnshaw, the Cardinals duplicated the achievement of the Giants in pulling up to square the count at 2-all with the White Sox in 1917. The Giants lost that series, by dropping the next two games, and the history of the championship lists no club as the ultimate victor after losing the first two contests in a seven-game series but these Cardinals were confident tonight they will be the first to turn the trick, and create a new record.

Earnshaw and Grimes Today

If they can continue their winning streak and turn the tables tomorrow on their other conqueror, George Earnshaw, in the fifth game, with Burleigh Grimes back in the box, the Red Birds will be on the high-road to victory.

No matter what happens tomorrow the rivals must go back to Philadelphia to settle the issue. After the fifth game here tomorrow they will depart for the east and resume the fight at Shibe park in the sixth game on Wednesday, the seventh, if needed, to be played there Thursday.

Not since the 1926 triumph of the Cardinals has the championship gone the limit nor since then has any other club of the National league been able to gain the satisfaction that the Birds enjoyed tonight by being on even terms with their rivals. As a matter of fact, the Cards by winning two straight, have doubled the winning total of all the National league contenders combined in the previous three years. The lone Cub victory of 1929 was all that the senior circuit has to cheer about in a string of thirteen straight world's series contests.

It was a great day today therefore, as the fighting Cardinals under the direction of Manager Gabby Street performed what was believed next to the impossible—beat Grove. That is, it had been considered next to impossible by nearly all but the Red Birds, who justified their boast, made after the opening game, in which they hit the southpaw star harder than they did today.

The blow was all the greater to the A's for the "breaks" went against them today, perhaps to balance the fashion in which they favored the Mackmen in the opening game last Wednesday.

Grove allowed only five hits, all bunched in the third and fourth innings, but in these critical frames his usually brilliant support failed him. The first Cardinal run was earned on two clean hits, but the first of them, a triple to the extreme corner of right field by Charley Gelbert, sensational short stop, might have been held at least to a double by better handling on the part of Bing Miller. Gelbert's drive went down the foul line, past Foxx and caromed off the corner walls like a three-cushion billiard shot as it eluded the lunging grasp of Miller.

Similar blows, less hard hit, have been held to singles in this park but before Miller ran the ball to earth, Gelbert was on third. In the pinch, Haines, who has something of a reputation as a hitter, bounced a single sharply through the box, and into center field, scoring Gelbert.

But for Dykes' error, in the fourth, the Cardinals would have been without scoring and the 1-1 deadlock fought out through extra innings to a decision. As it was, the Red Birds "cashed in" while they had the chance and then gave Haines spectacular support in checking the Athletics for the rest of the game.

Gelbert is Star

Gelbert, busy afield as well as at bat, as he continued his great all-around work, scooped up everything in sight around short stop. His running pickup and throw-out of Simmons' slow roller in front of second base in the eighth inning was one of the fielding gems of the game, sharing the defensive spotlight with a sensational running, backward catch by Max Bishop of Douthit's pop fly into short right in the seventh inning.

The only time Haines' support wobbled was in the second inning, when Frankie Frisch fumbled Grove's hard-hit grounder, but with two on bases Haines bore down and retired Dykes on an infield play for the third out.

Haines Brilliant After Shaky Start

Haines himself was shaky at the outset. He was greeted in the first inning by Bishop's fourth hit in two days, and the A's second sacker scored on Dykes' sacrifice, a wild pitch, and Simmons' single to right. Foxx scratched the third hit of the inning, on a blow that Frisch juggled, but it was wasted.

Simmons' second straight hit of the game and fourth straight in two games, a single in the third, was the only remaining safe blow off the delivery of Haines, who mixed a change of pace with the fast ball and curve, with excellent results. Big Jesse was wild at times, passing the first man up in the seventh and eighth but he was always able to regain control of the situation and keep the A's popping up high flies.

In the last three innings only three Mackmen got to first base, all on passes and only one of these, Simmons in the sixth, got so far as second base.

Foxx and Miller had several chances to do some pinch hitting, but the closest they came was when the first sacker, with Simmons on, crashed a long, high drive that started out looking like a home run, but sliced a few feet foul into the upper right field deck of the grand stand.

It looked like questionable strategy on the part of Mack in the seventh when he failed to rush in a force of pinch hitters for the weak-end of the batting order, after Haas opened with a walk. The A's pilot reconsidered an intention to replace Grove at bat after Boley popped out to Frisch. The pitcher then fanned and Bishop's long drive, which backed Blades up against the right field stands, ended the inning.

Grove retired the Cardinal side in order in five of their eight innings, but he did not have as much deception on his fast one as most of the experts expected him to show on a dark, cloudy afternoon, considered ideal for his speedy delivery. The southpaw fanned only three men, Douthit, Adams and Bottomley once each, considerably below average for the strike out king of the major leagues.

MALONE PITCHES CUBS TO WIN IN CITY SERIES

CHICAGO, Oct. 5—(AP)—Pat Malone outlasted Ted Lyons and four other White Sox pitchers today to give the Cubs a 6 to 4 victory in the fifth game of the city series and a one-game edge in the set.

The prospect of seeing Malone and Lyons stage another duel attracted a record series attendance of 45,101 spectators who paid $52,082.50. Lyons was batted out of the box in the fifth inning, and was replaced by Braxton, Moore, Henry and Faber in turn.

Malone was wild and was in difficulty most of the way, but he improved toward the finish, and in the last three innings fanned five men. He permitted 12 hits, three of which were made by Smead Jolley, and walked one.

Malone's most serious loss of control came in the sixth inning during a White Sox rally when he cut loose with a fast ball striking Johnny Watwood, Sox centerfielder, on the head and knocking him unconscious. Watwood was carried from the field after receiving emergency attention. He was reported to have been only slightly injured, but probably will not be able to play tomorrow.

The Cubs got to Lyons in the first inning when two doubles and a pair of singles produced two runs. They picked up another in the second and went into the fifth with a 3 to 0 lead. The Sox rallied for two runs, but Rogers Hornsby's team blasted Lyons out in their half of the inning.

The feature blow of the fifth was Hack Wilson's first homer of the series, with Cuyler on ahead of him. The Sox got their last pair in the sixth, and were almost helpless thereafter. Cuyler got a double and two singles, while Hartnett kicked in with a brace of doubles and a single.

The sixth game will be played tomorrow at Comiskey park, the White Sox battleground.
